LETTERS

FROM

A Gentleman in the North of Scotland

TO

His FRIEND in London.

CONTAINTNG

The Description of a Capital Town in that Northern Country;

WITH'

An Account of some uncommon Customs of the Inhabitants:

LIKEWISE

An Account of the HIGHLANDS, with the Customs and Manners of the HIGHLANDERS.

To which is added,

A LETTER relating to the MILITARY WAYS among the Mountains, began in the Year 1726.

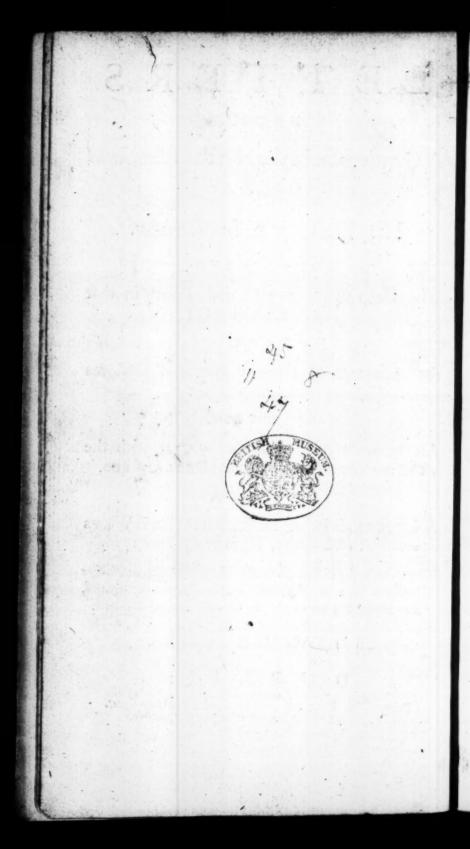

The whole interspers'd with Facts and Circumstances intirely New to the Generality of People in England, and little known in the Southern Parts of Scotland.

In TWO VOLUMES.

DUBLIN:

Printed for PETER WILSON, in Dame-freet.

MDCCLV.

THE ## EDITOR

TO THE

READER.

Am apt to imagine you may be curious to know by what Means the following Letters came to my Hands, after the Space of between twenty and thirty Years.

THE Gentleman in whose Possession they were, died some Time ago, and through Losses, unsuccessful Law-Suits, and other Disappointments, lest his Family in none of the best of Circumstances; and, therefore, you will believe I could obtain them no otherwise than by a mineral Interest.

THE Person who writ them, has not set his Name to any one of them, and, it is very probable, he made Use of that Caution for Reasons given in his introductory Letter; but this is not very material, because, if I had known the Name, in all Likelihood I might have thought myself under an Obligation to conceal it.

I CANNOT but think the Writer has kept this Promise he made his Friend, of Writing without Prejudice or Partiality; and this I the rather believe, because, at my first Perusal of these Letters, I met with several Facts and Descriptions, pretty nearly resembling others I had heard from Officers of the Army, and Revenue, who had been in that Part of the Country; but their Stories would have been the same, or very near it, if they had been free from the ludicrous and satirical Manner in which they were delivered.

ILL-NATURE will excite in its unhappy Vassals, a malignant Satisfaction to find the Truth, (especially relating to Mankind) disguised in an antick Dress; and there is nothing more easy than to furnish out the Masquerade with ridiculous outward Appearances. But neither of our Correspondents seems to have been inclined that Way; for if the Person to whom these Epistles were addressed, had been of that Trempe,

all

elf

nas

of

у;

at et ty

m ho

ut

le,

m

Dy

he

d) is

ne

p-

n-

at

ſe

at

e,

Trempe, there is no Doubt but the Writer, who took so much Pains for his Information, would likewise have gratified him in that Particular.

In must be owned, there are some sew Strokes that savour a little of the Satirical, but they are very sew, yet just enough to shew, that, if Inclination had prompted, Humour would not have been wanting; and even those sew are only relating to such Vices and Vanities as might easily be reformed; and, as they are now made publick, they may serve as Admonitions to such as apply them to themselves.

WHAT shameful Portraits have been drawn for a Highlander! I shall only mention one, and that is, in the True-born Englishman.

His Description is much more shocking than entertaining to any one who has the least Humanity. But the Owner of a chaste Mind might have been well pleased to see the unknown Face divested of the odious Vizor.

It may be faid — That Poem is a profest Satyr, but I even deny it to be one; for a true Satyrist is too delicate to Lash with a Flail.

THERE be some who have made a Reproach of unavoidable Poverty, and of Customs and Methods of acting, which, (I now find) according to the Nature of the Country, and Circumstances of the Inhabitants, could not be changed for others to be more reasonable and commodious. But, far otherwise, the Writer of these Letters. He seems to have catched at all Opportunities for Excuse, and even Commendation, and has not spared his own Country, or Countrymen, when the one deserved his Animadversion, or the other required an Acknowledgment; so far has he been from invidious Comparisons.

I MUST own he has likewise kept his as Word in observing little Order or Method, so for it plainly appears he took no Pains about pareither: But then that very Neglect has been the Cause of more sudden Variety, (to the use his Correspondent's Phrase) and the little ittle Stories that are scattered here and pro-there, (I think not much known in England) one; ferve now and then to break, as the Painter Last ays, a too-long-continued Line of Descripion.

Re- I SHALL fay no more in Relation to his Cuf-Stile, than that a Nicety is feldom much , (I regarded in familiar Epistles from Friend the to Friend, especially in long Relations of nabi-Facts, or other Narrations; besides, he says rs to himself, it would have taken up too much But, of his Time to fmooth his Periods; and tters we all know that Words and Phrases will ortu-not dance into elegant Order at the Sound tion, of a Fiddle.

or or

little

his IT may possibly be said, by some of the d an Northern People, that the Writer has borne from too hard upon a Part of the then Inhabiants of Inverness. Of that I cannot pretend to make myself a Judge, only that, t his as a Reader, it does not feem to me to be thod, to by the Tenor of his other Letters, and about particularly by his Appeal to the Officers has of the Army who had been in those Quary, (to ters; and furely this he would not have the done (when he might have been so easily disproyed) if the was conscious of Untruths, and had the least Regard to his Friends Opinion of his Veracity.

To conclude: If the Facts, Circumstances, and Descriptions, contained in the following Letters, are allowed to be just and genuine (as I really believe they are) may they not be given in Evidence, against such as are fond of shewing the Wantonness of Invention and Drollery, upon Objects altogether improper for that Purpose? and might not any one reasonably conclude, that fuch Jokers believe all Mankind to be ridiculous, who have not an Affluence of Fortune, or that entertain a Garb, or Cuftoms different from their own, and were not born in the same Parish? And, if so, I think they themselves are the fittest Subjects of Ridicule.

I am,

The impartial Reader's

Obedient bumble Servant,

The EDITOR

(

1

Ċ

LETTER I.

Inverness.

N the Course of Evidence, or other Examination, one slight accidental Hint may be the Cause of a long and intricate Enquiry; and thus the bare Mention I lately made of a sew Notes I had taken, relating to these Parts and to the Highlands, will be the Occasion of some Employment for me; but I am far from making a Merit of any Trouble I can take to gratify your Curiosity; and more especially in This; for to tell you the Truth, I have at present little else to do; my only Fear is, my Endeavour will not answer your Expectation.

Our Friendship is as old as our Acquaintance, which you know is of no inconsiderable Standing, and complimental Speeches between us were, by Consent, banished from the Beginning, as being unsuitable to that Sincerity which a strict Friendship requires. But I may say, with great Truth, there is but one other in the World could prevail with me to communicate, in Writing, such Circumstances as I perfectly foresee will make up gre

nt,

nay

altoand

ude,

o be

e of

Cuf-

were

fo, I

Sub-

O R.

great Part of this Correspondence; and therefore I must stipulate, even with you, that none of my future Letters, on this Subject, may be shewn to any other than our common Friend—— in whom you know we can conside.

I HAVE several Reasons for this Precaution, which I make no doubt you will approve.

FIRST, The contrary might create Inconveniencies to me in my prefent Situation.

IT might furnish Matter for disobliging Comparisons, to which some of our Countrymen are but too much addicted.

This again might give Offence especially to fuch who are so National as not to consider, that a Man's Native Country is not of his own making, or his being born in it the Effect of his Choice.

And lastly, It would do me no great Honour to be known to have made a Collection of Incidents, mostly low, and sometimes disagreeable. Yet even in this I have a common Observation on my Side, which is; That the genuine Character of any particular Person may be best discovered, when he appears in his domestick Capacity; when he is free from all Restraint by Fear of foreign Observation and Censure; and, by a Parity of Reason, the Genius of a whole People may be better known by their Actions and Inclinations in their Native Country, than it can be from Remarks made upon any Numbers of them, when they are dispersed in other Parts of the World.

In Publicke all Mankind act more or less in Difguise.

IF I were to confine myself to the Customs of the Country, and the Manners of the People; I think it would need but little Apology to the most National; for the several Members of every Community think themselves sufficiently furnished with Arguments, ore

ny

om

on,

ni-

pa-

but

to

hat ng,

r to

nts, Yet

my of hen

ne is fon,

own

pon d in s in

as of

e; I

most Com-

with

ents,

Arguments, whereby to justify the general Conduct: But in speaking of the Country, I have met with some, who, in hearing the most modest Description of any Part of it, have been suddenly acted upon by an unruly Passion, complicated of Jealousy, Pity, and Anger: This, I have often compared in my Mind, to the Yearnings of a fond Mother for a misshapen Child, when she thinks any one too prying into its Desormity.

Ir I shall take Notice of any thing amis, either here or in the Mountains, which they know to be wrong, and it is in their Power to amend; I shall apply, in my own Justification, what is said by Spencer upon a like Occasion.

"The best (said he) that I can you advise, "Is to avoid the Occasion of the Ill:

" For, when the Cause whence Evil doth arise "Removed is, the Effect surceaseth Still.

THE Highlands are but little known even to the Inhabitants of the low Country of Scotland, for they have ever dreaded the Difficulties and Dangers of Travelling among the Mountains; and when fome extraordinary Occasion has obliged any one of them to such a Progress, he has, generally speaking, made his Testament before he set out, as though he were entring upon a long and dangerous Sea Voyage, wherein it was very doubtful if he should ever return.

But to the People of England, excepting some few, and those chiefly the Soldiery, the Highlands are hardly known at all; for there has been less, that I know of, written upon the Subject, than of either of the Indies; and even that little which has been said, conveys no Idea of what a Traveller almost continually sees and meets with in passing among the Mountains; nor does it communicate any Notion of the Temper of the Natives, while they remain in their own Country.

THE verbal Misrepresentations that have been made of the Lowlands are very extraordinary; and though good Part of it be greatly superior in the Quality of the Soil to the North of England, and in some Parts equal to the best of the South, yet there are some among our Countrymen who are: fo prejudiced, that they will not allow for not own) there is any thing Good on this Side the Tweed. On the other hand, some flattering Accounts that have been published, what with Commendation, and what with Concealment, might induce a Stranger to both Parts of the Island, to conclude, that Scotland in general is the better Country of the two; and I wish it were so (as we are become one People) for the Benefit of the whole.

ABOUT a Week ago, I borrowed a Book called A Journey through Scotland, published in the Year 1723, and having dipped into it in many Places, I think it might, with more Propriety, be called, A Journey to the Heralds Office, and the Seats of the Nobility and Gentry of North-Britain.

HE calls almost all their Houses Palaces. He makes no less than Five in one Street, Part of the Suburbs of Edinburgh, besides the real Palace of Holyrood-House: But if you were to see them with that pompous Title, you would be surprized, though you would think some of them good Houses when mention'd with Modesty.

BUT I think every one of the Five would greatly fuffer by the Comparison, if they stood near Marlborough House in St. James's Park, and yet no body ever thought of erecting that Building into a Palace.

IT

It would be contrary to my Inclination, and even ridiculous to deny, that there is a great Number of noble and spacious old Seats in Scotland, besides those that were Kings Palaces, of both which some are built in a better Taste than most of the old Seats in England that I have seen: These I am told were built after the Models of Sir William Bruce, who was their Inigo Jones; but many of them are now in a ruinous Condition. And it must be confessed there are some very stately modern Buildings, but our itinerant Author gives such magnificent Descriptions of some of his Palaces, as carry with them nothing but Disappointment to the Eye of the travelling Spectator.

· He labours the Plantations about the Country Seats so much, that he shews thereby what a Rarity Trees are in Scotland; and, indeed it has been often remarked, that here are but sew Birds except such as build their Nests upon the Ground, so scarce are Hedges and Trees.

e

e'

n:

n

d

et

e:

t

e

-

1-

it

0

7

e

le

d ır

S,

d,

be

Ie.

ne

of

th

d, es

rl-

dy

IT

THE Post-House at Haddington, a wretched Inn, by Comparison, he says, is inferior to none on the London Road.

In this Town he says there are Coffee Houses and Taverns as in England; who would not thence infer, there are spacious Rooms, many Waiters, plentiful Larders, &c.? And as to the only Coffee-Room we have, I shall say something of it in its proper Place.

But the Writer is held greatly in Esteem, by the People here, for calling this the pretty Town of Inverness. How often have I heard those Words quoted with Pleafure!

HERE I am about to premise something in relation to the Sheets which are to follow: And first, I intend to send you one of these Letters every Fortnight, and oftner is I find it convenient, till I have, as I may fay, writ myself quite out. In doing this I shall not confine myself to Order or Method, but take my Paragraphs just as they come to Hand, except where one Fact or Observation naturally arises from another. Nor shall I be solicitous about the Elegancy of Stile, but content myself with an Endeavour only to be understood; for both or either of those Niceties would deprive me of some other Amusements, and that, I am sure, you do not expect, or would you suffer it if you could help it.

B 3

THERE will be little faid that can be applicable to Scotland in general: but if any thing of that Nature should occur, I shall note it to be so.

ALL Parts of the Highlands are not exactly alike, either in the Height of the Country, or the Cuftoms and Manners of the Natives, of whom some are more civilized than others.

NOTHING will be fet down but what I have personally known, or received from such whose Information I had no Reason to suspect, and all without Prejudice or Partiality. And lastly, I shall be very sparing of the Names of Particular Persons, (especially when no Honour can be dispensed by the Mention of them,) not only as they are unknown to you, but, to tell you the Truth, in Prudence to myself; for, as our Letters are carried to Edinburgh the Hill-way, by a Foot Post, there is one who makes no Scruple to intrude, by Means of his Emissaries, into the Affairs and Sentiments of others, especially if he fancies there is any thing relating to himself; so jealous and inquisitive is Guilt. And therefore I shall neglect no Opportunity of fending them to Edinburgh by private Hands. But if you should be curious, at any Time, to know the Name of some particular Person; in that

Cafe,

Case, a Hint, and the Date of my Letter, will enable me to give you that Satisfaction.

rrs

ut

d, lly

ut

an

OF

ne

do

ıld

ole

ifne

ve nhbe

ns, by nu-

to

ins

nts ng

15 tu-

ds.

to

fe,

But I must add, that the frequent Egotisms which I foresee I shall be obliged to use in Passages merely relating to myself, incline me to wish that our Language would sometimes (like the French) admit of the third Person, only to vary the eternal (I.)

This is all I have to fay by way of Preface; what Apologies I may have Occasion to make in my Progress, I do not know, but I promise, that as they are dry, so shall they be as few as possible.

LETTER II.

A BOUT a Twelvemonth after I first came to this Town, and had been twice to Edinburgh by the Way of the Hills, I received a Letter from an old Acquaintance, desiring me to give him an Account of my first Journey hither, the same to commence from the Borders of Scotland.

I COULD not, you may imagine, conceive the Meaning of a Request so extraordinary, but however I complied implicitly. Sometime afterwards, by a Letter of Thanks, I was given to understand, it was an Expedient, agreed upon between him and another, whereby to decide a Dispute.

Now all this Preface is only to introduce my Request to you, that you will absolve me from the Promise I made you last Week, and in lieu of what you might demand, accept of a Copy of that Letter.

I SHOULD not have waved my promised Defign, but for an Affair which something related to myself, and required my Attention, and therefore I could not find Time to tack together so many Memorandums, as such Letters, as I intend to send you, require; for if they are not pretty long, I shall be self-condemned, since you know I used to say, by Way of Complaint against—That Letters from one Friend to another should be of a Length proportioned to the Distance between them.

AFTER some Compliments, my Letter was as follows.

Account with the Entertainment I met with after passing the Tweed at Kelso, but shall not trouble you with the Exaction and intolerable Insolence of the Ferry-men, because I think you can match their Impudence at our own Horse-ferry: I shall only say, that I could obtain no Redress, although I complained of them to the principal Magistrate of the Town.

HAVING done with them, my Horses were led to the Stable, and myself conducted up one Pair of Stairs, where I was soon attended by a handsome genteel Man, well dressed, who gave me a kindly Welcome to the House.

This induced me to ask him what I could have to eat; to which he civilly answered, The good Wife will be careful nothing shall be wanting, but that he never concerned himself about any Thing relating to the Publick (as he called it) that is, he would have me know he was a Gentleman, and did not employ himself in any thing so low as Attendance, but left it to his Wife. Thus he took his Leave of me, and soon after came up my Landlady, whose Dress and Appearance seemed to me so unfit

for

for the Wife of that Gentleman, that I could hardly believe she was any other than a Servant; but she soon took Care, in her Turn, by some Airs she gave herself, to let me know she was Mistress of the House.

I ASKED what was to be had, and she told me potted Pigeons; and nothing, I thought, could be more agreeable, as requiring no Waiting, after a fatiguing Day's Journey, in which I had eaten nothing.

THE Cloth was laid, but I was too unwilling to greafe my Fingers to touch it; and prefently after, the Pot of Pigeons was fet on the Table.

WHEN I came to examine my Cates, there were two or three of the Pigeons lay mangled in the Pot, and behind were the Furrows, in the Butter, of those Fingers that had raked them out of it, and the Butter itself needed no close Application to discover its Quality.

e-

ed

ba

e-

15, ey

d,

n-

nd

to

as

ny

ter

ble

of

ch

all

gh

of

led

of

me

dly

ave ood

but

ing

he did

en-

his

dy,

nfit

for

My Difgust at this Sight was so great, and being a brand-new Traveller in this Country, I eat a Crust of Bread, and drank about a Pint of good Claret; and although the Night was approaching, I called for my Horses, and marched off, thinking to meet with something better; but I was benighted on a rough Moor, and met with yet worse Entertainment at a little House, which was my next Quarters.

Ar my first Entrance I perceived some Things like Shadows moving about before the Fire, which was made with Peats, and going nearer to them, I could just discern, and that was all, two small Children in Motion, stark naked, and a very old Man fitting by the Fire-fide.

I soon went out under Pretence of Care for my Horses, but in Reality to relieve my Lungs and Eyes of the Smoke. At my Return, I could perceive Condition, and immediately I was seized with an Apprehension that I should be put into his Bed.

HERE I was told I might have a Breast of Mutton done upon the Brander (or Gridiron); but when it was brought me, it appeared to have been smoaked, and dried in the Chimney Corner; and it looked like the Glue that hangs up in an Ironmonger's Shop: This, you may believe, was very disgusting to the Eye; and for the Smell it had no other, that I could perceive, than that of the Butter wherewith it was greased in the Dressing; but, for my Relief, there were some new-laid Eggs, which were my Regale: And now methinks I hear one of this Country say,—a true Englishman! He is already talking of Eating.

WHEN I had been conducted to my Lodging-Room, I found the Curtains of my Bed were very foul, by being handled by the dirty Wenches; and the old Man's Fingers being present with me, I sat down by the Fire, and asked myself, for which of my Sins I was sent into this Country; but I have been something reconciled to it since then, for we have here our Pleasures and Diversions, though not in such Plenty and Variety, as you have in London.

t

h

A

ci

fo

ft

be

F

up

th

But to proceed: Being tired and sleepy, at last I came to a Resolution to see how my Bed looked within Side, and to my Joy I found exceeding good Linen, white, well aired and hardened, and I think as good as in our best Inns in England, so I flept very comfortably.

And here I must take Notice of what I have since found almost every where, but chiefly in the Low-Country, that is, good Linen; for the Spinning descends from Mother to Daughter by Succession, 'till the Stock becomes considerable, infomuch that even the ordinary People are generally much better furnished furnished in that Particular, than those of the same Rank in England—I am speaking chiefly of Sheeting and Table Linen.

THERE happened nothing extraordinary between this Place and Edinburgh, where I made no long Stay.

n

ď

-

y

0

t-

t,

S,

11

!

g-

nd

at

of

ve

we

ot

n.

aft

ed

od

I

oI

nce

Wing

on,

hat

ter

hed

WHEN I first came into the High-street of that City, I thought I had not seen any thing of the Kind more magnificent; the extreme Height of the Houses, which are, for the most Part, built with Stone, and well sashed; the Breadth and Length of the Street, and (it being dry Weather) a Cleanness made by the high Winds, I was extremely pleased to find every Thing look so unlike the Descriptions of that Town, which had been given me by some of my Countrymen.

Being a Stranger, I was invited to fup at a Tavern. The Cook was too filthy an Object to be described, only another English Gentleman whispered me, and said, he believed, if the Fellow was to be thrown against the Wall, he would stick to

it.

Twisting round and round his Hand a greafy Towel, he stood waiting to know what we would have for Supper, and mentioned several Things himself; among the rest, a Duke, a Fool, or a Meer-sool. This was near according to his Pronunciation; but he meant a Duck, a Fowl, or a Moor-fowl, or Grouft.

We supped very plentifully, and drank good French Claret, and were very merry till the Clock struck Ten, the Hour when every-body is at Liberty, by Beat of the City Drum, to throw their Filth out at the Windows. Then the Company began to light Pieces of Paper, and throw them upon the Table to smoke the Room, and, as I thought, to mix one bad Smell with another.

BEING,

Beine, in my Retreat, to pass through a long narrow Wynde or Alley, to go to my new Lodgings, a Guide was assigned me, who went before me to prevent my Disgrace, crying out all the Way, with a loud Voice, Hud your Haunde. The throwing up of a Sash, or otherwise opening a Window, made me tremble, while behind and before me, at some little Distance, fell the terrible Shower.

Well, I escaped all the Danger, and arrived, not only safe and sound, but sweet and clean, at my new Quarters; but when I was in Bed, I was forced to hide my Head between the Sheets; for the Smell of the Filth, thrown out by the Neighbours on the Back-side of the House, came pouring into the Room to such a Degree, I was almost poifoned with the Stench.

I SHALL here add to my Letter, as I am making a Copy of it, a few Observations.

WHEN I was last in Edinburgh, I set myself to consider of this great Annoyance, and, in Conclusion, found it remediless.

"THE City, it feems, was built upon that "Rock for Protection, by the Castle, in dange- " rous Times; but the Space was too narrow to contain a sufficient Number of Inhabitants, other-

- " wife than by very high Buildings, crouded close together, infomuch that there are hardly any
- " back Yards.
- " EIGHT, Ten, and even Twelve Stories have each a particular Family, and, perhaps, a sepa-
- " rate Proprietor; and therefore any Thing fo
- " expensive, as a Conveyance down from the up-
- " permost Floor, could never be agreed on; nor
- " could there be made, within the Building, any "Receiver fuitable to fuch Numbers of People.
- "THERE is, indeed, between the City and the Sea, a large flat Space of Land, with a Rivulet running

" running through it, which would be very com-" modious for a City; but great Part of it has " been made the Property of the Corporation; " and the Magistrates, for the Time being, will " not fuffer any Houses to be built on it; for, if " they did, the old City would foon be deferted, " which would bring a very great Loss upon some, " and total Ruin upon others of the Proprietors in " those Buildings."

rg

to

y,

W-

W,

at

d,

ny

as

or hng

1-

ng

to

u-

at

e-

to

-15

ofe

ny

ve

)a-

fo

Ip-

Or

ny

he

let

ng

I HAVE faid thus much upon this uncleanly Subject, only, as you may have heard fome maliciously, or at best, inconsiderately, say, that this Evil proceeds from (what one would think no body could believe) a Love of Nastiness, and not Necessity. I shall only add, as it falls in my Way, that the main Street is cleaned by Scavengers every Morning early, except Sunday, which, therefore, is the most uncleanly Day.

Bur to return: Having Occasion, the next Morning after my Arrival, to enquire for a Person with whom I had some Concerns, I was amazed at the Length and Gibberish of a Direction given me where to find him.

I was told that I must go down the Street, and on the North Side, over against such a Place, turn down fuch a Wynde; and, on the West Side of the Wynde, enquire for fuch a Launde (or Building) where the Gentleman stayd, at the thrid Stair, that is, three Stories high.

THIS Direction, in a Language I hardly underflood, and by Points of the Compass, which I then knew nothing of, as they related to the Town, put me to a good deal of Difficulty.

Ar length I found out the Subject of my Enquiry, who was greatly diverted, when I told him (with as much Humour as I was Master of) what had been my Perplexity, Yet, in my Narration, I concealed I concealed the nauseous Inconvenience of going down the steep, narrow Wynde, and ascending to his Lodging.

I THEN had no Knowledge of the Cawdys, a very useful Black-Guard, who attend the Coffee-Houses and public Places to go of Errands; and though they are Wretches, that in Rags lye upon the Stairs, and in the Streets at Night, yet are they often considerably trusted, and, as I have been told, have seldom or never proved unfaithful.

THESE Boys know every body in the Town who is of any kind of Note, so that one of them would have been a ready Guide to the Place I wanted to find; and I afterwards wondered that one of them sas not recommended to me by my new Landlady.

This Corps has a kind of Captain or Magistrate presiding over them, whom they call the Constable of the Cawdys, and in case of Neglect or other Misdemeanor he punishes the Delinquents, mostly by Fines of Ale and Brandy, but sometimes corporally.

THEY have for the most Part an uncommon Acuteness, are very ready at proper Answers, and execute suddenly and well whatever Employment is affigned them.

WHETHER it be true or not I cannot say, but I have been told by several, That one of the Judges formerly abandoned two of his Sons for a Time to this Way of Life, as believing it would create in them a Sharpness which might be of Use to them in the future Course of their Lives.

This is all I knew of Edinburgh at that Time, by Reason of the Shortness of my Stay: The Day following, my Affairs called me to begin my Journey to Glasgow.

GLASGOW is, to outward Appearance, the prettiest and most uniform Town that I ever faw; and I believe there is nothing like it in Britain.

It has a spacious Carrifour, where stands the Cross; and going round it, you have, by Turns, the View, of sour Streets, that in regular Angles proceed from thence. The Houses of these Streets are faced with Ashler Stone, they are well sashed, all of one Model, and Piazzas run through them on either Side, which give a good Air to the Buildings.

THERE are some other handsome Streets, but the extreme Parts of the Town are mean and disagreeable to the Eye.

ıg

to

a

end

n

en

10 ld

to

m

y.

te

le

f-

y

-0

n

b

nt

I

es

to

n

n

e

y

THERE was nothing remarkable in my Way to Glasgow, that I took Notice of, being in Haste, but the Church at Linlitbgow, a noble old Gothick Building, formerly a Cathedral, now much in Ruins, chiefly from the usual Rage that attends Reformation.

It is really provoking to fee how the Populace have broke and defaced the Statues and other Ornaments, under the Notion of their being Relicks of Popery.

As this Town was our Baiting-place, a Gentleman (the Son of a celebrated Scot's Bishop) who was with me, proposed, that while Dinner was getting ready, we should go and view the inside of the Structure; and as we took Notice that great Part of the Floor was broken up, and that the Pews were immoderately dusty, the Precentor, or Clerk, who attended us, took Occasion to say, he did not apprehend that Cleanliness was effential to Devotion; upon which, my Friend turned hastily upon him, and said very angrily,

WHAT! This Church was never intended for your flovenly Worship. This Epithet, pronounced with so much Ardour, immediately after his Cenfure

fure of the Presbyterian Zeal, was to me some Matter of Speculation.

My Stay at Glasgow was very short, as it had been at Edinburgh, to which last, in five Days, I

n

it

tl

ſe

p

2

0

W

L

H

C

tl

fi

W B

T

tl

to

tl

la

I

S

C

li

a

returned, in order to proceed to this Town.

UPON confulting some Gentlemen, which of the two Ways was most eligible for me to take, i. e. whether through the Highlands, or by the Sea-Coast, I found they were divided; one giving a dreadful Account of the Roughness and Danger of the Mountains, another commending the Shortness of the Cut over the Hills. One told me it was a hundred and fifty Miles by the Coast, another that it was but ninety Miles the other Way; but I decided the Matter myself upon the Strength of the old Proverb - That the farthest Way about is the nearest Way bome: Not but that I sometimes met with Roads which, at that Time, I thought pretty rough, but after passing through the Highlands, they were all smoothed, in my Imagination, into Bowling-greens.

As the Country near the Coast has, here and there, little rising Hills which overlook the Sea, and discover Towns at a considerable Distance, I was well enough diverted with various Prospects in my Journey, and wanted nothing but Trees, Enclosures, and smoother Roads, to make it very agreeable.

THE Lowlands, between the Sea and the high Country to the Left, are generally narrow; and the rugged, romantick Appearance of the Mountains was to me, at that Time, no bad Prospect; but fince that, I have been taught to think otherwise by the Sufferings I have met with among them.

I HAD little Reason to complain of my Entertainment at the several Houses where I set up, because ne ad

I

of

e.

a-

a of

ſs

a

at ild

ft

h ty

s,

0

d

1,

I

a

1-

d

-

g

cause I never wanted what was proper for the Support of Life, either for myself or my Horses; I mention them, because, in a Journey, they are as it were a Part of one's Self: The worst of all was the Cookery.

ONE Thing I observed of almost all the Towns that I saw at a Distance, which was, that they feemed to be very large, and made a handsome Appearance; but when I passed through them, there appeared a Meanness which discovered the Condition of the Inhabitants; and all the Out-Skirts, which ferved to encrease the Extent of them at a Distance, were nothing but the Ruins of little Houses, and those in pretty great Numbers.

OF this I asked the Reason, and was told, That when one of those Houses was grown old and decayed, they often did not repair it, but, taking out the Timber, they let the Walls stand as a fit Enclofure for a Cale-Yard, i. e. a little Garden for Coleworts, and that they built anew upon another Spot. By this you may conclude, that Stone and Groundrents, in those Towns, are not very valuable. But the little Fishing Towns were generally disagreeable to pass, from the strong Smell of the Haddocks and Whitings that were hung up to dry on Lines along the Sides of the Houses from one End of the Village to the other: And fuch Numbers of half-naked Children, but fresh coloured, strong and healthy, I think are not to be met with in the In-land Some will have their Numbers and Strength to be the Effects of Shell-fish.

I HAVE one Thing more to observe to you, which is; That still as I went Northward, the Cattle and the Carts grew less and less. The Sheep likewise diminished in their Size by Degrees as I advanced, and their Wool grew coarfer, till at Length, upon a transient View, they seemed to be cloathed with Hair. This I think proceeds less from the Quality of the Soil than the excessive Cold of the Hills in the Winter Season, because

the

th

So

th

th

In

W

ha wl m ar

in (v

he m be tra

di

(if

n

A

fin

(1

th

en

in

M

fij

tr

the Mutton is exceedingly good.

Thus I have Acquainted you how I came hither, and I hope it will not now be very long, before I have a greater Pleasure in telling you, by Word of Mouth, in what Manner I got Home, yet must I soon return.

LETTER III.

Am now about to enter upon the Performance of my Promise, and shall begin with a Description of this Town, which, however obscure it may be thought with you, yet is of no inconsiderable Account in these remote Regions. And it is often said to be the most like to an English Town of any at this End of the Island.

Bur I have a further View than barely to make you acquainted with these Parts without your having the Inconveniencies, Fatigue and Hazards of a Northern Journey of five hundred Miles; and that Design is to shew you, by Example, the melancholy Consequence of the Want of Manusactories and foreign Trade, and most especially with respect to the common People, whom it affects even to the Want of Necessaries; not to mention the Morals of the next Degree. It is here, indeed, their Happiness, that they do not so sensibly feel the Want of these Advantages, as they would do if they had known the Loss of them.

es

ive

uſe

hi-

be-

by

ne,

ce pay

en ny

ke

vfa

at

nies

een he

d,

he

And notwithstanding the natural Fertility of the South, I am, by Observation, taught to conclude, that without those imported Profits, which enable the higher Orders of Men to spare a Part of their Income to employ others in ornamental and other Works not absolutely necessary; I say, in that Case, the ordinary People with you would be, perhaps, not quite, but near as wretched as these, whose Circumstances almost continually excite in me the painful Passion of Pity, as the Objects of it are seldom out of my Sight.

I SHALL not make any Remarks how much it is incumbent on the Rulers of Kingdoms and States (who are to the People what a Father is to his helples Family) to watch over this Source of human Convenience and Happiness, because this has been your favourite Topick, and indeed the contrary would be in me (as the common Phrase is) like carrying Goals to Newcastle.

Ir Wit were my Talent, or even a genteel Ridicule, which is but a faint Resemblance of Wit (if it may be said to be any Thing like it) I say, if both or either of these were my Gift, you would not expect to be entertain'd that Way upon this Account; for you perfectly know that Foverty, simply as such, and unattended by Sloth, Pride, and (let me say) other unsuitable Vices, was never thought by the Judicious to be a proper Subject for Wit or Raillery. But I cannot sorbear to observe, en passant, that those Pretenders to Wit that deal in odious Hyperboles, create Distaste to ingenuous Minds.

I SHALL give you only two Examples of fuch infipid Jests — The first was, in describing the Country Cabbins in the North of Ireland, by saying one might might put one's Arm down the Chimney and unlatch the Door: This regarded all of that Country; but the other was personal to one who, perhaps, had carried his Oeconomy a little too far.

SIR, - fays the Joker to me, who was a Stranger to the other, this Gentleman is a very generous Man - I made him a Vifit the other Day, and the Bars of his Grate were the Wires of a Bird-Cage, and he threw on his Coals with an Ockamy Spoon.

'Tis true, the laughing Part of the Company were diverted with the Sarcasm, but it was so much at the Expence of the old Gentleman, that I thought he would run mad with Refentment.

IT would be needless to describe the Situation of this Town, as it relates to the Island in general, because a Map of Britain will, at one View, afford you a better Idea of it than any Words I can put together for that Purpose; I shall therefore content myself with faying only, That the Murray Frith is navigable within less than half a Mile of the Town, and that the rest of the Navigation to it is supply'd by the River Nefs.

INVERNESS is one of the Royal Boroughs of Scotland, and jointly with Nairne, Forress, and Channery, fends a Member to Parliament.

THE Town has a military Governor, and the Corporation a Provost and four Baillies, a Kind of Magistrates little differing from our Mayors and Aldermen: Besides whom, there is a Dean of Guild who prefides in Matters of Trade; and other Borough Officers, as in the rest of the Corporate Towns of this Country.

IT is not only the Head-borough or County Town of the Shire of Inverness, which is of large Extent, but generally esteemed to be the Capital of the Highlands; but the Natives do not call themselves

Highlanders,

Hig

Sitt

he

ind

he

by ies

car

ind

hei

Peo

her

1

he

ar

cot

7 fv

fo

7 djo vitl

ON

Cita

tor

f:

he ras

10 ich

bli

en

Highlanders, not so much on Account of their low situation, as because they speak English.

un-

гу;

ıps,

ger

Ous

the

ge,

n.

any ich

ght

of

ral,

ord

put

on-

ray

e of

to

of

and

the

ind

and

ild

30-ate

wn

nt, the

rs,

THIS Rule, whereby to denominate themselves, hey borrow from the Kirk, which, in all its Acts and Ordinances, distinguishes the Lowlands from the Highlands by the Language generally spoken by the Inhabitants, whether the Parish or District ies in the High or Low Country.

YET although they speak English, there are carce any who do not understand the Irish Tongue; and it is necessary they should do so, to carry on heir Dealings with the neighbouring Country People; for within less than a Mile of the Town, here are few who speak any English at all.

WHAT I am faying must be understood only of he ordinary People, for the Gentry, for the most Part, speak our Language in the remotest Parts of Scotland.

THE Town principally confifts of four Streets, which three center at the Cross, and the other fomething irregular.

THE Castle stands upon a little steep Hill closely djoining to the Town, on the South Side, built with unhewn Stone: It was lately in Ruins, but is ow compleatly repaired to serve as a Part of the Citadel Fort George, whereof the first Foundation tone was laid in Summer 1726, and is to consist f Barracks for six Companies. This Castle, whereof the Duke of Gordon is hereditary Keeper, was sormerly a Royal Palace, where Mary, the Mother of our King James the First, resided, at a tch Times when she thought it her Interest to blige the Highlanders with her Presence and Exence, or that her Sasety required it.

It is of an irregular Figure; andyou will think it was a very scanty Palace, when I have told you that before it was repaired, it consisted of only fin Lodging Rooms, the Offices below, and the Gallery above; which last being taken down, and the Rooms divided each into two, there are now twelve Apartments for Officers Lodgings.

WHILE this Building was in Repairing, three Soldiers, who were employed in digging up a Piece of Ground very near the Door, discovered a dead Body, which was supposed to be the Corps of a Man; I say supposed, because a Part of it was defaced before they were aware.

This was believed to have lain there a great Number of Years, because when it was touched it fell to Dust. At this unexpected Sight, the Soldier most valiantly ran away, and the Accident, you will believe, soon brought a good Number of Spectators to the Place.

As I was talking with one of the Townsmen, and took Notice how strange it was that a Bod should be buried so near the Door of the House 'Troth, says he, I dinno doubt but this was aned Mary's Lovers.

I VERILY believe this Man had been afterward rebuked, for this unguarded Expression to me, at Englishman, because, when I happened to mee him in the Street the Day following, he officiously endeavoured to give his Words another Turn, which made the Impression I had received much stronger than it had been before.

But this I have observed of many, (myself not excepted) who; by endeavouring to excuse a Blunder, like a spirited Horse in one of our Bogs, the more he struggles to get out, the deeper he plungs himself in the Mire.

he

m an

A

for 21

if 101 fiv

ac

ha

yo Ed

Slo

litt

Pa

W ear No

Ni

To

my

Gr

Su

bef

Ma

the

Ha

the

Pie

you.

y fir

Gal.

the

elve

hree

iece

dead

of a

Was

reat

ed it

dien

you

pec-

nen,

Body

ufe

ne d vard

, an

mee

oufly

urn

nuch

f not

Blunthe

ınga

PON

Upon the Whole, this Hint at the Policy of her Amours, from a Native of this Town, induced me to believe there is some received Tradition among the People concerning her, not much to the Advantage of her Memory. I had often heard something to this Purpose in London, but could not easily believe it; and rather thought it might have arisen originally from Complaisance to one, who, if we may believe some Scots Memoirs, was as jealous of the Praises of her fine Person, as apprehensive of a much more dangerous Competition.

Before I have done with the Castle, I must acquaint you with an odd Accident that had like to have happened to it, not many Days after the abovementioned Discovery. And first I must tell you, that one End of the Building extends to the Edge of a very steep Descent to the River, and that Sloap is composed of a very loose Gravel.

The Workmen had ignorantly dug away some little Part of the Foot of the Declivity, to make a Passage something wider between that and the Water. — This was done in the Evening, and pretty early in the Night we were alarmed with a dreadful Noise of running about, and calling upon a great Number of Names, insomuch that I concluded the Town was on Fire. This brought me suddenly to my Window, and there I was informed, that the Gravel was running, and followed by continual Successions; and that the Castle would be down before Morning.

However it was prevented; for the Town Masons and Soldiers soon run up a dry Wall against the Foot of the Hill; for Stones are every where at Hand in this Country, which furnished them with the hasty Means to prevent its Fall.

THE Bridge is about eighty Yards over, and a Piece of good Workmanship, consisting of seven Arches, built with Stone, and maintained by a Toll of a Bodle, or the fixth Part of a Penny, for each Foot Passenger with Goods; a Penny for a loaded Horfe, &c.

And here I cannot forbear to give you an Instance of the extreme Indigence of some of the Country People, by assuring you, I have seen Women, with heavy Loads, at a Distance from the Bridge, (the Water being low) wade over the large Stones, which are made slippery by the Sulphur, almost up to the Middle, at the Hazard of their Lives, being desirous to save, or unable to pay, one single Bodle.

FROM the Bridge we have often the Diversion to see the Seals pursue the Salmon as they come up the River: They are sometimes within fifty Yards of us; and one of them came so near the Shore, that a Salmon leaped out of the Water for its Sasety, and the Seal, being shot at, dived; but before any body could come near, the Fish had thrown itself back again into the River.

As this amphibious Creature, though familiar to us, may be to you a Kind of Curiofity, perhaps you may expect some Description of it.

THE Head, at some Distance, resembles that of a Dog, with his Ears cut close; but when near, you see it has a long thick Snout, a wide Mouth, and the Eyes sunk within the Head, and altogether it has a most horrid Look, insomuch that if any one were to paint a Gorgon's Head, I think he could not find a more frightful Model.

As they swim, the Head, which is high above Water, is continually moving from Side to Side to discover Danger.

THE Body is horizontally flattish, and covered with a hairy Skin, often finely varied with Spots, as you may see by Trunks that are made to keep out

Ol

th

fo

m

ha

M

ar

W

B

th

to

be

SI

th

to

ha

I

th

th

ci

di

in

fle

th

T

ab

Sk

th

Fl

un

old

which,

out wet. The Female has Breasts like a Woman, that sometimes appear above Water, which makes some to think it occasioned the Fiction of a Mermaid, and, if so, the Mermaid of the Ancients must have been wondrous handsome! The Breast of the Male is likewise so resembling to that of a Man, that an Officer, seeing one of them in cutting up, went away, telling me, it was so like that Part of a human Body, he could not stand it, for that was his Expression.

BENEATH the Skin is a deep spongy Fat, something like that of the skinny Part of a Leg of Mutton; from this they chiefly draw the Oil.

THE Fins or Feet are very near the Body, webbed like a Duck, about twelve Inches wide, but in Shape very much like the Hand of a Man: When they feed as they swim, they stoop the Head down to the Fore Foot, as I once saw when one of them had a Piece of Salmon (I may say) in its Hand, as I was crossing Cromarty Bay.

WHEN they dive, they swim under Water, I think I may say, a Quarter of a Mile together, and they dart after their Prey with a surprizing Velocity, considering their Bulk, and the Element they divide.

Ilc

ch

ed

nhe

0-

he

ge

ır,

eir

ıy,

to

he

of

nat

ty,

ny

elf

to aps

of

ar,

th,

ner

iny uld

ove

to

red

ots,

eep

out

THE Fishermen take them by intercepting them in their Return to the Water, when they have been sleeping or basking in the Sun upon the Shore, and there they knock them down with their Clubs.—
They tell me, that every grown Seal is worth to them about forty Shillings Sterling, which arises from the Skin and the Oil.

WHEN you happen to be within Musket Shot of them, they are so quick with the Eye, that, at the Flash in the Pan, they plunge so suddenly, they are under Water before the Ball can reach them.

I HAVE seen ten or fifteen of them, young and old, in an Arm of the Sea among the Mountains, which, upon the Discovery of our Boat, flounced into the Water all at once, from a little rocky Island, near the Turn of a Point, and raised a furprizing Surge round about them.

Bur as to their being dangerous to the Fishermen, in throwing Stones behind them when they are pursued, it does well enough for the Volume of a travelling Author, who, if he did not create Wonders, or steal them from others, might have little to say; but in their scrambling Flight over a Beech of loose Stones, it is impossible but some of them must be removed and thrown behind them; and this, no Doubt, has given a Hint for the Romance. These Writers, for the better Sale of their Books, depend on the Reader's Love of Admiration, the great Assistant to Credulity.

But, in particular; that those Animals, with their short Fins or Feet, can wound at a Distance, must certainly be concluded from this salse Principle, viz. That a Stone may be sent from a Sling of sour Inches long, with equal Force, to another of as many Feet.

BEFORE I leave the Bridge, I shall take Notice of one Thing more, which is commonly to be seen by the Sides of the River, (and not only here, but in all the Parts of Scotland where I have been) that is, Women, with their Coats tucked up, stamping in Tubs upon Linen, by Way of Washing; and this not only in Summer, but in the hardest frosty Weather, when their Legs and Feet are almost literally as red as Blood with the Cold; and often two of these Wenches stamp in one Tub, supporting themselves by their Arms thrown over each other's Shoulders.

Bur what feems to me yet stranger is, as I have been assured by an English Gentlewoman, that they have insisted with her to have the Liberty of washing

at

I

t

Ŧ

0

0

an (f

n fa

A

M

T

at the River; and, as People pass by, they divert themselves by talking very freely to them, like our Codders, and other Women, employed in the Fields and Gardens about London.

ed

ky

a

er-

ney

e of

ate

ave er a

e of

m;

Ro-

of

Ad-

vith

nce,

iple,

four

f as tice

feen

but

that ping

and

rofty

most often

ort-

each

have they hing

at

WHAT I have faid above, relating to their waffiing at the River in a hard Frost, may require an Explanation, viz. the River Nefs, like the Lake from whence it comes, never freezes from the great Quantity of Sulphur with which it is impregnated; but, on the contrary, will dissolve the Isicles, contracted from other Waters, at the Horses Heels, in a very short Space of Time.

FROM the Talbooth, or County Gaol, the greatest Part of the Murderers and other notorious Villains, that have been committed fince I have been here, have made their Escape; and I think this has manifestly proceeded from the Furtherance or Connivance of the Keepers, or rather their Keepers.

WHEN this Evil has been complained of, the Excuse was, the Prison is a weak old Building, and the Town is not in Condition to keep it in Repair: But, for my own Part, I cannot help concluding, from many Circumstances, that the greatest Part of these Escapes have been the Consequence either of Clan-Interest, or Clanish Terror. As for Example; if one of the Magistrates were a Cameron, (for the Purpose) the Criminal (Cameron) must not fuffer, if the Clan be defirous he should be faved. In short, they have several other Tyes or Attachments one to another, which occasion (like Money in the South) this Partiality.

WHEN any Ship in these Parts is bound for the West-Indies, to be sure a neighbouring Chief, of whom none dares openly to complain, has feveral Thieves to fend Prisoners to Town.

It has been whispered, their Crimes were only asking their Dues, and such-like Offences; and, I have been well assured, they have been threatned with hanging, or, at least, perpetual Imprisonment, to intimidate, and force, them to sign a Contract for their Banishment, which they seldom resused to do, as knowing there would be no Want of Witnesses against them, however innocent they were; and then they were put on board the Ship, the Master paying so much a Head for them.

Thus two Purposes' were served at once, viz. the getting rid of troublesome Fellows, and making Money of them at the same Time: But these poor Wretches never escaped out of Prison.

ALL this I am apt to believe, because I met with an Example, at his own House, which leaves me no Room to doubt of it.

As this Chief was walking alone in his Garden, with his Dirk and Pistol by his Side, and a Gun in his Hand, (as if he feared to be assassinated) and, as I was reading in his Parlour, there came to me by Stealth, (as I soon perceived) a young Fellow, who accosted me with such an Accent, as made me conclude he was a Native of Middlesex; and every now and then he turned about, as if he feared to be observed by any of the Family.

He told me, that when his Master was in London, he had made him Promises of great Advantage, if he would serve him as his Gentleman; but though he had been there two Years, he could not obtain either his Wages or Discharge.

AND, says he, when I ask for either of them, the tells me I know I have robbed him, and nothing is more easy for him than to find, among these Highlanders, abundant Evidence against me (innocent as I am;) and then my Fate must be a perpetual Gaol, or Transportation: And there is no Means for me

0

m

b

di

ra

kı

an

ci

M

th

m

th

th

T

as

fh:

tac

(w ho

acc

the

lik

wa

per bec

wh

Hig

im,

Pov

to make my Escape, being here in the Midst of his Clan, and never suffered to go far from Home.

You will believe I was much affected with the melancholy Circumstance of the poor young Man; but told him, that my speaking for him would discover his Complaint to me, which might enrage his Master; and, in that Case, I did not know what might be the Consequence to him.

THEN, with a forrowful Look, he left me, and (as it happened) in very good Time.

nly

I

ed

nt,

act

to

Tes

nd

ter

iz.

ng

100

th

ne

en,

un

nd,

ne

w, ne

ry

to

n,

if

gh un

m,

ng

hsI

ol,

ne

to

This Chief does not think the present abject Disposition of his Clan towards him to be sufficient; but entertains that tyrannical and detestable Maxim,—That to render them poor, will double the Tye of their Obedience; and accordingly he makes Use of all oppressive Means to that End.

To prevent any Diminution of the Number of those who do not offend him, he dissuades from their Purpose all such as shew an Inclination to Traffick, or to put their Children out to Trades, as knowing they would, by such an Alienation, shake off, at least, good Part of their slavish Attachment to him and his Family. This he does (when down-right Authority fails) by telling them how their Ancestors chose to live sparingly, and be accounted a martial People, rather than submit themselves to low and mercenary Employments like the Lowlanders, whom their Foresathers always despised for the Want of that Warlike Temper which they (his Vassals) still retain'd, &c.

I SHALL say no more of this Chief at present, because I may have Occasion to speak of him again when I come to that Part which is properly called Highlands; but I cannot so easily dismiss his Maxim, without some little Animadversion upon it.

Ir may, for aught I know, be fuitable to Clanish Power; but, in general, it feems quite contrary to Reason, Justice, and Nature, that any one Perfon, from the meer Accident of his Birth, should have the Prerogative to oppress a whole Community, for the Gratification of his own selfish Views and Inclinations: And I cannot but think, the concerted Poverty of a People, is, of all Oppressions, the strongest Instigation to Sedition, Rebellion, and Plunder.

 $C_3$

THE Town-Hall is a plain Building of Rubble, and there is one Room in it where the Magistrates meet upon the Town Business, which would be tolerably handsome, but the Walls are rough, not white-washed, or so much as plaistered, and no Furniture in it but a Table, some bad Chairs, and altogether immoderately dirty.

THE Market-Cross is the Exchange of the Merchants and other Men of Business.

1

THERE they stand in the Middle of the dirty Street, and are frequently interrupted in their Negociations by Horses and Carts, which often separate them one from another in the Midst of their Bargains or other Assairs: But this is nothing extraordinary in Scotland, for it is the same in other Towns, and even at the Cross of Edinburgh.

OVER against the Cross is the Coffee-House. A Gentleman who loves Company and Play, keeps it for his Diversion, for so I am told by the People of the Town; but he has condescended to complain to me of the little he gets by his Countrymen.

As to a Description of the Coffee-Room, the Furniture and Utenfils, I must be excused in that Particular, for it would not be a very decent one; but I shall venture to tell you in general, that the Room appears as if it had never been cleaned since the Building of the House; and, in Frost and Snow, Snow, you might cover the Peat-Fire with your Hands.

er-

uld

lu-

WS

-HC

ns,

on,

le,

tes

be

ot

no

nd

er-

ty

eit.

en.

of

ng

in

,

ſe.

ps

ele

n-

y-

he

at 2;

ne

ce

br

V,

NEAR the extreme Part of the Town, toward the North, there are two Churches, one for the English, and the other for the Irish, Tongue, both out of Repair, and much as clean as the other Churches I have seen.

This puts me in Mind of a Story I was told by an English Lady, Wife of a certain Lieutenant-Colonel, who dwelt near a Church in the Low-Country on your Side Edinburgh. At first coming to the Place, she received a Visit from the Minister's Wife, who, after some time spent in ordinary Discourse, invited her to come to Kirk the Sunday following.

To this the Lady agreed, and kept her Word, which produced a fecond Visit; and the Minister's Wife then asking her how she liked their Way of Worship, she answered—very well, but she had found two great Inconveniencies there, viz. That she had dirtied her Cloaths, and had been pestered with a great Number of Fleas. Now, says the Lady, if your Husband will give me Leave to line the Pew, and will let my Servant clean it against every Sunday, I shall go constantly to Church.

LINE the Pew! fays the Minister's Wife; Troth, Madam, I cannot promise for that, for my Husband will think it Rank Papery.

A LITTLE beyond the Churches, is the Church-Yard, where, as is usual in Scotland, the Monuments are placed against the Wall that encloses it, because, to admit them into the Church, they would be an intolerable Ornament. The Inscriptions, I think, are much upon a Par with those of our Country Church-Yards, but the Monuments are some of them very handsome and costly. I cannot

C 4

cannot fay much as to the Taste, but they have :

good deal of Ornament about them.

EVEN the best Sort of Street Houses, in all the great Towns of the Low Country, are, for the most Part, contrived after one Manner, with a Stair Case without Side, either round or square, which leads to each Floor, as I mentioned in my last Letter.

By the Way, they call a Floor a House; the Whole Building is called a Land; an Alley, as I said before, is a Wynde; a little Court, or a turnagain Alley, is a Closs; a round Stair Case, a Turnpike; and a square one goes by the Name of a Skale Stair. In this Town the Houses are so differently modelled, they cannot be brought under any general Description, but commonly the back Part, or one End, is turned toward the Street, and you pass by it through a short Alley into a little Court-Yard, to ascend by Stairs above the first Story. This lowest Stage of the Building has a Door toward the Street, and serves for a Shop, or a Ware-house, but has no Communication with the rest.

THE Houses are, for the most Part, low, because of the violent Flurries of Wind which often pour upon the Town from the Openings of the adjacent Mountains, and are built with Rubble Stone, as are all the Houses in every other Town of Scotland, that I have seen; except Edinburgh, Glasgow, Perth, Sterling, and Aberdeen; where some of them are faced with Ashler-Stone; but the four Streets of Glasgow, as I have said before, are so from one End to the other.

THE Rubble-Walls of these Houses are composed of Stones of different Shapes and Sizes, and many of them being Pebbles, are almost round, which, in laying them, leave large Gaps, and on the

Outfide

t

P

i

to ſc

h

b

th ŧa

CE

in

W

aı

Outfide they fill up those Interstices by driving in stat Stones of a small Size; and, in the End, face the work all over with Mortar thrown against it with a Trowel, which they call Harling.

This rough Casting is apt to be damaged by the Weather, and must be sometimes renewed, otherwise some of the Stones will drop out.

It is true this is not much unlike the Way of Building in some remote Parts of England, only there, the Stones are squarer, and more nearly proportioned one to another: But I have been thus particular, because I have often heard it said by some of the Scots in London, before I knew any thing of Scotland, that the Houses were all built with Stone, as despising our Bricks, and concealing the Manner and Appearance of their Buildings.

This gave me a falfe Idea of Magnificence, both as to Beauty and Expence, by comparing them in my Thoughts with our Stone Buildings in the South, which are costly, scarce, and agreeable to the Eye.

he

he

a

e,

ny

he

I

n-

a

of

fo

er

ck

et,

le

rst

a

or

th

e-

en

he ole

vn

b,

re

ut

e, n-

nd

he

de

THE Chasms in the Inside and Middle of these Walls, and the disproportionate Quantity of Mortar, by Comparison, with the Stone, render them Receptacles for prodigious Numbers of Rats, which scratch their Way from the Inside of the House half through the Wall, where they burrow and breed securely, and by that Means abound every where in the small Scots Towns, especially near the Sea. But among the inner Parts of the Mountains, I never saw or heard of any such thing except upon Recollection in a Part called Coulnakyle in Strath-spey, to which Place I have been told they were brought in the Year 1723, from a Ship, among some London Goods.

THEY were then thought by the Inhabitants to be a fure Presage of good Luck, and so indeed they were, for much Money sollowed: But when those Works are at an End, I believe Famine, or another Transportation, must be the Fate of the Vermin.

I HAVE been credibly informed, that when the Rats have been increased to a great Degree in some fmall Villages, and could hardly fubfift, they have crept into the little Horses Manes and Tails (which are always tangled and matted, being never combed) in order to be transported to other Places, as it were, to plant new Colonies, or to find fresh Quarters less burdened with Numbers. And I was lately told by a Countryman, that lives about two Miles off, who brought me a Bundle of Straw, that having flept in a Stable here, he carried Home one of them in his Plaid. But fuch Numbers of them are feen by the Morning Twilight in the Streets, for Water, after dry Weather succeeded by a Shower of Rain, as is incredible: And (what at first feemed strange to me) among them feveral Weefels. You will certainly fay I was distressed for want of Matter, when I dwelt fo long upon Rats, but they are an intolerable Nusance.

THE Houses of this Town were neither sashed or slated before the Union, as I have been informed by several old People, and to this Day the Cielings are rarely plaistered, nothing but the single Boards serve for Floor and Cieling, and the Partitions being often composed of upright Boards only, they are sometimes shrunk, and any Body may not only hear, but see what passes in the Room adjoining.

WHEN first I came to this Country I observed, in the Floors of several Houses, a good Number of Circles of about an Inch Diameter, and, likewise, some round Holes of the same Size, the Meaning

t

f

t

t

tl

tl

tl

T

Meaning of which I did not then understand; but not long after, I discovered the Cause of those inconvenient Apertures.

0) y i

)-.

-

e:

ne

ve.

h

(b it

h

as

10

at

ne.

m

S,

a

at

al

ed

nc

ed

ed

gs

ds

ng

re ly

d, er ehe

ng

THESE, in great Measure, lay the Family below open to those that are above, who, on their Part, are incommoded with the Voices of the others.

THE Boards, when taken from the Saw-Mill, are bored at a good Distance from one End of them, for the Conveniency of their Way of Carriage.

THEY put a Cord, (or a Woodie as they call it) through the Holes of feveral of them, to keep them flat to the Horses Sides, and the Corners of the other End drag upon the Ground; but before these Boards are laid in the Floor, the Holes are fill'd up with Plugs, which they cut away, even with the Surface on each Side, and when these Stop-gaps shrink, they drop out and are seldom supplied.

THOSE Houses that are not sashed, have two Shutters that turn upon Hinges for the lower Half of the Window, and only the upper Part is glazed, so that there is no seeing any thing in the Street, in bad Weather, without great Inconvenience.

Asking the Reason of this, I was told that these People still continue those Shutters as an old Custom which was at first occasioned by Danger; for that formerly in their Clan-Quarrels, several had been shot from the opposite Side of the Way, when they were in their Chambers, and by these Shutters they were concealed and in Safety; but I believe the true Reason is, the saving the Expence of Glass, for it is the same in the Outparts of all the Towns and Cities in the Low-Country.

LETTER IV.

WITHOUT any long Preface, I shall make this Letter a Continuation of the Descriptions I am entered into; but, at the same Time, am not without Fears, that my former was rather dry and tedious to you, than informing and diverting; and this I apprehend the more, because good Part of it was not agreeable to myself.

What I have hitherto said, with Respect to the Buildings of this Town, relates only to the principal Part of the Streets; the midling Sort of Houses, as in other Towns, are very low, and have generally a close wooden Stair-Case before the Front. By one End of this you ascend, and in it above are small round or oval Holes, just big enough for the Head to go through; and in Summer, or when any Thing extraordinary happens in the Street to excite the Curiosity of the Inhabitants, they look like so many People with their Heads in the Pillory.

But the extreme Parts of the Town are made up of most miserably low dirty Hovels, faced and covered with Turf, with a bottomless Tub or Basket in the Roof for a Chimney.

THE Pavement here is very good, but, as in other small Towns, where the Streets are narrow, it is so much rounded, that when it is dry it is dangerous to ride, insomuch that Horses, which are shod, are often falling; and when it is dirty, and beginning to dry, it is slippery to the Feet, for, in Scotland,

f

Ь

d

0

Scotland, you walk generally in the Middle of the Streets:

I ASKED the Magistrates one Day, when the Dirt was almost above one's Shoes, why they fuffered the Town to be so excessively dirty, and did not employ People to cleanse the Streets? The Anfwer was, It will not be long before we have a Shower.

But as to the Slipperiness, we have many principal Towns in England paved with small Pebbles, that, going down Hill, or along a Sloap, are not less dangerous to ride, especially in dry Weather.

Some of the Houses are marked on the Outside with the first Letters of the Owner's Name, and that of his Wife, if he be a married Man. for the most Part, over the uppermost Window as for Example CM. MM. Charles Maclean, Margaret Mackenzie; for the Woman writes her Maiden Name after Marriage; and supposing her to be a Widow, that has had feveral Husbands, if she does not chuse to continue the Use of her Maiden Name, she may take the Name of either of her deeeased Husbands as she thinks fit. This you may be fure has been the Cause of many a Joke among our Countrymen, in fuppofing fomething extraordinary in that Man above the rest, whose Name, after all, she chose to bear.

WITHIN Doors, upon the Chimney-Piece of one of the Rooms, in some Houses, there are likewife initial Letters of the Proprietor's Name, with a Scrap of their Poetry, of which I shall give you only two Instances.

all the

me

vas

and

ufe

the

crfes,

ne-

nt.

are

the

any cite 10

ade

and

Or

in w, anare and in

nd,

ONE of them is as follows:

So with the Fire, EMP 94
So with thy God do ftand; Keep not far off,
Nor come thou too near Hand.

THE other is:

Christ is my Life and Rent.
His Promise is my Evident.
HF

THE Word Evident alludes to the Owner's Title to the House, the same signifying, in Scotland, a Title-Deed.

Out-fide of one of those Houses, viz.

Our Building is not here, but we Hope for ane better in Christ.

I was faying, in my last Letter, that here the Ground Floors are called Warehouses; they are so, but they would seem very odd to you under that Denomination.

THERE is indeed a Shop up a Pair of Stairs, which is kept by three or four Merchants in Partnership, and that is pretty well stored with various Sorts of small Goods and Wares, mostly from London. This Shop is called, by Way of Eminence, The Ware-house; here (for the Purpose) a Hat, which with you would cost thirteen or fourteen Shillings, goes by the established Name of a Guinea Hat, and other Things are much in the same Proportion.

I REMEMBER

to

cr th

wi th

ho

tai

ne

pe

Ca

no

cha

an

WO

15

and

A

let,

enc

W

and

fpe

nifi

De

cal

Pec

if t

I REMEMBER to have read in one of the Tatlers or Spectators, a Piece of Ridicule upon the French Vanity, where it is said, that a Barber writes upon his Sign, Magazin de Peruques; and a Cobler upon an old Boot, La Botte Royale, &c. But I am sorry to say, that, of late, something of this Kind has crept into our proud Metropolis; for here and there you may now see an ordinary Shop dubbed with the important Title of a Ware-bouse: This I think is no good Presage.

4

tle

he

he

ſo,

nat

rs,

rt-

us

771-

ce,

at,

il.

rea

0-

ER

But to return to the general Run of Warehouses in this Town: It is true some of them contain Hogsheads of French Wines, Pieces of Brandy, and other Goods that will not be spoiled by Dampness; but the Cargo of others, that I have happened to see open, have consisted chiefly of empty Casks and Bottles, Hoops, Chalk, (which last is not to be found in this Country) and other Merchandize of like Value. On this Side the Tweed many Things are aggrandized in Imitation of their ancient Allies (as they call them) the French.

A PEDLING Shop-keeper, that fells a Pennyworth of Thread, is a Merchant; the Person, who is sent for that Thread, has received a Commission, and, bringing it to the Sender, is making Report: A Bill to let you know there is a single Room to be let, is called a Placard; the Doors are Ports; an enclosed Field of two Acres is a Park; and the Wife of a Laird of sisteen pounds a Year is a Lady, and treated with ——your Ladysbip.

I AM not unaware it may be objected, with refpect to the Word Merchant, that in France it fignifies no more than a Shopkeeper, or other small Dealer, and that the Exporter and Importer is called un Negociant; and it may be said by these People, they use the Word in the same Sense; but if that were granted, would it not be more proper, in Correspondence, to make use of Words suited to the Acceptation of the Country corresponded to?

A FRIEND of mine told me, when I was last in London, that he had received, some Time before, a Bill of Exchange from this Country, directed to — Merchant in London. You know it is deemed a kind of Affront among real Merchants, to be too particularly pointed out in a Direction, as supposing them not well known, no not even at the Royal Exchange and Post Office: But as I was saying, this Scot's Merchant, was sought after for several Days upon Change, and the Scots Walk in particular, but Nobody knew any Thing of him, till at length, by meer Accident, he was sound to lodge up two Pair of Stairs, at a little House over against London Wall.

Would it not have been more reasonable to have given upon the Bill a full Direction to his Place of Abode (and called him Esquire, if his Correspondent pleased) than to send People in this Manner upon a Wild-Goofe-Chafe.

I WILL not suppose, one Part of the Design in it to be the gaining of Time before the Merchant could be found out; but there are evidently two other Reasons for such blind Directions, viz. They serve to give Weight to their Bills at Home, and, as they think, an Air of Importance to their Correspondence and Countrymen in London, but, in Reality, all this serves but to render the Drawer and Accepter ridiculous in the End.

I AM told once a Week that the Gentle-woman that washes my Linen is below, and frequently hear something or other of a Gentleman that keeps a Change not far from hence. They call an Alehouse a Change, and think a Man of a good Family suffers no Diminution of his Gentility to keep it, though his House and Sale are too inconsiderable

to

le

di

in

C

co

th

La

bu

dr

in

at

ral

thi

G

his

Ki

an

(th wh

wif

Mo

of I play

agre

and.

very othe

cord

turn

us,

grav

хре

to be mentioned without the Appearance of Burlefque.

I was once surprized to see a neighbouring Lord dismount from his Horse, take an Ale-house-keeper in his Arms, kiss him, and make him as many Compliments as if he had been a Brother Peer. I could not help asking his Lordship the Meaning of that great Familiarity, and he told me that my Landlord was of as good a Family as any in Scotland, but that the Laird his Father had a great many Children, and but little to give them. By the Way, in the Lowlands, where there are some few Signs at Publick Houses, I have seen written upon several—Mr. Alexander or Mr. James such a one; this is a Token that the Man of the House is a Gentleman either by Birth, or that he has taken his Master of Arts Degree at the University.

I SHALL give you but one more Instance of this Kind of Gentility.

to

in

re,

ted

t is

its,

on,

at

V29

for

in

m,

to

ver

to

his

or-

ann it

ant

wo

hey

nd,

or-

in wer

nan

ntly

eps

le-

nily

it,

ble

to

AT a Town called Nairne, not far from hence, an Officer who hoped to get a Recruit or two (though contrary to an Order to enlist no Scotsman while the Regiment was in Scotland, because otherwise, in the Course of several Years, it might, by Mortality, become almost a Scots Regiment instead of English,) I say, this Officer sent for a Piper to play about the Town before the Serjeant as more agreeable to the People than a Drum.

AFTER fome Time our Landlord came to us, and, for an Introduction, told us the Piper was a very good Gentleman, thinking, I suppose, that otherwise we should not shew him due Respect according to his Rank: He then went out, and returning with him, he introduced our Musician to us, who entered the Room like a Spaniard, with a grave Air, and stately Steps: At first he seemed to expect we should treat him according to the Custom

tom of the Country, by asking him to sit and take a Glass with us, but we were not well enough bred for that, and let him stand, with a disappointed Countenance, to hear what was to be his Employment. This we partly did, as knowing we had in his

T

hir

he

is Str Ser

in to t

In an

Cai Par

reft

nov

ust

falle

Hor

fc

he r

Wi

Loa

on othe

Scots

but '

whic

Dirt

their

T

Referve a better Way of making our Court.

In the Evening when he returned with the Serjeant, our Landlord made him a kind of Speech before us, telling him (for he came two Miles) that we had fent to him rather than any other, having heard how excellent he was in his Way, and at the fame Time stole into his Hand the two Shillings that were ordered him, with as much Caution as if he had been bribing at an Election, or feeing an Attorney-General before Company.

'Twas now quite another Countenance, and being pleased with his Reward which was great in this Country, being no less than one Pound sour Shillings, he expressed his Gratitude by playing a Voluntary on his Pipe for more than half an Hour, as he strided backward and forward, without-side of the House, under our Window.

HERE is Gentility in Disguise — and I am sorry to say, that this Kind of Vanity, in People of no Fortune, makes them ridiculous to Strangers, and I wish they could divest themselves of it, and apply to something more substantial than the airy Notion of Ancient Family, which, by extending our Thoughts, we shall find may be claimed by all Mankind.

But it may be said that this Pretention procures them some Respect from those who are every Way their Equals, if not superior to them, except in this Particular. This I grant, and there lies the Mischief, for by that flattering Conceit, and the Respect shewn them, they are brought to be ashamed of honest Employments, which perhaps they want

ake

red

ted

OV-

lin

er-

ech

hat

ing

at

hil-

ion

ing

and

t in our

g a

our,

fide

rry

no

and ply

oti-

our

all

ures

Vay

this

Aif-

Re-

ned

rant

28

s much or more than the others, and which might be advantageous to them, their Families, and Country. Thus you fee a Gentleman may be a mercenary Piper, or keep a little Ale-house where he brews his Drink in a Kettle; but to be of any working Trade, however profitable, would be a Difgrace to him, his present Relations, and all his Ancestry. If this be not a proper Subject of Ridicule, I think there never was any fuch Thing.

Bur to return to Town after my Ramble: Here s a melancholy Appearance of Objects in the Streets. In one Part the poor Women, Maid-Servants, and Children, in the coldest Weather, in the Dirt or in Snow, either walking or standing to talk with one another without Stockings or Shoes. In another Place, you fee a Man dragging along an half-starved Horse little bigger than an As, in a Cart about the Size of a Wheel-barrow. Part of his Plaid is wrapt round his Body, and the rest is thrown over his left Shoulder; and every now and then he turns himself about either to adust his Mantle, when blown off by the Wind, or allen by his stooping; or to thump the poor little Horse with a great Stick. The Load in his Cart, f compact, might be carried under his Arm, but he must not bear any Burden himself, though his Wife has, perhaps, at the same Time a greater Load on her Loyns than he has in his Cart: I fay on her Loyns, for the Women carry Fish, and? other heavy Burdens, in the same Manner as the Scots Pedlars carry their Packs in England.

THE poor Men are feldom barefoot in the Town, but wear Brogues, a Sort of Pumps without Heels, which keep them little more from the Wet and Dirt than if they had none, but they ferve to defend their Feet from the Gravel and Stones.

THEY

THEY have three several Sorts of Carts, of which that Species wherein they carry their Peats (being a light Kind of Loading) is the largest; but as they too are very small, their Numbers are sometimes so great, that they fill up one of the Streets, (which is the Market for that Fewel) in such Manner, it is impossible to pass by them on Horse-back, and difficult on Foot.

It is really provoking to fee the Idleness and Inhumanity of some of the Leaders of this Sort of Carts; for as they are something higher than the Horse's Tail, in the Motion, they keep rubbing against it, 'till the Hair is worn off and the Dock quite raw, without any Care taken to prevent it, or to ease the Hurt when discovered.

Some of these Carts are led by Women, who are generally bare-foot, with a Blanket for the covering of their Bodies, and in cold or wet Weather they bring it quite over them.

Ar other times they wear a Piece of Linen upon their Heads, made up like a Napkin Cap in an Inn, only not tied at-top, but hanging down behind.

INSTEAD of Ropes for Halters and Harness, they generally make use of Sticks of Birch twisted and knotted together; these are called Woodies, but some sew have Ropes made of the Manes and Tails of their Horses, which are shorn in the Spring for that Purpose.

THE Horse-Collar and Crupper are made of Straw-bands; and, to save the Horse's Back, they put under the Cart-saddle a Parcel of old Rags.

THEIR Horses are never dressed or shod, and appear, as we say, as ragged as Colts. In short, if you were to see the whole Equipage, you would not think it possible for any Droll-Painter to invent so perfect a Picture of Misery.

IF

St

2

10 bo

ha

an

ha

th

ha

are

at

the

ha

Gı

and

wh

the

ver

ate

in g

Str

in ]

s li

and

ried

blac

wo

off,

Roa

Wh

f t

vere

Ir the Horse carries a Burden upon his Back, a Stick of a Yard long goes across under his Tail for a Crupper; but this I have feen in Prints of the loaded Mules in Italy.

of

ats

out

are

the

in

on

In-

of

the

ing

ock

it,

vho

the

ea-

pon

nn,

hey

and

but

ails

for

e of

they

ap-

t, if ould

vent

IF

WHEN the Carter has had Occasion to turn about one Sort of these Carts in a narrow Place. I have feen him take up the Cart, Wheels and all. and walk round with it, while the poor little Horse has been strugling to keep himself from being thrown.

THE Wheels, when new, are about a Foot and half high, but are foon worn very fmall: They are made of three Pieces of Plank, pinned together at the Edges like the Head of a Butter Firkin, and the Axletree goes round with the Wheel, which having some Part of the Circumference with the Grain, and other Parts not, it wears unequally, and in a little Time is rather angular than round. which causes a disagreeable Noise, as it moves upon the Stones.

I HAVE mentioned these Carts, Horses, and Drivers, or rather Draggers of them, not as immediately relating to the Town, but as they increase, n great Measure, the wretched Appearance in the Streets, for these Carters, for the most Part, live n Huts dispersed in the adjacent Country. slittle Need of Carts for the Business of the Town; and when a Hogshead of Wine has been to be carried to any Part not very far distant, it has been placed upon a kind of Frame among four Horses, wo on a Side, following each other; for not far off, except along the Sea-Coast, and some new Road, the Ways are fo rough and rocky that no Wheel ever turned upon them fince the Formation of this Globe; and therefore if the Townsmen vere furnished with sufficient Wheel-Carriages for Goods of great Weight, they would be feldom use ful.

n

m

T

ca

th tal

gro

re

re

whe

Var

n a beer

Mar

H

ime

rou

half

iver

nore ne a

vise ]

THE Description of these puny Vehicles bring to my Memory how I was entertained with the Surprize and Amusement of the common People in this Town, when, in the Year 1725, a Chariot, with fix monstrous great Horses, arrived here by Way of the Sea Coast. An Elephant, publickly exposed in one of the Streets of London, could not have excited greater Admiration. One asked what the Chariot was; another, who had feen the Gentlemen alight, told the first, with a Sneer at his Ignorance, it was a great Cart to carry People in and fuch like. But fince the making of some of the Roads, I have passed through them with a Friend W and was greatly delighted to see the Highlander and was greatly delighted to fee the riightance of run from their Huts close to the Chariot, and look of the chariot. little regarding us that were within.

'Tis not unlikely they looked upon him as a kin of Prime Minister, that guided so important a Ma chine, and perhaps they might think that we wer his Masters, but had delivered the Reins into h Hands, and, at that Time, had little or no Wi of our own, but suffered ourselves to be conducted by him as he thought fit; and therefore their Ad dreffes were directed to the Minister, at least i the first Place, for Motion would not allow us fee a fecond Bow, if they were inclined to make

it.

IT is a common Thing, for the poorest Son hereabouts, to lead their Horses out in Summer when they have done their Work, and attend the while they graze by the Sides of the Roads an Edges of the Corn Fields, where there is any little Grass to be had without a Trespass, and general tripp they hold them all the while by the Hatler, for

ule-

ings

Sure in riot,

e by ickly

le in

of the

iend

look

man

a kin Ma

wen

the

they are certainly punished, if it be known they encroached ever so little upon a Field, of which none are inclosed. In like Manner you may see a Man tending a fingle Cow for the greatest Part of the Day. In Winter the Horse is allowed no more Provender than will barely keep him alive. and fometimes not even that, for I have known almost two Hundred of them, near the Town, to d not die of mere Want, within a small Compass of what Time. You will find in another Letter how I Gen-t his came to know their Numbers.

CERTAINLY nothing can be more difagreeable than to fee them pass the Streets before this Mortality, hanging down their Heads, reeling with Weakness; and having Spots of their Skins of a nder Foot diameter appearing without Hair, the effect of their exceeding Poverty: But the Mares in par-icular are yet a more unfeemly Sight.

WHEN the Grass in the Season is pretty well grown, the Country People cut it and bring it treen to the Town for Sale, to feed the Horses that re kept in it, as others likewise do to Edinburgh, to his where there is a spacious Street, known by the Will Name of the Grass Market; and this is customary n all the Parts of the Low-Country, where I have it Adoes, at the Time of the Year for that Kind of the Marketing.

Us to Hay is here a rare Commodity indeed; fome-make imes there is none at all; and I have had it brought me forty Miles by Sea, at the Rate of half a Crown or three Shillings a Truss. I have given Twenty-pence for a Bundle of Straw, not more than one of our Trusses, and Oats have cost me at the Rate of four Shillings a Bushel, otherwise I must have seen, as we say, my Horses Skins herall tripped over their Ears. But this is not always er, so the Case, for sometimes, after the Harvest, Oats and Straw have been pretty reasonable.

A CERTAIN Officer, foon after his Arrival at this Town, observing in what a miserable State the Horses were, and finding his own would cost him more in keeping than was well consistent with his Pay, shot them. And being asked why he did not rather chuse to sell them, though but for a small Matter, his Answer was, They were old Servants, and his Compassion for them would not suffer him to let them fall into the Hands of such Keepers. And indeed the Town Horses are but sparingly sed, as you may believe, especially when their Provender is at such an extravagant Price.

HERE are four or five Fairs in the Year, when the Highlanders bring their Commodities to Market: But, good God! you could not conceive then

C

YO

the

H

you

eve

tha

hav

end

I fi

not

you

to c ima nake

with amo

I hav

at N

I

was fuch Mifery in this Island.

ONE has under his Arm a small Roll of Lines another a Piece of coarse Plaiding: These are con But the Merchandize of the fiderable Dealers. greatest Part of them, is of a most contemptible Value, fuch as these, viz. Two or three Cheese of about three of four Pound Weight a-piece; Kid, fold for Six-pence or Eight-pence at the most a small Quantity of Butter in something that look like a Bladder, and is fometimes fet down upon the Dirt in the Street; three or four Goat-Sking; Piece of Wood for an Axletree to one of the little Carts, &c. With the Produce of what each them fells, they generally buy fomething, viz. Horn, or wooden Spoon or two, a Knife, a woode Platter, and fuch-like Necessaries for their Huts and carry Home with them little or no Money.

I AM just now told the Mail is about to be sealed and therefore must refer you to my next for the Conclusion of this melancholy Description.

)ati

l at

the

nim his not nall ints,

pers

fed. venwhen

Mar-

there

inen

CON

f th

ptible

eeles

e;

molt

look

on th

ins;

e littl

ach o viz.

voode

Hut

ey.

fealer

for th

P. S. You may fee one eating a large Onion without Salt or Bread; another gnawing a Carrot. &c. These are Rairities not to be had in their own Parts of the Country.

LETTER V.

I Almost long for the Time when I may expect your Thoughts of my Letters relating to this Country, and should not at all be surprized to find you fay, as they do after Ten o' Clock at Night in the Wyndes and Closes of Edinburgh - Hud your Haunde.

Bur if that fhould be the Case, I can plead your Injunction and the Nature of the Subject.

UPON fecond Thoughts, I take it, we are just even with one another, for you cannot complain that these Letters are not satisfactory, because I have been only doing the Duty of a Friend, by endeavouring to gratify your Curiofity; nor can I find any Cause of Blame in you, fince you could not possibly conceive the Consequence of the Task you enjoined me. But, according to my Promise, to continue my Account of our Highland Fair.

If you would conceive rightly of it, you must imagine you fee two or three Hundred half naked, half starved Creatures of both Sexes, without fo much as a Smile or any Cheerfulness among them, stalking about with Goods, such as I have described, up to their Ancles in Dirt; and, at Night, Numbers of them lying together in Stables. Stables, or other Out-house Hovels, that are hardly any Defence against the Weather. I am speaking of a Winter Fair, for, in Summer, the greatest

F

S

01 bi

it

de

be

66

of

lar

an

be

he

ftre

fay

Ma

the

саг

tak

in i

the

had of

con

WOI

1

Part of them lie about in the open Country.

THE Gentlemen, Magistrates, Merchants, and Shop-keepers, are dress'd after the English Manner, and make a good Appearance enough, according to their several Ranks, and the working Tradesmen are not very ill cloathed; and now and then, to relieve your Eyes yet more from these frequent Scenes of Misery, you see some of their Women of Fashion; I say sometimes, for they go seldom Abroad; but, when they appear, they are generally well dressed in the English Mode.

As I have touch'd upon the Dress of the Men, I shall give you a notable Instance of Precaution used by some of them against the Taylor's purloining.

This is to buy up every Thing that goes to the making of a Suit of Cloaths, even to the Stay-tape and Thread; and when they are to be delivered out, they are, altogether, weighed before the Taylor's Face.

AND when he brings Home the Suit, it is again put into the Scale with the Shreds of every Sort, and it is expected the Whole shall answer the original Weight. But I was told in Edinburgh of the same Kind of Circumspection, but not as a common Practice.

THE Plaid is the Undress of the Ladies, and to a genteel Woman, who adjusts it with a good Air, is a becoming Veil. But as I am pretty sure you never saw one of them in England, I shall employ a few Words to describe it to you. It is made of Silk or fine Worsted, chequered with various lively Colours, two Breadths wide, and three Yards in Length; it is brought over the Head, and may hide, or discover the Face, according to the Wearer's Fancy

Fancy or Occasion: It reaches to the Waist behind; one Corner falls as low as the Ancle on one Side; and the other Part, in Folds, hangs down from the opposite Arm.

d

۲,

0

n

to nt

of

m

e-

ed

g.

he

pe

ed

he

in

rt,

T1-

he

m-

to ir,

ou

loy

of

ely

in

ay

r's

icy

I HAVE been told in Edinburgh that the Ladies distinguish their Political Principles, whether Whig or Tory, by the Manner of wearing their Plaids; that is, one of the Parties reverses the old Fashion, but which of them it is, I do not remember, nor is it material.

I Do affure you we have here, among the better Sort, a full Proportion of pretty Women, as, indeed, there is all over Scotland, But pray remember, I now anticipate the Jest, "That Women " grow handsomer and handsomer the longer one " continues from Home." at some Holl

THE Men have more Regard to the Comeliness of their Posterity, than in those Countries where a large Fortune serves to foften the hardest Features, and even to make the Crooked streight; and indeed their Definition of a fine Woman leems chiefly to be directed to that Purpose; for, after speaking of her Face, they fay, she's a fine, healthy, streight, strong, strapping Lasty.

I FANCY now I hear one of our delicate Ladies fay, 'tis just so they would describe a Flanders Mare. I am not for confounding the Characters of the two Sexes one with another, but I should not care to have my Son a valetudinary Being, partaking of his Mother's nice Constitution.

I was once commending, to a Lady of Fortune in London, the upright, firm, yet easy Manner of the Ladies Walking in Edinburgh. And when I had done, the fluttered her Fan, and with a Kind of Disdain, mixed with Jealousy to hear them commended; she said, Mr. ---, I do not at all wonder at that, they are used to walk.

MY

My next Subject is to be the Servants: I know little remarkable of the Men, only that they are generally great Lovers of Ale; but my poor Maids, if I may judge of others by what passes in my own Quarters, have not had the best of Chances, when their Lots fell to be born in this Country. It is true, they have not a great deal of Houshold Work to do, but when that little is done, they are kept to Spinning, by which some of their Mistresses are chiefly maintained. Sometimes there are two or three of them in a House of no greater Number of Rooms, at the Wages of three half Crowns a Year each, a Peck of Oatmeal for a Week's Diet, and happy she, that can get the Skimming of a Pot to mix with her Oatmeal for better Commons.

To this Allowance is added a Pair of Shoes or two, for Sundays, when they go to Kirk.

These are such as are kept at Board-Wages. In larger Families, I suppose, their Standing-Wages is not much more, because they make no better Appearance than the others. But if any one of them happens, by the Encouragement of some English Family, or one more reasonable than ordinary among the Natives, to get Cloaths something better than the rest, it is ten to one but Envy excites them to tell her to her Face she must have been a Heure, or she cou'd n'ere ha getten sic bonny Geer.

ALL these generally lie in the Kitchen, a very improper Place one would think for a Lodging, especially of such who have not wherewithal to keep themselves clean.

They do several Sorts of Work with their Feet. I have already mentioned their Washing at the River. When they wash a Room, which the English Lodgers require to be sometimes done, they likewise do it with their Feet.

FIRST,

th

ft

fo

P

th

it

til

ra

I

W

m

bu

pe

in

th

m

at

an

th

H

fhe

th

m

wh

W.a

nu

ear

the

100

First, they spread a wet Cloth upon Part of the Floor; then, with their Coats tucked up, they stand upon the Cloth and shuffle it backward and sorward with their Feet; then they go to another Part, and do the same, till they have gone all over the Room. After this they wash the Cloth, spread it again, and draw it along in all Places, by Turns, till the whole Work is finished. This last Operation draws away all the remaining soul Water. I have seen this likewise done at my Lodgings, within a Quarter of a Mile of Edinburgs.

n

is k

pt

re

70

of 11 bi

to 10

es.

g-

10 ne

ne

li-

ng

X-

ve

ny

ry

g, ep

et.

he

he ie,

T,

WHEN I first saw it, I ordered a Mop to be made, and the Girls to be shewn the Use of it; but, as it is said of the Spaniards, there was no persuading them to change their old Method.

I HAVE feen Women by the River's Side washing Parsnips, Turnips, and Herbs, in Tubs with their Feet. An English Lieutenant Colonel told me, that, about a Mile from the Town, he saw, at some little Distance, a Wench turning and twisting herself about as she stood in a little Tub, and as he could perceive, being on Horseback, that there was no Water in it, he rid up close to her, and sound she was grinding off the Beards and Hulls of Barley with her naked Feet, which Barley she said was to make Broth withall: And, since that, upon Enquiry, I have been told it is a common Thing,

THEY hardly ever wear Shoes, as I faid before, but on a Sunday; and then, being unused to them, when they go to Church, they walk very aukwardly; or, as we say, like a Cat shod with Walnut-shells.

I HAVE seen some of them come out of Doors, early in a Morning, with their Legs covered up to the Calf with dried Dirt, the Remains of what they contracted in the Streets the Day before; in short, a Stranger might think there was but little Occation for firic Laws against low Fornication.

WHEN they go Abroad, they wear a Blanket over their Heads, as the poor Women do, fomething like the Pictures you may have feen of some bare-footed Order among the Romifb Priests.

And the same Blanket that serves them for a Mantle by Day, is made a Part of their Bedding at Night, which is generally spread upon the Floor; this, I think, they call a Shakedown.

I MAKE no Doubt you are, long before this, fully satisfied of the Truth of my Prediction in the first Letter; for, to make you thoroughly acquainted with these remote Parts, you see I have been reduced to Tittle Tattle as low as that of a gossiping Woman: However, as I am in-fort, I must now proceed.

LET those who deride the Dirtiness and Idleness of these poor Creatures, which my Countrymen are too apt to do, as I observed before; let them, I fay, consider what Inclination they can have to recommend themselves? What Emulation can there proceed from meer Despair? Cleanliness is too expensive for their small Wages, and what Inducement can they have, in fuch a Station, to be diligent and obliging to those who use them more like Negroes than Natives of Britain. Befides, it is not any Thing in Nature that renders them more idle and uncleanly than others, as fome would inconfiderately fuggest, because many of them, when they happen to be transplanted into a richer Soil, grow as good Servants as any whatever; and this! have known by Experience.

that it cannot reflect and make Comparisons of its Condition; otherwise how miserable would be the Children of the Poor that one sees continually in

the

tľ

10 n L

B

d

tl

ſŧ

B

h

W

W

lo

k

13 0 tl

tl

D

W

h

(t

to

m

C

de

fo

the Streets! Their wretched Food makes them look Pot-belly'd; they are feldom washed; and many of them have their Hair clipped, all but 2 Lock that hangs down over the Forehead, like the Representation of old Time in a Picture; the Boys have nothing but a coarfeKind of Vest, buttoned down the Back, as if they were Idiots, and their Coats are fo made, to prevent their often stripping themselves quite naked.

CC4-

ket

me-

me

ra

ing

the

his,

the

ac-

ave

f a

ness

nen

, 1

to

ere

too

ce-

ili-

ike

is

ore

innen

oil,

is I

re,

its

the

in the

THE Girls have a Piece of a Blanket wrapped about their Shoulders, and are bare-headed like the Boys, and both without Stockings and Shoes in the hardest of Seasons. But what feems to me the worst of all, is, they are over-run with the Itch, which continues upon them from Year to Year, without any Care taken to free them from that loathsome Distemper. Nor indeed is it possible to keep them long from it, except all could agree, it is so universal among them. And, as the Children of People in better Circumstances are not nice in the Choice of their Companions and Play-fellows, they are most of them likewise infected with this Disease, insomuch that upon entering a Room, where there was a pretty Boy or Girl that I should have been pleased to have caressed and played with, (besides the Compliment of it to the Father and Mother) it has been a great Disappointment to me to discover, it could not be done with Safety to myself. And though the Children of the upper Classes, wear Shoes and Stockings in Winter-time, yet nothing is more common than to see them barefoot in the Summer.

I HAVE often been a Witness, that when the Father or Mother of the leffer Children has ordered their Shoes and Stockings to be put on, as soon as ever they had an Opportunity they have

D 4

pulled pulled them off, which I suppose was done to set their Feet at Liberty.

FROM the Sight of these Children in the Streets, I have heard some reflect, that many a gay Equipage, in other Countries, has fprung from a Bonnet and bare Feet; but for my own Part, I think, a Fortune, obtained by worthy Actions, or honest Industry, does real Honour to the Possessor; yet the Generality are fo far misled by customary Notions, as to call the Founder of an honourable Family, an Upstart; and a very unworthy Descendant is honoured with that Esteem which was with-But what is yet more exheld from his Ancestor. traordinary is, that every Successor grows more honourable with Time, though it be but barely on that Account, as if it were an accepted Principal, that a Stream must needs run the clearer the farther it is removed from the Fountain Head. But Antiquity gives a Sanction to any Thing.

I HAVE but little Conversation with the Inhabitants of this Town, except some sew who are not comprehended in any Thing I have said, or will be, in any Thing I am about to say of the Generality. The Coldness between the Magistrates, and Merchants, and myself, has arisen from a Shyness in them towards me, and my Disinclination to any Kind of Intimacy with them. And therefore I think I may freely mention the narrow Way they are in, without the Imputation of a Spy, as some of them soolishly gave out I was, in my Absence when last in London.

IF I had had any Inclination to expose their Proceedings in another Place, (for they were publick enough here) I might have done it long ago, perhaps to my Advantage; but those deceitful boggy Ways lie quite out of my Road to Profit or Preference.

UPON

f

h

(

V

b

(

d

ti

tl

fo

0 ar

bı

er

qi

Ò

ca

Ju

ar

po

fer

tw

an lity

WO

Set

ets,

ui-

on-nk,

nest

yet

No-

Fa-

en-

th-

ex-

ore

on pal,

her

An-

bi-

not

will

ne-

tes,

1 2

na-

And

wor

py,

my

ro-

lick

er-

ggy

fer-

PON

Upon my Return, I asked some of them how such a scandalous Thought could ever enter into their Heads, since they knew I had little Conversation with them; and that, on the contrary, if I resided here in that infamous Capacity, I should have endeavoured to infinuate myself into their Considence, and put them upon such Subjects as would enable me to perform my treacherous Office; but that I never so much as heard there was any Concern about them, for they were so obscure, I did not remember ever to have heard of Inverness till it was my Lot to know it so well as I did.

And besides, that nothing could be more publick than the Reason of my Continuance among them. This produced a Denial of the Fact from some, and in others a Mortification, whether real or feigned, is not much my Concern.

I shall here take Notice, that there is hardly any Circumstance or Description I have given you, but what is known to some one Officer or more of every Regiment in Britain, as they have been quartered here by Rotation. And if there were Occasion, I might appeal to them for a Justification (the Interested excepted) that I have exaggerated nothing, and I promise you I shall pursue the same Route throughout all my Progress.

I wish I could say more to the Integrity of our own lower Order of Shopkeepers, than Truth and Justice will allow me to do; but these, I think, are sharper (to use no worse an Expression) in Proportion as their Temptations are stronger.

HAVING Occasion for some Holland Cloth, I sent to one of these Merchants, who brought me two or three Pieces, which I just looked upon, and told him that as I neither understood the Quality, or knew the Price of that Sort of Goods, I would make him, as we say, both Seller and Buyer,

D 5

referving

referving to himself the same Profit as he would take from others. At first he started at the Proposal, and having recollected himself, he said, I cannot deal in that Manner; I asked him why? but I could get nothing more from him, but that it was not their Way of Dealing.

Upon this, I told him it was apparently his Design to have over-reached me, but that he had some Probity lest, which he did not seem to know of, by resuling my Offer; because it carried with it a Trust and Considence in his Honesty, and thereupon we parted.

SINCE that, I made the fame Proposal to a Mercer in Edinburgh, and was fairly and honestly dealt with.

Bur the Instances some of these People give of their Distrust one of another, in Matters of a most trifling Value, would fill any Stranger with Notions very disadvantageous to the Credit of the one Office

Generality.

I sent one Day to a Merchant's hard by for some little Thing I wanted, which being brought me by my Servant, he laugh'd, and told me, that while he was in the Shop, there came in the Maid-Servant of another Merchant with a Message from her Master, which was to borrow an Ell to measure a Piece of Cloth, and to signify that he had sent a Napkin, that is, a Handkerchief, as a Pledge for its being returned.

THAT the Maid took the Ell, and was going away with it without leaving the Security; upon which the Merchant's Wife called out hastily and earnestly to her for the Pawn, and then the Wench pulled it out of her Bosom, and gave it to her, not without some seeming Shame for her Attempt to go away with it.

ť

fi

fi

fe

n

0 ti

C

tl

h

25

W

0

h tı

e

CI

0

be

21

SPEAKING of an Ell Measure, brings to my Mind a Thing that passed a few Weeks ago when I was prefent.

uld

po-

an-

at I

was

his

had now

vith

and 0 2

ftly

e of

noft

No-

the

ome

e by hile

Ser-

her

rea

nt a

for oing

pon

and ench

not

t to

ING

An English Gentleman sent for a Wright, or Carpenter, to make him an Ell, but before the Workman came, he had borrowed one, and offered it as a Pattern. No, Sir, says the Man, it must not be made by this, for yours, I suppose, is to be for Buying, and this is to sell by.

I HAVE not myself intirely escaped Suspicions of my Honesty; for sending one Day to a Shop for some two-penny Business, a Groat was demanded for it; the two-pence was taken, the Thing was sent, but my Boy's Cap was detained for the remaining half of that confiderable Sum.

It is a common Observation with the English, that when several of these People are in Competition for some profitable Business or Bargain, each of them speaks to the Disadvantage of his Competitors.

Some Time ago, there was Occasion to hire Ovens wherewith to bake Bread for the Soldiery then encamped near the Town. The Officer who had the Care of providing those Ovens, thought fit, as the first Step towards his Agreements, to talk with several of the Candidates separately, at their own Houses, and to see what Conveniency they had wherewith to perform a Contract of that Nature. In the Course of this Enquiry, he found that every one of them was speaking not much to the Advantage of the rest, and, in the Conclusion, he cried out, Every one of these Men tells me the others are Rogues, and, added with an Oath, I believe them all.

But, on the other Hand, if we ask of almost any one of them, who is quite disinterested, the Character of some working Tradesman, though the latter be not at all beholden to Fame, the Anfwer to our Enquiry will be—there is not an honester Lad in all Britain.

This is done in order to fecure the Profit to their own Countrymen, for the Soldiers rival them in many Things, especially in Handicrast Trades. I take this last to be upon the Principle, (for certainly it is one with them) that every Gain they make of the English, is an Acquisition to their Country.

But I defire I may not be understood to speak of all in general, for there are several among them, whom, I believe, in Spight of Education, to be very worthy honest Men; I say against Education, because I have often observed, by Children of seven or eight Years old, that when they have been asked a Question, they have either given an indirect Answer at first, or considered for a Time what Answer was sittest for them to make: And this was not my Observation alone, but that of several others, upon Trial, which made us conclude, that such Precaution, at such an Age, could not be other than the Effect of Precept.

P. S. I have feveral Times been told, by Gentlemen of this Country, with whom I have contracted Acquaintance and Friendship, that others have said it would have been but just that some Native had had my Appointment; and once it was hinted to me directly. This induced me to say (for I could not help it) I should readily agree to it, and chearfully resign, and would further take upon me to answer for all my Countrymen, that they should do the same, provided no Scotsman had any Government Employment be-south the Tweed; and then I doubted not, but there would be ample Room at Home for us all. This I should not have chosen to say, but it was begged, and I gave it.

LETTER

out

Vi

her

bro

Sex

Co

and

me led

fpoi

Para Scot.

Lib fore

a T

after

I

5

LETTER VI.

S I am inclined to give you a Tafte of every Thing this Country affords, I shall now step out of my Way for a little while, to acquaint you, that the other Day, in the Evening, I made a Visit to a Laird's Lady, who is much esteemed for her Wit, and really not without fome Reason.

AFTER a good deal of Tea Table Chat, she brought upon the Carpet the Subject of her own Sex, and thence her Ladyship proceeded, to some Comparisons, between the Conduct of the English and Scots Women.

nan

to m es, Tey 115

ak n, be n, en

en j.

at

as

0-

al

e

1-

1-

rs

1-

t-

I

d

e ď

-I

t

n

SHE began in a Sort of jeering Manner, to tell me our Females are great Enemies to Dust, which led me to answer, - It was no Wonder, for it spoiled their Furniture, and dirted their Cloaths.

In the next Place she entertained me with a Parallel between the Amours of the English and Scots Women. The English, she said, often take Liberties after they are married, and feldom before; whereas the Scots Women, when they make a Trip, it is while they are fingle, and very rarely afterwards: And indeed this last is not often known, except

except among those who think themselves above

m

ou

en

m

th

vi

th

D

m

the

Ju

cu

ma

be

no

ma

for

eve

Di

I

tha

mo

W

28

the

fan

fati

dor

a I

nev

Ge

the

gen Par

Reputation and Scandal.

Now as she had condescended to own that the Scotish Females are frail as well as ours, though in different Circumstances of Life, which was, indeed, an Acknowledgment beyond what I expected; I could not, for that Reason, persuade myself to mention another Difference, which is, that the English Women are not so well watched.

THERE were many other Things said upon this Subject, which I shall not trouble you with; but I must tell you, that this Conversation reminds me of a Passage, which, perhaps, might otherwise never have recurred to my Memory, or, at most, would have been little regarded.

ONE Day, when I was in Edinburgh, I walked out with three married Women, whose Husbands, fome Time after Dinner, retired to their respective Avocations or Diversions, and left them to my Conduct. As we approached the Fields, we happened to meet a Woman with Cherries: This gave me an Opportunity to treat the Ladies with fome of that Fruit; and as we were walking along, fays one of them to me, Mr. - there is a good deal of Difference between a married Woman in Scotland and one in England. — Here are now three of us, and I believe I may venture to fay, we could not, all of us together, purchase one fingle Pound of Cherries. You may be fure I thought their Credit very low at that Time, and I endeavoured to turn it off as an Accident; but she told me that fuch Kind of Vacuities were pretty general among the married Women in Scotland, and upon her Appeal to the other two, it was con-

I HAVE often heard it faid, of the English, that the Men are not our Friends, but I think the Females males have no Aversion to us. Not that I fancy our Persons are better made, or that we are more engaging in any Respect than their own Countrymen; but from the Notion that prevails among them, (at least such as I have been acquainted with) viz. that the English are the kindest Husbands in the World. Perhaps it may be said, I was their Dupe, and did not discover the Sneer at what they may think a too-precarious Considence, of which their Sex is, without Doubt, the most competent

Judge.

ove

the

in

in-

ex-

ade

is,

this

but

me

wife

oft,

Ked

nds,

pec-

my

nap-This

with

ng,

is 2

No-

are

e to

one

re I

and etty

and,

con-

Feales

But I have heard some of these Ladies first accuse the English Women, and then treat the Chimara with fuch excessive Virulence, that I have been tempted to suspect it proceeded from Jealousy, not unattended by Envy, at that Liberty which may give Opportunities for fuch Unfaithfulness: for otherwise I think it might have been sufficient. even if the Fact were true, barely to shew their Diflike of fuch a perfidious Conduct. And besides, I cannot fay it has not happened in the World. that the most fevere Censure has been changed to a more charitable Opinion from Experience of human Weakness, or that fuch Virulence was never used as a Means to excite a Conquest. To conclude these Remarks; I think it was not over complaifant to a Stranger, to bring fuch a general Accufation against his Countrywomen: And if I had done as much by them, it might have been deemed a National Reflection. But to me it would be a new kind of Knight-Errantry, to fight with the Gentlewomen in Defence of the Ladies; and therefore I contented myself with turning (in as genteel a Manner as I could) their Accusation and Parade of Virtue into Ridicule.

othe

rage

vert

land Inte

vere

row

may

Tha

took

Mo

den.

for t a Sa

fo lo

ing,

cessi

fider

Dep

men

fels,

Mar

Lan

and

the

the 1

the

vels:

enter

liar t

Pack

in D

T

T

A

Bur to return to my general Purpose.

THE working Tradesmen, for the most Part. are indolent; and no Wonder, fince they have fo little Incitement to Industry, or profitable Employment to encourage them to it.

IF a Bolt for a Door be wanted, the Dweller often fupplies it with one of Wood, and fo of many other Things, infomuch that the poor Smith is fometimes hardly enabled to maintain himself in Oatmeal.

THE Neatness of a Carpenter's Work is little regarded. If it will just answer the Occasion, and come very cheap, it is enough. I shall not trouble you with further Instances. But to shew you what they might be, if they had Encouragement, I shall mention a Passage that related to myself. I fent one Day for a Wright (they have no fuch Distinction as foyner) to make me an Engine to shop Straw withal for my Horses, and told him it must be neatly made, and I would pay him accordingly; otherwise, when it was done, it would be his own. The young Man, instead of being discouraged by the Danger of losing his Time and Materials, was overjoyed at the Conditions, and told me, at the fame Time, that he should be quite undone, if he was long about Work which he did for his Countrymen, for in that Case they would not pay him for his Time. In fine, he made me the Machine, which was more like the Work of one of your Cabinet-Makers in London, than that of an Inverness Carpenter: And he brought it Home in as little Time as I could reasonably expect.

HERE I may observe, that when a young Fellow finds he has a Genius for his Trade or Bufiness, and has any Thing of Spirit, he generally lays hold of the first Occasion to remove to England, or some other other Country, where he hopes for better Encouragement. Hence, I take it, arose a Kind of Proverb, That there never came a Fool out of Scotland. Some perhaps would be giving this a different Interpretation, but what I mean is, that the cleverest and most sprightly among them leave the narrow Way of their own Country: And from this may come, for aught I know, another saying, That they seldom desire to return Home.

This very Man, of whom I have been speaking, took Occasion to tell me, that in two or three Months he should go to seek Employment in London.

rt.

fo

y.

ler

of

th

in

tle

nd

u-

ou

nt.

lf.

ch

to

it

C-

ld

ng

nd

nd

te

id

ld

1e

of

at

it

[-

W

d

of

er

THE Fishermen would not be mentioned, but for their remarkable Laziness; for they might find a Sale for much more Sea-Fish than they do; but so long as any Money remains of the last Marketing, and until they are driven out by the last Necessity, they will not meddle with Salt Water.

Ar low Ebb, when their Boats lie off at a confiderable Distance from the Shore, for Want of Depth of Water, the Women tuck up their Garments to an indecent Height, and wade to the Vessels, where they receive their Loads of Fish for the Market; and when the whole Cargo is brought to Land, they take the Fishermen upon their Backs, and bring them on Shore in the same Manner.

THERE is here none of that Emulation among the ordinary People, or any of that Pride which the meanest Cottagers in England generally take in the Cleanliness and little Ornaments of their Hovels; yet, at the same Time, these poor Wretches entertain a Kind of Pride which is, I think, peculiar to themselves.

THE Officers of a certain Regiment kept here a Pack of Beagles, and suspecting some of them to be in Danger of the Mange, they sent to the Boat-

men

ma

mu

of t

Apa

fma

Fac

Far

ope

ent

was

ma

tity

wei

lay

ano

fam

wh

int

ref

ble

up

tha

Cle

25

at

Ne

to:

fan

by

the lai

Tel

ab

at

(

men to take them out a little Way to Sea, and throw them over-board, imagining their Swimming in Salt Water would cure them of the Diftemper, if they were infected. The Servant of fered them good Hire for their Trouble, but they gave him bad Language, and told him they would not do it. Upon this, some of the Officers were themselves, and, in Hopes to prevail, offer'd them a double Reward; but they said they would not, for any Money, do a Thing so scandalous as to freight their Boats with Dogs, and absolutely resulted it.

The poorest Creature that loses a Horse, by Death, would sell him for Three-pence to a Soldier, who made it a Part of his Business to buy them, and he made not only Six-pence of the Carcass to feed the Hounds, but got two Shillings of half a Crown for the Hide. But the Owner would not flea the Horse, though he knew very well how to do it, as almost every one here, and in the Highlands, is something of a Tanner; and their Reason is, that it is an Employment only fit for the Hangman. Upon this Principle, the Soldier was frequently pursued in the Streets by the Children, and called by that opprobrious Name.

People here, and hereabouts, they will answer you by Haniel Sasson (or English). This they do to save the Trouble of giving other Answers; but they have been frequently brought, by the Officers, to speak that Language by the same Method that Moliere's Faggot binder was forced to confess himself a Doctor of Physick.

THE Lodgings of the ordinary People are indeed most miserable ones, and even those of some, who make make a tolerable Appearance in the Streets, are not much better.

wim.

Dif

t of ther

rould

went hem

not,

is to fused

by

Sol-

buy

Car-

gs or ould

how igh-

afon

ang-

fre-

and

nary

you

eak,

the

ave

eak

re's

oc-

eed

vho

ake

Going along with some Company toward one of the Out-parts of the Town, I was shewn the Apartment of a young Woman, who looks pretty smart, when Abroad, and affects to adorn her Face with a good many Patches, but is of no ill Fame.

THE Door of the House, or rather Hutt, being open, and Nobody within, I was prevailed with to enter and observe so great a Curiosity. Her Bed was in one Corner of the Room upon the Ground, made up with Straw, and even that in small Quantity, and upon it lay a couple of Blankets which were her Covering, and that of two Children that lay with her. In the opposite Corner was just such another Bed for two young Fellows, who lay in the same Room.

Ar another Time I happened to be of a Party who had agreed to go five or fix and twenty Miles into the Highlands, a small Part by Land, and the rest by Water; but a Person, who was not agreeable to any of us, having, as we fay, pinn'd himfelf upon us, and being gone Home, it was refolved, that, to avoid him, we should set out at Ten o' Clock the fame Night, instead of the next Morning, as was at first intended. About Twelve we arrived at the End of Locb Nefs, where we were to wait for News from the Veffel. We were foon conducted to a House, where lives a Brother to the Pretender's famous Brigadier, and upon entering a large Room, by the Candle, we discovered, on different Parts of the Floor, nine Persons, including Children, all laid in the Manner above described, and among the rest, a young Woman, as near as I could guess, about feventeen or eighteen, who being furprized at the Light, and the Bustle we made, between Sleeping about the Lodgings of the meanest Sort of People.

Sleeping and Waking, threw off part of the Blankets, started up, stared at us earnestly, and, being stark naked, scratched herself in several Parts 'till thoroughly wakened.

I SHALL not go about to deny, because I would not willingly be laughed at, that the English Luxury is in every Thing carried to an exorbitant Height; but if there was here a little of that Vice, it would be well for the lower Order of People, who, by that Means, would likewise mend their Commons in Proportion to it.

By Accounts of the Plenty and Variety of Fool at the Tables of the Luxurious in England, the People, who have not eat with the English, conclude they are likewise Devourers of great Quantities of Victuals at a Meal, and at other Times talk of little else besides Eating. This is their Notion of us, but particularly of our Gormandizing. I shall give you one Instance.

Some Years ago I obtained the Favour and great Conveniency to board, for a Time, with an English Gentleman in a House near Edinburgh, of which the Proprietor retained the uppermost Flow to himself and Family.

Ir feems, by what follows, that this Gentleman had amused himself sometimes by observing what passed among us, and being one Day invited to our Table, after Dinner he told us very frankly, that he had been watching us all the Time we were Eating, because he had thought we must necessarily have large Stomachs to consume the Quantity of Victuals brought so often from the Market; but that now he concluded we were as moderate as any.

THUS

T

hil

ow hin

heir

F

any

not well

Diff

Coure o

cco

ives

Y

his

ver

vas

0 s yo

Rive ridg

ock

et f ites gyp

am IT

ithe

her

are.

e ha y, i

an

ing

till

ing

le. ould

ury

ht:

ould

by u in

000

Peo-

lit-

and

h an , of

loor

man

what our that vere

ffa-

ntity

ket;

rate

HUS

Thus the Wonder had been reciprocal; for thile he was furprized at our Plenty (not knowing now much was given away) we were at a Loss to hink how he and his Family could fublist upon heir slender Provision.

For my own Part I never dined in a mixt Company of Scots and English, but I found the former not only eat as much as the others, but feem'd as well pleased with the Delicacy and Diversity of the Dishes; but I shall make no Inference from thence.

'Trs from this Notion of the People, that my Countrymen, not only here, but all over Scotland, re dignified with the Title of Poke Pudding, which, ccording to the Sense of the Word among the Na-ives, fignifies a Glutton. YET this Reproach sh lude YET this Reproach should not deter me from sof giving you an Account of our Way of Living in his Country, that is, of our Eating, supposing fus, every one that charges us with that swinish Vice give was to read this Letter.

Our principal Diet then consists of such Things syou, in London, esteem to be the greatest Rariies, viz. Salmon and Trout just taken out of the River, and both very good in their Kind; Parridge, Grouft, Hare, Duck, and Mallard, Woodocks, Snipes, &c. each in its proper Season. et for the greatest Part of the Year, like the Ifraeites who longed for the Garlick and Onions of sypt, we are hankering after Beef, Mutton, Veal, amb, &c.

It is not only me, but every one that comes ither, is foon disgusted with these Kinds of Food, then obliged to eat them often for Want of other are, which is not feldom our Cafe.

THERE is hardly any fuch Thing as Mutton to chad'till August, or Beef'till September. That is to y, in Quality fit to be eaten, and both go out about Christmas.

Christmas. And therefore at or about Martinmas (the 11th of November) fuch of the Inhabitants, who are any Thing before-hand with the World, falt up a Quantity of Beef, as if they were going a Voyage. And this is common in all Parts of Scotland where I have been.

Ir would be long to fet down the Price of every Species of Provision. I shall only say, that Mutton and Beef are about a Penny a Pound; Salmon, which was at the same Price, is, by a late Regularaised to Two-pence a pot of Pound, which is thought by many to be an exorbitant Price. A Fowl, which they in general at call a Hen, may be had at Market for Two-pence out or Two-pence Half-penny, but so lean they are Vin good for little. It would be too ludicrous to fay, that one of them might almost be cut up with the Breast of another, but they are so poor, that some used to say they believed the Oats were given them out by Tale.

THIS brings to my Remembrance, a Story have heard of a Foreigner, who being newly arrived in this Country, at a publick House defired fomething to eat. A Fowl was proposed and accepted, but when it was dreffed and brought to Table, the Stranger shewed a great Dislike to it, which the Landlord perceiving, brought him a Piece of fresh Salmon, and said, Sir, I observe you do not like the Fowl, pray what do you think of this? Think, fays the Guest, why I think it is very fine Salmon, and no Wonder, for that is of God good Almighty's Feeding, if it had been fed by you, I suppose it would have been as lean as this poor

Fowl, which I defire you will take away.

WE have, in Plenty, Variety, and good Per-lent fection, Roots and Greens, which, you know, have refer always made a principal Part of my Luxury.

THIS

7 hui

old

go

h t

arn

to

P e l

I

I ins

le h ere oul

IT

hie

ew ppe

01 m :

vera

fuse

me

TH

ous, e fm

ese t

THIS, I think, has been chiefly owing to a Comnts, nunication with the English. And I have been rld, old by old People in Edinburgh, that no longer so than forty Years, there was little else but Cale in their Green-Market, which is now plentifully expished with that Sort of Provision: and I think urnished with that Sort of Provision; and I think

mas

THIS

PORK is not very common with us, but what the hon, the have is good.

I HAVE often heard it faid, that the Scots will are the sectors. the state of the heard it laid, that the Scots will be a of eat it. This may be rank'd among the rest of the Prejudices; for this Kind of Food is common the Lowlands, and Aberdeen in particular is factors for furnishing Families with pickled Pork for are Vinter Provision, as well as their Shipping.

I own I never saw any Swine among the Mountains, and there is good Reason for it: Those Peofome have no Offal wherewith to feed them; and, there are they to give them other Food, one single Sow hem ere they to give them other Food, one fingle Sow ould devour all the Provisions of a Family.

ould devour all the Provisions of a Family.

It is here a general Notion, that where the hief declares against Pork, his Followers affect to where the fame Dislike; but of this Affectation I do appened once to see an Example.

One of the Chiefs, who brought hither with m a Gentleman of his own Clan, dined with weral of us at a Publick House, where the Chief supplied the Pork, and the Laird did the same; but me Days afterward, the latter being invited to were were under no Restraint, he eat it with good an Appetite as any of us all.

The little Highland Mutton, when sat, is delipoor ous, and certainly the greatest of Luxury. And essall Beef, when fresh, is very sweet and suc-

e small Beef, when fresh, is very sweet and suc-Per-lent, but it wants that Substance which should have reserve it long when salted. I am speaking of ese two Sorts of Provision when they are well fed; but the general Run of the Market here, and in other Places too, is fuch as would not be fuf.

fered in any Part of England that I know of.

We (the English) have the Conveniency of a Publick House (or Tavern if you please) kept by a Country-Woman of ours, where every Thing is dressed our own Way; but sometimes it has been dissicult for our Landlady to get any Thing for us to eat, except some Sort of Food, so often reiterated, as almost to create a Loathing. And one Day I remember she told us there was nothing at all to be had in the Town. This you may believe was a melancholy Declaration to a Parcel of Pola Puddings; but, for some Relief, a Highlander soon after happened to bring to Town some of the Moor Game to sell, which (in looking out sharp) she secured for our Dinner.

HARES, and the feveral Kinds of Birds abovementioned, abound in the neighbouring Country, near the Town, even to Exuberance: Rather to much, I think, for the Sportsman's Diversion, who generally likes a little more Expectation, so that we never need to want that Sort of Provision, by what we may kill ourselves; and besides we often make Presents of them to such of the Inhabitants who are in our Esteem; for none of them, that I know of, will bestow Powder and Shot upon any of the Game.

IT is true they may fometimes buy a Partridge for a Penny, or less, and the others in Proportion. I say sometimes, for there are not very many brought to Market, except in Time of Snow, and then indeed I have seen Sacks full of them.

I REMEMBER, that the first hard Weather after I came, I asked the Magistrates why such Poaching was suffered within their District, and their Answer was, that there was enough of them, and if the

wer

of

to fir

an

in

hil

di

in

th

fo

ye

W

0

R

re

ar

in

fo

ta

ta

W

la

fti

T

fiz

in

th

ch

W

10

were not brought to Market, they should get none themselves.

THE River is not less plentiful in Fish. I have often seen above a hundred large Salmon brought to Shore at one Hawl. Trout is as plenty, and a small Fish the People call a little Trout, but of another Species, which is exceeding good, called, in the North of England, a Branlin. These are so like the Salmon Frye, that they are hardly to be distinguished, only the Skales come off of the Frye in handling, the others have none.

and

e fuf.

of a

by a

ng is

been or us

reite-

d one

ng at elieve

Poke

ander

ne of

g out

bove-

intry,

er too

rfion,

n, fo

ifion,

s we

habi-

hem.

t up-

ridge

rtion.

many

after

ching

nfwe

the

wer

It is by Law no less than Transportation to take the Salmon Frye; but, in the Season, the River is so full of them, that Nobody minds it, and those young Fish are so simple, the Children catch them with a crooked Pin. Yet the Townsmen are of Opinion, that all such of them as are bred in the River, and are not devoured at Sea by larger Fish, return thither at the proper Season; and, as a Proof, they affirm, they have taken many of them, and, by Way of Experiment, clipped their Tails into a forked Figure, like that of a Swallow, and found them with that Mark, when full grown and taken out of the Cruives.

EELS there are, and very good, but the Inhabitants will not eat of them, any more than they will of a Pike, for which Reason some of these last, in the standing Lakes, are grown to a monstrous Size; and I do assure you, I have eaten of Trouts, taken in those Waters, each of sisteen or sixteen Pound Weight.

I AM furprized the Townsmen take no Delight in Field Exercises, or Fishing, in both of which there is Health and Diversion; but will rather chuse to spend great Part of their Time in the wretched Coffee-Room, playing at Back-gammon or Hazard, mostly for Half-pence.

E

Bur

BUT I must ingenuously confess to you, that hus they might retaliate this Accusation, so far as it Eigrelates to mis-spending of Time, if they had but the Shi Opportunity to let you know, they have feen me throwing Haddocks and Whitings Heads into the cor River from the Parapet of the Bridge, only to fee the Eels turn up their Silver Bellies in striving one with another for the Prey. At other Times, they might tell you, they faw me letting Feathers fly in the Wind for the Swallows that build under the Arches (which are ribbed within Side) to make their Circuits in the Air, and contend for them to carry them to their Nests. I have been jestingly reproached by them, en passant, for both these Amusements, as being too juvenile for me. This I have returned in their own Way, by telling them I thought myfelf, at least, as well employed as they, when tumbling over and over a little Cube made out of a Bone, and making every black Spot on the Faces of it, a Subject of their Fear and Hope. Nor did I think the Emperor Domitian's ordinary Diversion was any thing more manly than mine; but I think myself, this Instant, much better employed, by endeavouring to contribute to your Amusement.

THE meanest Servants, who are not at Boardwages, will not make a Meal upon Salmon, if they can get any Thing else to eat. I have been told it here, as a very good Jest, that a Highland Gentleman, who went to London by Sea, foon after his Landing passed by a Tavern, where the Larder appeared to the Street, and operated fo strongly upon his Appetite, that he went in. That there were, among other Things, a Rump of Beef, and fome Salmon. Of the Beef he ordered a Steak for himself; but, says he, let Duncan have some Salmon. To be short, the Cook, who attended him,

humoured

are

thr

an

the

a I

as o

wh

Pu

If

upo

lan

it.

wa

ter

cau

Th

her

mu

Bay

vai

tho

Mo

use

Tr

bee

gin

Ar

Ru

if 1

that humoured the Jest, and the Master's Eating was as it Eight-Pence, and Duncan's came to almost as many the Shillings.

me

o fee

one they

y in the nake

n to ngly hefe This

ling

oyed

ube

Spot

and ian's

than nuch te to ard-

they

ld it

ien-

· his rder

ngly

here

and

for

Sal-

im, ired

I was speaking of Provisions in this Town, acthe cording to the ordinary Markets, but their Prices are not always fuch to us. There are two or three People, not far from the Town, who, having an Eye on our Mess, employ themselves, now and then, in fattening Fowls, and fometimes a Turky, a Lamb, &c. these come very near, if not quite, as dear as they are in London.

I SHALL conclude this Letter with an Incident. which, I confess, is quite foreign to my present Purpose, but may contribute to my main Design.

SINCE my last, as I was passing along the Street, I faw a Woman fitting, with a young Child lying upon her Lap, over which she was crying, and lamenting, as in the utmost Despair, concerning it. At first I thought it was Want, but found she was come from Fort William, and that the Minifters here, had refused to christen her Child, because she did not know who was the Father of it. Then she renewed her Grief, and hanging down her Head over the Infant, she talked to it, as if it must certainly be damned if it should die without Baptism. To be short, several of us together prevailed to have the Child christened; not that we thought the Infant in Danger, but to relieve the Mother from her dreadful Apprehensions.

I TAKE this Refusal to be partly political, and used as a Means whereby to find out the Male Transgressor. But that Knowledge would have been to little Purpose, in this Case, it being a Regimental Child: and, indeed, this was our principal Argument; for any Dispute against the established Rules of the Kirk would be deemed Impertinence, if not Prophaneness.

LETTER E 2

tha Ma Pu

in oft Pa

Pla the to Ye

cei

Ad

me

cei

pro

Ti

21 ow

in

of pol

ear

an

OW

kne

her

to

for

His

har

LETTER VII.

THE Inhabitants complain loudly, that the English, fince the Union, have inhanced the Rates of every Thing by giving extravagant Prices; and I must own, in particular, there has been Seven-pence or Eight-pence a Pound given by some of them for Beef or Mutton that has been well fed, and brought to them early in the Season. But the Towns-people are not so nice in the Quality of these Things; and, to some, the Meat is good enough, if it will but serve for Soup.

As to their Complaint, I would know what Injury it is to the Country in general, that Strangers, especially, are lavish in their Expences; does it not cause a greater Circulation of Money among them; and that too brought from distant Places, to which but a very small Part of it ever returns.

But it is in vain to tell these People, that the extraordinary Cheapness of Provisions is a certain Token of the Poverty of a Country; for that would infinuate they are Gainers by the Union, which they cannot bear to hear of.

As an Instance of the low Price of Provisions formerly, I have been told by some old People, that,

that, at the Time of the Revolution, General Mackay was accustomed to dine at one of these Publick Houses, where he was served with great Variety, and paid only two Shillings and Six-pence Scots, that is, Two-pence Halfpenny for his Ordinary.

the

the ces;

een

ome

fed.

the

of

ood

In-

ers,

it

ong

es,

he

nin

rld

ch

ns

e,

WHEN I was speaking of Game and Wild-Fowl in my last Letter, it did not occur to me to have often heard in this Country of an old Scottish Act of Parliament for Encouragement to destroy the Green-Plover or Pewit, which (as faid) is therein called the ungrateful Bird: For that it came to Scotland to breed, and then returned to England with its Young to feed the Enemy. But I never could obtain any Satisfaction in this Point, although a certain Baronet in the Shire of Ross (who is an Advocate or Counsellor at Law) mentioned it to me, at his own House in that County, as a Thing certain. And he feemed then to think he could produce the Act of Parliament, or, at least, the Title of it in one of his Catalogues. But he fought a long while to no Purpose, which, as well as my own Reason, made me conclude there was nothing in it; though, at the same Time, it was Matter of Wonder to me, that the Knight should seem so positive he could produce Evidence of a Fact, and earnestly feek it, which, if found, would have been an undeniable Ridicule upon the Legislature of his own Country.

What Kind of Food this Bird is, I do not know; for although I have shot many of them here, I never made any other Use of them, than to pluck off the Crown, or Crest, to busk my Flies for fishing, and gave the Bird to the next poor Highlander I met withal; but perhaps you may have partaken of this Advantage, which was so much much envied by the Scots, according to the Tradition.

E 3

I would, but cannot, forbear to give you, en passant, a Specimen of this Highland Baronet's Hospitality at the Time above-mentioned.

HE had known me both at Inverness and Edin. burgh, and I being out with an English Officer, fporting near his House, I proposed to make him a Vifit.

AFTER the Meeting-Compliments were over, he called for a Bottle of Wine, and when the Glass had gone once about, Gentlemen, fays he, pretty abruptly, this Wine is not fo good as you drink at

Inverness .-

WE affured him it was, and repeated it feveral Times, but he still insisted it was not, took it away himself, and set a Bottle of Ale before us in its Stead, which we just tasted out of pure Civility; but we were no Losers by this; for the Benefit of Refreshment by his Wine, after Fatigue, would have been the least of Trifles, compared with the Diversion we had, in going Home, at this (what shall I call it) this barefaced - I don't know what !

FROM the Provisions of this Country, it would be an easy natural Transition to the Cookery, but it might be disagreeable; and it would be almost endless to tell you what I know, and have heard upon that Subject. I do not mean as to the Composition of the Dishes, but the Uncleanliness with which they are prepared. But how should you think it otherwise, when you recollect what has been faid of the poor Condition of the Female Servants? And what would you think to have your Dinner dreffed by one of them? I do affure you, that, being upon a Journey in these Parts, hard Eggs

Egg

fucc

ery

fore

to I told

ma

wit

Ye

tan

Di

the

fell

Re

any

qui Wr

wr

rat

tha

in

T

an

th

for

th

fo

by

th h Ir

th

S

Eggs have been my only Food for feveral Days fucceffively.

Tra.

1, en

net's

din-

cer,

m a

ver,

las etty

k at eral

it

in ty;

of

uld

the

hat

W

ıld

ut

oft

rd

n-

th

DU

as r-

11

1,

SHALL I venture at one, only, Instance of Cookery? I will, — and that a recent one, and therefore comes first to Hand; but it does not come up to many others that I know, and are not fit to be told to any one that has not an immoveable Stomach.

An Officer, who arrived here a few Days agowith his Wife and Son, (a Boy of about five or fix Years old) told me, that at a House, not far distant from this Place, as they were waiting for Dinner, the Child, who had been gaping about the Kitchen, came running into the Room, and sell a crying, of which the Mother asking the Reason, he sobb'd, and said, Mamma, don't eat any of the Greens. This occasioned a further Enquiry, by which it appeared, the Maid had been wringing the Cale with her Hands, as if she was wringing a Dishclout, and was setting it up in Pyramids round the Dish by Way of Ornament, and that her Hands were very dirty, and her Fingers in a lamentable Condition with the Itch.

Soon after the Coleworts were brought to Table just as the Child had described their Figure and Situation, and the Wench's Hands convinced them that his whole Complaint was just and rea-fonable.

But I would not be thought by this to infinuate, that there is nothing but Cleanliness in England, for I have heard of foul Practices there, especially by the Men Cooks in the Kitchens of Persons of Distinction: Among whom I was told by one, that, happening to go into his Kitchen, where he had hardly ever been before, (probably by some Information) he observed his Cook had stuck, upon the smooth Chimney-Piece a large Lump of Butter, and (like the Pot of Pigeons at Kelfo) had raked Part of it off with his Fingers by Handfuls, as he had Occasion to throw them into the Sauce.

E 4

pan.

WE have one great Advantage that makes Amends for many Inconveniencies, that is, whole-fome and agreeable Drink, I mean French Claret, which is to be met with almost every where in Publick Houses of any Note, except in the Heart of the Highlands, and sometimes even there; but the Concourse of my Countrymen has raised the Price of it considerably. At my first coming, it was but Sixteen-pence a Bottle, and now it is raised to two Shillings, although there be no more Duty paid upon it now than there was before, which, indeed, was often none at all.

French Brandy, very good, is about three Shillings and Sixpence, or four Shillings, a Gallon, but in Quantities, from hovering Ships on the Coast, it has been bought for Twenty-pence.

Lemons are feldom wanting here, so that Punch, for those that like it, is very reasonable, but sew care to drink it, as thinking the Claret a much better Liquor, in which I agree with them.

THERE lives in our Neighbourhood at a House, or Castle, called Culloden, a Gentleman whose Hospitality is almost without Bounds. It is the Custom of that House, at the first Visit or Introduction, to take up your Freedom by cracking his Nut (as he terms it) that is, a Cocoa-shell which holds a Pint filled with Champain, or such other Sort of Wine as you shall chuse. You may guess by the Introduction, at the Contents of the Volume. Few go away sober at any Time; and for the greatest Part of his Guests, in the Conclusion, they cannot go at all.

elda brother of Diff.

THIS

fing

ply

piq

Per

the

felf

go

and

the

wh

wa

wi

tw

tal

25

the

w

dr

dif

the

ca

fix

his

th

A

fro

fh

ple

So

OU

m

m

This he partly brings about by artfully propofing (after the Publick Healths which always imply Bumpers) fuch private ones as he knows will pique the Interest or Inclination of each particular Person of the Company whose Turn it is to take the Lead, to begin it in a Brimmer; and he himself being always chearful, and sometimes saying good Things, his Guests soon lose their Guard, and then — I need say no more.

For my own Part, I stipulated with him, upon the first Acquaintance, for the Liberty of retiring when I thought convenient; and, as Perseverance was made a Point of Honour, that I might do it without Reproach.

had

fuls,

uce-

nakes nole-

aret,

e in leart

but

the

z, it

it is

ore,

Shil-

lon,

the

that

ble,

et a

m. ule.

ofe

the

tro-

his ich

her

refs

Vo-

and

on-

IIS

As the Company are disabled one after another, two Servants, who are all the while in Waiting, take up the Invalids with short Poles in their Chairs, as they sit, (if not fallen down) and carry them to their Beds; and still the Hero holds out.

I REMEMBER, one Evening, an English Officer who has a good deal of Humour, feigned himfelf drunk, and acted his Part so naturally, that it was difficult to diffinguish it from Reality; upon which the Servants were preparing to take him up, and carry him off. He let them alone 'till they had fixed the Machine, and then raising himself up on his Feet, made them a fneering Bow, and told them he believed there was no Occasion for their Affistance; whereupon one of them, with Sang froid and a ferious Air, faid, no Matter, Sir, we shall have you by and by. This Laird keeps a plentiful Table, and excellent Wines of various Sorts, and in great Quantities, as, indeed, he ought, for I have often faid I thought there was as much Wine spilt in his Hall, as would content a. moderate Family. We gave to a Hound-Puppy that is now pretty well grown, in Honour of him, E 5 the Name of Bumper: Another we call'd Nancy, after our most celebrated Toast; so that, shortly, in our eagerest Chace, we shall remember Love and the Bottle—You know to what this alludes.

I THINK a Pack of Hounds were never kept cheaper than here (as you may believe from the Mortality of Horses I have already mentioned,) or that there is better Hare Hunting in any Part of Britain than hereabouts; though it be pretty rough Riding in some Places, and the Ground mostly We never go far from the Town, or beat long for the Game, or, indeed, have much Regard to Seasons, for none here trouble themselves about it, infomuch that we might hunt at any Time of the Year without Cenfure. Yet I have heard of a Gentleman of this Country, who was fo scrupulous a Sportsman, that when Word was brought him that his Servant was drowned in palfing a Highland Ford - he cried out, I thought the Fellow would come to an untimely End - For he shot a Hare in her Form!

In some Parts, within less than ten Miles of us near the Coast, the Hares are in such Numbers there is but little Diversion in Hunting, for one being started soon turns out a fresh one; then the Pack is divided, and must be called off, &c. insomuch that a whole Day's Hunting has been intirely fruitless. The Country-People are very forward to tell us where the Maukin is, as they call a Hare, and are pleased to see them destroyed, because they do Hurt to their Cale-Yards.

Besides the Hares, there are Numbers of Foxes, but they take to the Mountains, which are rocky, and fometimes inaccessible to the Dogs, of which several have been lost by falling from Precipices in the Pursuit; for the Fox in his Flight takes

tal

ha

th

ge

na

ple

no

W

in

an ne

th

a th ga

CO Ec

MH

i. C

CE

do

W

he

gi

th P

0

in

W

ancy,

rtly,

_ove

this

kept the or (

t of

ough

oftly beat

Re-

lves

any have

Was

Was paf-

ught

For

f us bers

one

the

nfo-

rely

d to

are, hey

of

are

of

reght

kes

takes the most dangerous Way. But when we happen to kill one of them, it is carried Home through the Bleffings of the People, like a dangerous Captive in a Roman Triumph.

In this little Town there are no less than four natural Fools. There are hardly any crooked People, (except by Accidents) because there has been no Care taken to mend their Shapes when they were young.

THE Beggars are numerous, and exceedingly importunate, for there is no Parish-Allowance to any.

I HAVE been told, that before the Union, they never prefumed to ask for more than a Bodle, or the fixth Part of a Penny, but now they beg for a Baubee, or Halfpenny. And some of them, that they may not appear to be ordinary Beggars, tell you it is to buy Snuff. Yet still it is common for the Inhabitants, (as I have feen in Edinburgh) when they have none of the smallest Money, to stop in the Street, and giving a Half-penny, take from the Beggar a Plack, i.e. two Bodles, or the third Part of a Penny in Change. Yet although the Beggars frequently receive so small an Alms from their Benefactors, I don't know how it is, but they are generally shod when the poor working Women go barefoot. But here are no idle young Fellows and Wenches begging about the Streets, as with you in London, to the Difgrace of all Order, and, as the French call it, Police. By the Way, this Police is still a great Office in Scotland, but, as they phrase it, is grown into Disuetude, though the Sallaries remain.

HAVING mentioned this French Word more by Accident than Choice, I am tempted (by Way of Chat) to make Mention likewise of a Frenchman, who understood a little English.

Soon after his Arrival in London, he had obferved a good deal of Dirt and Disorder in the Streets, and asking about the Police, but finding none that understood the Term, he cried out, Good Lord! how can one expect Order among these People, who have not such a Word as Police in their Language.

By what I have feen, the People here are fomething cleaner in their Houses than in other Parts of this Country where I have been; yet I cannot fet them up as Patterns of Cleanliness.

Bur in mere, Justice to a Laird's Lady, my next Door Neighbour, I must tell you, that, in her Person, and every Article of her Family, there is not, I believe, a cleaner Woman in all Britain; and there may be others the same, for aught I know, but I never had the Satisfaction to be acquainted with them.

I SHALL not enter into Particulars, only they are, for the most Part, very cautious of wearing out their Houshold Utenfils of Metal, infomuch that I have fometimes feen a Pewter Veffel to drink out of, not much unlike in Colour to a Leaden Pot to preferve Tobacco or Snuff.

I was one Day greatly diverted with the grievous Complaint of a neighbouring Woman, of whom our Cook had borrowed a Pewter Pudding-Pan (for we had then formed a Mess in a private Lodging) and when we had done with it, and she came for her Dish, she was told by the Servants below-stairs, that it should be cleaned, and then fent Home.

This the Woman took to be fuch an intended Injury to her Pan, that she cry'd out - Lord! you'll wear it out; and then came up Stairs to make her Complaint to us, which she did very earneftly.

it

r

al

0

A

b f

fc

le

to th

01

fo

W

C

th di

th Si

it rai

I

ad

the fta

ke He

cer

thi ver

ch

on and tha

the

ob-

the

ding

out,

nong

Police

mets of

t fet

my

, in

here

ain;

nt I

ac-

they ring

uch

to 0 2

rie-

of

ng-

rate

fhe

ints

nen

ded

rd!

to

ery

VE

WE perceived the Jest, and gravely told her. it was but reasonable and civil, fince it was borrowed, to fend it Home clean. This did not at all content her, and she left us; but, at the Foot of the Stairs, she peremptorily demanded her Moveable, and when she found it had been scoured before it was used, she lost all Patience, saying, the had had it fifteen Years, and it never had been scoured before. And she swore she would never lend it again to any of our Country. But why not to any? Sure the Woman, in her Rage, intended that same any as a National Reflexion. And, without a Jest, I verily think it was as much so, as fome Words I have heard over a Bottle, from which fome wrong-headed, or rather rancorous Coxcombs, have wrested that malicious Inference. though, at the fame Time, the Affront was not discovered by any other of the Company. this does not happen so often with them on this Side the Tweed, as in London, where I have known it to have been done feveral Times, apparently to raise a Querelle d'Allemand.

Nor only here, but in other Parts of Scotland, I have heard feveral common Sayings very well adapted to the Inclination of the People to fave themselves Pains and Trouble. As for one Instance,—A clean Kitchen is a Token of poor House-keeping. Another is, if a Family removes from a House, and leaves it in a clean Condition, the succeeding Tenant will not be fortunate in it. Now I think it is intended the Reverse of both these Proverbs should be understood, viz. That a foul Kitchen is a Sign of a plentiful Table, (by which one might conclude that some live like Princes) and that a dirty House will be an Advantage to him that takes it. But I shall give you an Example, of the Fallacy of both these Maxims, i. e. from a filthy

filthy Kitchen without much Cookery, and the new Tenant's ill Fortune to be at the Expence of Mug making a dirty House clean, (I cannot say sweet) He and paying Half a Year's Rent without having any he Benefit from it; this happened to a Friend of wa mine.

Some few Years ago, he thought it would be his Lot to continue long in the Lowlands, and accordingly he took a House (or Floor) within Half a Quarter of a Mile of Edinburgh, which was then about to be left by a Woman of Distinction, and it not being thought proper he should see the several Apartments while the Lady was in the House, (for he might judge of them by those beneath) he, immediately after her Removal, went to view his Bargain. The Floor of the Room, where she saw Company, was clean, being rubbed every Morning, according to Custom, but the Insides of the Corner Cupboards, and every other Part out of Sight, was in a dirty Condition; but when he came to the Kitchen, he was not only difgusted at the Sight of it, but fick with the Smell, which was intolerable; he could not fo much as guess whether the Floor was Wood or Stone, it was covered over fo deep with accumulated Greafe and Dirt mingled together; the Drawers under the Table looked as if they were almost transparent with Greafe; the Walls near the Servants Table, which had been white, were almost covered with Snuff spit against it; and Bones of Sheeps Heads lay scattered under the Dreffer.

His new Landlord was (or affected to be) as much moved with the Stench as he himself, yet the Lodging Apartment of the two young Ladies adjoined to this odoriferous Kitchen.

WELL,

bot

the

ma

Bu

to dif

the

I

ing

yes

It

eve

Fa

tak

wh

WC

fan

H

th

to

G

fet Ha

fir

Pl

m

mi

Well, he hired two Women to cleanse this ce of Augean Part, and bought a vast Quantity of sweet weet Herbs wherewith to rub it every where, and yet he could not bear the Smell of it a Month afterwards: Of all this I was myself a Witness.

the

any

d of

d be d ac-

Half

then

and

e fe-

oufe,

he,

v his faw

ornthe

t of

n he

ed at hich

rues

was

and

the rent

ble,

vith

eads

) as yet

dies

LL,

You know very well that a thorough Neatness. both in House and Person, requires Expence; and therefore fuch as are in narrow Circumstances. may reasonably plead an Excuse for the Want of it. But when Persons of Fortune will suffer their Houses to be worse than Hog-sties, I do not see how they differ, in that Particular, from Hottentots; and they certainly deferve a verbal Punishment, though I could very willingly have been excused from being the Executioner. But this is only to you; yet, if it were made Publick, (referving Names) I think it might be ferviceable to fome, in whatever Part of this Island they may be.

As to myself, I profess I should esteem it as a Favour rather than an Offence, that any one would take the Trouble to hold up a Mirrour to me, in which I could fee where to wipe off those Spots that would otherwife render me ridiculous.

I SHALL only trouble you with one more of these faving Sayings, which is, That if the Butter has no Hairs in it, the Cow that gave the Milk will not thrive. But, on this Occasion, I cannot forbear to tell you, (it falls out so a propos) that an English Gentleman, in his Way hither, had fome Butter fet before him, in which were a great Number of Hairs; whereupon he called to the Landlady, defiring the would bring him fome Butter upon one Plate, and the Hairs upon another, and he would mix them himself, for he thought there were too many, in Proportion, for the Quantity of Butter that was before him.

SOME

Some of the Inns in these remote Parts, and pror even far South of us, are not very inviting; your chamber (to which you fometimes enter from with out Doors, by Stairs as dirty as the Street) is fo far Ma from having been washed, it has hardly ever been Th scraped, and it would be no Wonder if you stumbled over Clods of dried Dirt in going from the Fire Side to the Bed, under which there often is Lumber and Dust, that almost fill up the Space between the Floor and the Bedstead. But it is nauseous to fee the Walls and Infide of the Curtains spotted, as if every one that had lain there had fpit streight for.

eaf aid

1 iar

oth

wh

tun Ad

cipa

cou

pen

1 Baf

plo

wit

WO

por Kit

or ]

upo

clar

ter

the

pre

ward in whatever Position they lay.

LEONARDO da Vinci, a celebrated Painter, and famous for his Skill in other Arts and Sciences, in a Treatife written by himself on the Art of Painting, advises those of his Profession to contemplate the Spots on an old Wall, as a Means to revive their latent Ideas. And he tells them they may thereby create new Thoughts, which might produce fomething purely Original. I doubt not he meant, in the same Manner as People fancy they see Heads and other Images in a decaying Fire. This Precept of his has, fometimes, come in my Mind, when I cast my Eye on the various Forms and Colours of the Spots I have been speaking, of, and a very little Attention has produced the Effect proposed by the Painter.

My Landlord comes into the Room, uninvited, and, though he never faw you before, fits himself down and enters into Conversation with you, and is fo fociable as to drink with you; and many of them will call, when the Bottle is out, for another; but, like mine Host at Kelfo, few will stir to fetch any Thing that is wanting.

THIS Behaviour may have been made, by Cuftom, familiar to their own Countrymen; but I wonder and wonder they do not confider, that it may be difayour greeable to Strangers of any Appearance, who have with been used to treat their Landlords in quite another Manner, even permitting an Innkeeper, worth Thousands, to wait at Table, and never shew the east Uneasiness at his Humility: But it may be aid he was no Gentleman.

o far

been tum-

Fire

um-

ween

us to

d, as for-

and in a

ting,

the

heir

reby

me-

, in eads

Pre-

ind,

Cond a -010

ted,

felf ou, any nor to

Cuft I der

PRIDE of Family, in mean People, is not pecuiar to this Country, but is to be met with in thers; and indeed it feems natural to Mankind, when they are not possessed of the Goods of Forune, to pique themselves upon some imaginary Advantage. Upon this Remark, I shall so far anticipate (by Way of Postscript) my Highland Account, as to give you a low Occurrence that happened when I was last among the Hills.

A YOUNG Highland Girl in Rags, and only the Baffard Daughter of a Man very poor, and employed as a Labourer, but of a Family fo old, that, with Respect to him and many others, it was quite worn out. This Girl was taken in, by a Corporal's Wife, to do any dirty Work in an Officer's Kitchen; and, having been guilty of some Fault or Neglect, was treated a little roughly: Whereupon the neighbouring Highland Women loudly clamoured against the Cook, saying, What a Monster is that to mal-treat a Gentleman's Bearne! And the poor Wretch's Resentment was beyond Expression upon that very Account.

LETTER VIII.

S I have, in Point of Time, till the last Post been perfectly punctual in this my tatling Correspondence, though not so exact in my Let ters upon other Subjects, you may, possibly, er pect I should give you a Reason for this Failure, at least I am myself inclined to do so.

SEVERAL of us (the English) have been, by Invitation, to dine with an eminent Chief, not many Miles from hence, in the Highlands, but I do affure you it was his Importunity (the Effect of his Interest) and our own Curiofity, more than any particular Inclination, that induced us to a Compliance.

WE fet out early in the Morning, without Guide or Interpreter, and passed a pretty wide River into the Country of Ross, by a Boat that we feared would fall to Pieces in the Passage. This Excursion was made in order to a short Visit on that Side the Murray Frith, and to lengthen out the Way, that we might not be too early with our

OUR first Visit being dispatched, we changed gan to our Course, and, as the Sailor says, flood directly, preports we thought, for the Castle of our Inviter; but only we soon strayed out of our Way among the Hills, of fifth

he tor

Han Chie nov

Patr Ifh co But is A

tead

uad

At le s I

old

o A Vort

Hi

infe Caft

I

ur 1

he I

Part,

rate.

·N ion,

very.

ation out v there there was nothing but Heath, Bogs, and tones, and no visible Tract to direct us, it being cross the Country.

In our Way we enquired of three feveral Highanders, but could get nothing from them but Janiel Sasson Uggit. We named the Title of our thief, and pointed with the Finger, but he was nown to none of them, otherwise than by his Patronimick, which none of us knew at that Time. I shall have something to say of this Word, when come to speak of the Highlands in General.) But if we had been never fo well acquainted with Post, is Ancestry Name, it would have stood us in little tling stead, unless we had known likewise, how to per-Let jude some one of those Men to shew us the Way. ex at length we happened to meet with a Gentleman, lur, s I supposed, because he spoke English, and he old us we must go West a Piece (though there was Invision Appearance of the Sun) and then incline to the North; that then we were to go along the Side of I do Hill, and ascend another (which to us was then

I do Hill, and afcend another (which to us was the fine infeen) and from the Top of it we should see the any Castle.

Com- I should have told you, that in this Part of our Peregrination, we were upon the Borders of the most and the Hills, for the most hout he Mountains only; and the Hills, for the most wide Part, not much higher than Hampstead or High-

here

t we gate.
This No fooner had he given us this confused Direcon ion, but he skipped over a little Bog, that was out very near us, and left us to our perplexed Conful-our ations. However, at last we gained the Height; out when we were there, one of our Company beand the first we were the highlander for deceiving us, being cally, prepossessed with the Notion of a Castle, and seeing but only a House hardly fit for one of our Farmers wills, of fifty Pounds a Year; and in the Court-Yard a uc

as

hat

·V

1 thie

co

g. T

por

any

eru W

e i om

ver. I

ad g

in ily

on:

r. T

ave

any y abl

ftea

ac oft em.

TE

Wa

Parcel of low Out-houses, all built with Tur like other Highland Hutts.

WHEN we approached this Caftle, our Chief with feveral Attendants, (for he had feen us on the Hill) came a little Way to meet us; gave us a We come, and conducted us into a Parlour pretty we lat furnished.

AFTER some Time, we had Notice given a that Dinner was ready in another Room, when we were no fooner fat down to Table, but a Ban of Mufick struck up in a little Place out of Sight and continued Playing all the Time of Dinner.

THESE concealed Musicians he would have he us think were his constant Domesticks; but I fa one of them some Time after Dinner, by men Chance, whereby I knew they were brought from this Town to regale us with more Magnificence.

Our Entertainment confifted of a great Num ber of Dishes, at a long Table, all brought in w der Covers, but almost cold. - What the greated Part of them were I could not tell, nor did I en quire, for they were disguised after the French Manner; but there was placed next to me a Dill which I gueffed to be boiled Beef; I fay that wa my Conjecture, for it was covered all over with stewed Cabbage, like a smothered Rabbit, and over all a Deluge of bad Butter.

WHEN I had removed fome of the Incum brance, helped myself, and tasted, I found the Po it was boiled in had given it too high a Goût for my Palate, which is always inclined to plain Eat-

I THEN defired one of the Company to help me to some Roasted Mutton, which was, indeed, delicious, and therefore ferved very well for my e T Share of all this inelegant and oftentatious Plenty.

Tuf WE had very good Wine, but did not drink such of it; but one Thing I should have told you, Chief vas intolerable, viz. The Number of Highlanders in the lat attended at Table, whose Feet and foul Linen Wed Woolen, I dont know which, were more than a wed latch for the Odour of the Dishes.

The Conversation was greatly engrossed by the

THE Conversation was greatly engrossed by the thief, before, at, and after-Dinner; but I do not when collect any Thing was said that is worth repeat-

, de-

nty.

W

when ecollect any Thing was faid that is worth repeatBan ig.

There were, as we went home, several Descants
r. pon our Feast; but I remember one of our Come had any said he had tasted a Pye, and that many a I say truke had been baked in a better Crust.

When we were returned hither in the Evening, from a supped upon Beef Steaks, which some, who omplained they had not made a Dinner, rejoiced Number, and called them Luxury.

I MAKE little Doubt, but after our noble Host eated ad gratistied his Ostentation and Vanity, he cursed in this Heart for the Expence, and that his Fafrench in must start for a Month to retrieve the ProfuDish on: For this is according to his known Charac-Diff, on: For this is according to his known Charact was r.

with Toward the Conclusion of my last Letter, I and we you some Account of the Lodging Rooms of any of the Inns in this Country, not forgetting any of the Inns in this Country, not forgetting any of the Inns in this Country, not longering in the line of the Inns in this Country, not longering in the longering in this country, not longering in the longering in this country, not longering in the longering in this country, not longering in the country of the Eat accumulated Quantity of Dung, one might al-oft think they required another Hercules to cleanse p me em.

THERE is another Thing very inconvenient to my e Traveller which I had omitted. He is made wait a most unreasonable while for every thing, for which he has Occasion. I shall give you only 1:35 10 7150

01

IS En. Co

he

Dia th

S

hi

een

ak

1 rea ngs, br

T

han

arn FO1

mes TI

l, e eve ]

e U thou

aly l

one Inflance among a hundred.

AT the Blair of Atbol, benighted, tired and hungry, I came to the Inn, and was put into Room without any Light; where, knowing the dilatory Way of those People, I sat patiently waiting for a Candle near half an Hour; at last, quite tired with Expectation, I called pretty hastily, and I must confess not without Anger, for a Light and fome Wine: This brought in a Servant Maid, who, as usual, cry'd out What's your wull? I then again told her my Wants, but had no other Anfwer than, that her Mistress had the Keys, and was at Supper, and she could not be disturbed Her Mistress, it's true, is a Gentlewoman, but before she was married to the stately Beggar, who keeps that House, she lived in this Town, and was humble enough to draw Two-penny.

THE Two-penny, as they call it, is their common Ale, the Price of it is Two-pence for a Scott Pint, which is two Quarts.

In fliding thus from the Word Two-penny, to Description of that Liquor, there came to m Memory a ridiculing Differtation upon fuch Kin of Transitions in one of the Tatlers; for those Books I have with me, which, indeed, are her good Part of my Library.

THIS Liquor is disagreeable to those who are not used to it, but Time and Custom will make almost any Thing familiar. The Malt, which dried with Peat, Turf, or Furzes, gives to the Drink a Taste of that Kind of Fewel: It is often drank before it is cold, out of a Cap or Coif as the call it; this is a wooden Dish, with two Ears Handles, about the Size of a Tea Sawcer, and a light Shallow, fo that a steady Hand is necessary to carry nion it to the Mouth, and, in Windy Weather, at the nen Dog Door of a Change, I have feen the Liquor blown into the Drinker's Face. This Drink is of itself opt to give a Diarrhea, and therefore, when the Natives drink plentifully of it, they interlace it with Brandy or Usky.

I HAVE been speaking only of the common Ale; for in some few Gentlemen's Houses, I have drank s good, as I think I ever met with in any Part of England, but not brewed with the Malt of this Country.

ly

nd 0 2 the

ait-

iite

and

and aid,

hen An-

and bed.

t bewho

and

, to:

o my

Kind thole

her

ho are mak

D00

THE Mention of their capacious Pint Pot, which hey call a Stoup, puts me in Mind of Part of a Dialogue between two Footmen, one English, the ther Scots.

Says the English Fellow, ye forry Dog, your hilling is but a Penny. Aye, fays Sawny (who it eems was a Lover of Ale) 'tis true, but the Deel k him that has the least Pint-Stoup.

THEY tell me, that in Edinburgh, and other reat Towns where there are confiderable Brewgs, they put Salt into the Drink, which makes brackish and intoxicating.

THE Natives of this Town speak better English an those of any other Part of Scotland, having arned it originally from the Troops in the Time Oliver Cromwell; but the Irish Accent that somemes attends it, is not very agreeable. THE Irish Tongue was (I may fay lately) univer-, even in many Parts of the Lowlands; and I hich we heard it from feveral in Edinburgh, that before to the Union it was the Language of the Shire of Fife, is often though that County be feparated from the Capital as the ply by the Frith of Forth, an Arm of the Sea, Ears of hich from thence is but feven Miles over. And and a Proof they told me, after that Event (the coam nion) it became one Condition of an Indenture, at the len a Youth of either Sex was to be bound on Doo the Edinburgh Side of the Water, that the An prentice should be taught the English Tongue.

THIS Town is not ill fituated for Trade, and very well for a Herring Fishery in particular; but except the Shoals would be fo complaifant as to fleer into some Part of the Murray Frith near them, they may remain in Safety from any Attempts of our Adventurers: Yet notwithstanding they do not go out to Sea themselves, they are continually complaining of the Dutch, who they fay, with their wast Number of Busses, break and drive the Shoah from coming nearer to them.

. THERE was lately a Year in which they made confiderable Advantage (I think they fay five or fir Thousand Pounds) from the Quantity of File which, as I may fay, fell into their Mouths; be this happens very rarely, and then their Nets an Vessels are in a bad Condition. Their Excuse is that they are poor; and when they have been alked Why then does not a greater Number contribute to a Stock fufficient to carry on a Fishery effectually To this they have answered frankly, that they coul not trust one another.

Some of the honester Sort have complained that when they had a good Quantity of Fish to fen Abroad (for the Sake of the Bounty on Salt et ported) the Herrings have not fwam much thick in the Barrel than they did before in the Sea, at this brought their Ships into Difrepute at foreign Markets.

I HAVE heard, from good Authority, of a Pie of Finesse that was practised here, which must ha been the Product of some very fertile Brain, or the screwing of Wool into a Cask, and laying or other it some Pieces of pickled Salmon, separated by much false Head, and by that Means, and an Oath of taining the Bounty upon Salt exported, as if the tom-h

who

to

ra

do

M

is,

fo

ftr P

an

po

han

wa Scr

firf

faid

Wi

hav

Bran

Nor

mad

twel

poste Hou

Whe

ceede

knew

B

N give whole was Salmon, and, at the fame Time, running the Wool; but to this, the Connivance of the Collector of the Customs was necessary.

Ap.

and

but

teer

em.

s of

not

om-

heir

ioals

ade 1

or fir

Fish

, bu

and

ife is

fked

ate t ially

coul

aine

o fen

ilt er hick

a, an oreig

a Pie

If ha

n, v ng ov

d by ath o

who

THIS Fraud (among others) was made a Handle to procure the Appointment of an Inspector General at the Salary of 200 l. per Annum, which was done at the Representation and Request of a certain M-of P-who had been, as the Cant is, a good Boy for many Years, and never ask'd for any Thing: But at first the M-r made frong Objections to it, as it was to be a new-created Place, which was generally the Cause of Clamour, and particularly with Respect to the Person propoled, who had formerly been condemn'd to be hanged for Perjury, relating to the Customs, and was a Jacobite. But in order to remove all these Scruples, the Gentleman, who folicited the Affair, first acknowledged all that to be true. But, Sir, faid he, — the Laird is familiar with the Man's Wife: - Nay then, fays the M-r, - he must have it.

Nor long afterwards there was Information given, that a confiderable Quantity of Wine and Brandy was run and lodged in a House on the North Side of the Murray Frith; and the newmade Officer applied accordingly for a Serjeant and twelve Men to support him in making the Seizure.

Bur when he arrived at the Place, and had posted his Guard at some small Distance from the House, he went in and declared his Business: Whereupon the Owner told him, that if he proceeded further he would ruin him; for that he knew of a Sum of Money he had taken, on the other Side of the Water, for his Connivance at a much greater Cargoe.

UPON this, with Guilt and Surprise, the Cusif tom-house Officer faid, But what must I do with the Soldiers? Nay, fays the other, do you look to that.

Then he went out, and, having mused awhile, he returned in better Spirits, and said — now I have got it — you have Fire-Arms I suppose? Yes, says the other; then do you arm yourself and your Servants, and come resolutely to the Door, and swear to me, that you will all die upon the Spot rather than your House should be ransacked, unless an authentick Warrant was produced for that Put-pole.

This was done, and the Officer immediately fell to fumbling in his Pockets, till he had gone through the whole Order of them; and then turning to the Serjeant, he cried out, — What an unfortunate Dog am I! What shall I do?—I have left my Warrant at Home! To conclude, after all this Farce had been well acted, he told the Serjeant there could nothing be done, by Reason of this unlucky Accident, but to return to Invernels, giving him Half a Crown, and to each of the Soldiers one Shilling.

SOMETIME ago Insurance was the Practice, which the Royal Exchange soon discovered; but this Imputation was brought upon the Town, as I have been affured, by one fingle Person.

But what am I talking of? I am mentioning to you four or five illicite Dealers, when you can tel me of great Part of our own Coast, where almost all Degrees of Men are either practifing, encouraging, or conniving at the same Iniquity.

THE principal Importation of these Parts confists in Wines, Brandy, Tea, Silks, &c. which is no great Advantage to those who deal that Way when their Losses by bad Debts, Seizures, and other Casualties, are taken into the Account And it is injurious to the Community, by ex changing

1

В

to

B

h

G

fa

lu

G

bu

ex

to

bu

be

in

my

Reabo

07 titie

by and

fenf thin

Tin

tere

be t

the

I

changing their Money for those Commodities which are consumed among themselves, excepting the Soldiery and a few Strangers who bring their Money with them.

to

ile,

ave fays

Ser-

rear

ther

an our-

tely cone

urn-

un-

have after

Ser-

n of rnels.

Sol-

Tice.

as l ng to

lmol

con-

Way

, and

count y ex

EVERY now and then, by Starts, there have been Agreements made, among the Landed Men, to banish, as much as in them lay, the Use of Brandy in particular. By these Contracts they have promised to confine themselves to their own Growth, and to enjoin the same to their Families, Tenants, and other Dependants; but, like some salutary Laws made for the Publick, these Resolutions have not been long regarded.

I WISH the Reformation could be made for the Good of the Country, (for the Evil is universal;) but I cannot say I should even be contented it should extend to the Claret, till my Time comes to return to England and humble Port, of which, if I were but only inclined to taste, there is not one Glass to be obtained for Love or Money, either here, or in any other Part of Scotland, that has fallen within my Knowledge; but this does not at all excite my Regret. You will say I have been giving you, above, a pretty Picture of Patriotism in Miniature, or as it relates to myself.

Sometimes they export pretty handsome Quantities of pickled Salmon, and the Money expended by the Troops is a good Advantage to the Town and the Country hereabouts; of which they are so sensible, that, unlike our own Countrymen, who think the Soldiery a Burden, they have several Times sollicited for more Companies to be quartered in the Town; though God knows that most of the Quarters are such, as with you would hardly be thought good enough for a favourite Dog.

It is but the other Day that a Grenadier came to the Commanding Officer, and begged of him to take a View of his Bed, and, with Tears in his Eyes, told him, he had always been a clean Fellow, (for those were his Words) but here he could not keep himfelf free from Vermin.

Fo

As I happened to be present, the Officer defired me to go along with him. I did fo, and what the Man called a Bed, proved to be a little Quantity of Straw, not enough to keep his Sides from the Hardness of the Ground, and that too laid under the Stairs, very near the Door of a miserable Hovel. And though the Magistrates have often been applied to, and told, that the very meanest among the Soldiers had never been used to fuch Lodging, yet their favourite Town's-People have always been excused, and these most wretched Quarters continued to them. And I cannot doubt, but this has contributed greatly to the Bloody-Flux, which sweeps away so many of them, that, at some Seasons, for a good while together, there has hardly a Day passed but a Soldier has been buried. Thus are they defirous to make their Gains of the poor Men, without any Regard to their Ease or their Health, which I think is something to the Purpose of a profligate Saying I have heard, - Give me the Fortune, and let the Devil take the Woman. But when the new Barracks are compleated, the Soldiers will have warm Quarters, and the Town lose great Part of their Profit, by Provision made for them from more distant Parts.

THERE is one Practice among these Merchants, which is not only political but commendable, and not to be met with every where, which is, That if a Bill of Exchange be drawn upon any one of them, and he fails in Cash to make Payment in due Time, in that Case the rest of them will contribute

0

t

h

n

n

h

0

of

in

T

ab

ap

Pa

To

It

Ma

cef

felo

of t

am

the

Clo

to it, rather than the Town should receive any Discredit.

In a former Letter, I took Notice, that there are two Churches in this Town, one for English, the other for the Irish Tongue. To these there are three Ministers, each of them, as I am told, at one hundred Pounds a Year.

d

25

0 re

y

to

le

ed

ot,

y-

at,

ere

en

eir

to ne-

ave

vil

cks

ar-

fit,

ant

nts,

and

hat

of

due oute

to

Ir is a Rule in Scotland, or, at least, is generally understood to be so, that none shall have more than that Stipend, or any less than sifty: Yet I have been likewise informed, that some of the Ministers in Edinburgh, and other Cities, make of it near two Hundred, but how the Addition arises has not come to my Knowledge. What I shall say of the Ministers of this Town is, that they are Men of good Lives and sober Conversation, and less stiff in many indifferent Matters, than most of their Brethren in other Parts of Scotland; and to say the Truth, the Scottish Clergy (except some rare Examples to the contrary) lead regular and unblamable Lives.

WHAT I have further to say on this Head shall be more general, but nothing of this Kind can be applied to all.

The Subjects of their Sermons are, for the most Part, Grace, Free-Will, Predestination, and other Topicks hardly ever to be determined: They might as well talk Hebrew to the Common People, and I think to any Body else. But thou shalt do no Manner of Work, they urge with very great Success. The Text relating to Casar's Tribute is seldom explained, even in Places where great Part of the Inhabitants live by the contrary of that Example. In England you know, the Minister, if the People were found to be negligent of their Cloaths when they came to Church, would recommend Decency and Cleanliness, as a Mark of Remember 1997.

0 te

Cl

111

M

C

0

th

Mo

fpe&t due to the Place of Worship; and indeed, humanly speaking, it is so to one another. But on the contrary, if a Woman, in some Parts of Scolland, should appear at Kirk, dressed, though not better than at an ordinary Visit, she would be in Danger of a Rebuke from the Pulpit, and of being told she ought to purify her Soul, and not employ Part of the Sabbath in decking out her Body; and I must needs say, that most of the Females in both Parts of the Kingdom, follow, in that Particular, the Instructions of their spiritual Guides, religiously.

THE Ministers here in Scotland would have the Ladies come to Kirk in their Plaids, which hide any loose Dress, and their Faces too, if they will be persuaded, in order to prevent the wandering Thoughts of young Fellows, and perhaps some young old ones too. For the Minister looks upon a well-dressed young Woman to be an Object unsit to be seen in the Time of Divine Service, especially if she be handsome.

THE beforementioned Writer of a Journey through Scotland, has borrowed a Thought from the Tatler or Spectator, I do not remember which of them.

SPEAKING of the Ladies Plaids—" He says they are striped with Green, Scarlet, and other Colours, which in the Middle of a Church on a Sunday looks like a Parterre de Fleurs." Instead of striped he should have said chequered, but that would not so well agree with his Flowers; and I must ask Leave to differ from him in the Simile, for at first I thought it a very odd Sight; and, as so outward Appearance, more fit to be compared with an Assembly of Harlequins than a Bed of Tulips.

ed,

on cot-

not

in

oloy

and

oth

lar,

igi

the

nide

will ring

ome

pon

nfit

fpe-rney the

fays ther on a lead that nd I nile, as to ared

d of

BUT

BUT I am told this Traveller through Scotland was not ill paid for his Adulation, by the extraordinary Call there has been for his last Volume. The other two, which I am told relate to England, I have not seen, nor did I ever hear their Character.

THEY tell me this Book is more common in this Country than I shall say, and this, in particular, that I have seen, was thumbed in the opening where the pretty Town of Inverness is mentioned, much more more than the Book we saw at a Painter's House in Westminster, some Years ago; which you will remember (to our Diversion) was immoderately soiled in that important Part where Mention was made of himself.

O FLATTERY! never did any Altar smoke with so much Incense as thine.

THY Female Votaries fall down reversed before thee. The Wise, the Great, whole Towns, Cities, Provinces, and Kingdoms, receive thy Oracles with Joy, and even adore the very Priests that serve in thy Temples!

LETTER IX.

I Wish these Ministers would speak oftener, and sometimes more civily than they do of Morality.

F 4

To

i

fa

ft

F

br

fia

Va

A

de

to

tra

me

M

WO

in ,

ple,

tior

Kir

has

Mo

that

Min

of ar

Con

pea

into

H

To tell the People they may go to Hell with all their Morality at their Back: This furely may infinuate to weak Minds, that it is to be avoided as a kind of Sin; at best that it will be of no Use to them. And then no Wonder they neglect it, and fet their enthusiastick Notions of Grace in the Place of Righteousness. This is in general, but I must own in particular, that one of the Ministers of this Town has been so careful of the Morals of his Congregation, that he earnestly exhorted them from the Pulpit, to sly from the Example of a wicked neighbouring Nation.

THEIR Prayers are often more like Narrations to the Almighty, than Petitions for what they want; and the Sough, as it is called, the Whine, is unmanly, and much beneath the Dignity of their Subject.

I HAVE heard of one Minister, so great a Proficient in this Sough, and his Notes so remarkably slat and productive of Horror, that a Master of Musick set them to his Fiddle: And the Wag used to say, that in the most jovial Company, after he had played his Tune but once over, there was no more Mirth among them, all the rest of that Evening, than if they were just come out of the Cave of Triphonius.

THEIR preaching Extempore exposes them to the Danger of exhibiting undigested Thoughts and Mistakes, as indeed it might do to any others who make long Harangues without some previous Study and Reslexion. But that some of them make little Preparation, I am apt to conclude from their im-methodical Ramblings.

I shall mention one Mistake: I may call it an Abfurdity.

THE Minister was explaining to his Congregation the great Benefits arising from the Sabbath. n-

as

to

nd

ce

uff

of

his

em

2 ons

ney

ne,

leit

ro-

ably

r of

Vag

fter

Was

that

the

n to

and

who

Study

little

· im-

it an rega-

bbath.

He

He told them it was a Means of frequently renewing their Covenant, &c. — And likewise, it was a worldly Good; as a Day of Rest for themselves, their Servants, and Cattle. Then he recounted to them the different Days observed in other Religions. As the Seventh Day by the Jews, &c. But, says he, behold the particular Wisdom of our Institution, in ordaining it to be kept on the First: For if it were any other Day, it would make a broken Week.

THE Cant is only approved of by the Ignorant (poor or rich) into whom it instils a Kind of Enthusiasm, in moving their Passions by sudden Starts of various Sounds. They have made of it a Kind of Art not easy to attain. But People of better Understanding make a Jest of this Drollery, and seem to be highly pleased when they meet with its contrary. The latter is manifest to me by their Judgment of a Sermon preached at Edinburgh by a Scot's Minister, one Mr. Wishart.

Several of us went to hear him, and you would not have been better pleased in any Church in England.

THERE was a great Number of considerable People, and never was there a more general Approbation than there was among them at going from the Kirk.

This Gentleman, as I was afterwards informed, has fet before him Archbishop Tillotson for his Model; and, indeed, I could discover several of that Prelate's Thoughts in the Sermon.

How different was that of another Edinburgh Minister, who, in one of his Sermons, made Use of an extraordinary Comparison, surely not fit for a Congregation to hear, viz. Christians, with Respect to Grace, are like a Maid; its hard to get it into them, difficult to make them keep it, and F 5 paintul painful for them to part with it. But it may be fupposed, that when Mess John had stumbled upon the Simile, he thought it too a propos to be concealed. And I have been told, that in explaining to a poor Sinner upon the Stool of Repentance, the Heinousness of the Sin of Fornication, some of them, in their extemporary Admonitions, have stumbled upon Descriptions not much tending to promote Chastity in the Congregation.

ONE of the Ministers of this Town (an old Man who died some time ago) undertook one Day, to entertain us with a Dialogue from the Pulpit relating to the Fall of Man, in the following Manner, which cannot so well be conveyed in Writing a

ŧ

ł

b

1

ti

b

19 th

ha

ter

Do

col

COU

eac

Wit

I

fhor

the

upo

of tl

fayin

thou

Were

by Word of Mouth.

FIRST he spoke in a low Voice.-

AND the L. G. came into the Garden and faid——

Then loud and angrily — Adam where art?

Low and humbly — Lo here am I, Lord!

Violently — And what are ye deeing there?

With a fearful trembling Accent — Lord!

was nacked, and I hid myfel.

Outrageously -- Nacked! And what then Hast thou eaten, &c.

Thus he profanely (without thinking it fo) deficibed the Omniscient and Merciful God in the Character of an angry Master, who had not Patience to hear what his poor offending Servant hat to say in excuse of his Fault. And this they cal speaking in a familiar Way to the Understanding of the ordinary People.

But perhaps they think what the famous Aftro loger Lilly declared to a Gentleman who asked him how he thought any Man of good Sense would but his Predictions? This Question started another which was — What Proportion the Men of Sense bor bore to those who could not be called so? And at last they were reduced to one in twenty. Now, says the Conjurer, let the nineteen buy my Prophecies, and then (snapping his Fingers) That I for your one Man of good Sense.

be

pon

on-

ing

nce,

e of

ave

g to

Man

en-

ting

ner,

1g 25

and

?

ord I

then

o) de

in the

nt had

y cal

nding

Aftro

ed hin

ld bu

other

Seni

Nor to trouble you with any more Particulars of their Oddities from the Pulpit, I shall only say, that since I have been in this Country, I have heard so many, (and of so many) that I really think there is nothing set down in the Book called Scots Presbyterian Eloquence, but what, at least, is probable: But the young Ministers are introducing a Manner more decent and reasonable, which irritates the old Stagers against them, and therefore they begin to preach at one another.

Ir you happen to be in Company with one or more of them, and Wine, Ale, or even a Dram is called for, you must not drink till a long Grace be said over it, unless you could be contented to be thought irreligious and unmannerly.

Sometime after my coming to this Country, I had Occasion to ride a little Way with two Minifters of the Kirk, and as we were passing by the Door of a Change, one of them (the Weather being cold) proposed a Dram.

As the Ale-house-keeper held it in his Hand, I could not conceive the Reason of their bowing to each other, as pleading by Signs to be excused, without fpeaking one. Word,

I could not think they were contending who should drink last, and myself, a Stranger, out of the Question, but in the End the Glass was forced upon me, and I found the Compliment was, which of them should give the Preference to the other of saying Grace over the Brandy. For my Part I thought they did not well consider to whom they were about to make their Address, when they were were using all this Ceremony one to another in his Presence. And (to use their own Way of Argument) concluded they would not have done it in the Presence at St. Fames's.

THEY seem to me to have but little Knowledge of Men, being restrained from all free Conversation, even in Cossee-houses, by the Fear of Scandal, which may be attended with the Loss of their Livelihood; and they are exceedingly strict and severe upon one another in every Thing, which, according to their Way of judging, might give Offence.

Nor long ago, one of them, as I am told, was fuspended for having a Shoulder of Mutton roasted on a Sunday Morning; another for powdering his Peruke on that Day. Six or seven Years ago, a Minister, (if my Information be right) was suspended by one of the Presbyteries. The Occasion this:

He was to preach at a Kirk fome little Way within the Highlands, and fet out on the Saturday; but, in his Journey, the Rains had swelled the Rivers to such a Degree, that a Ford, which lay in his Way, was become impassable.

This obliged him to take up his Lodging for that Night, at a little Hut near the River, and getting up early the next Morning, he found the Waters just enough abated for him to venture a Passage, which he did with a good deal of Hazard, and came to the Kirk in good Time, where he found the People affembled and waiting his Arrival.

This riding on Horse-back of a Sunday was deemed a great Scandal. It is true, that when this Affair was brought by Appeal before the General Assembly in Edinburgh, his Suspension was removed,

3

W

0 bo

ar

re

pr

up

it

Oc

tha Th

Par

dor bat removed, but not without a good many Debates on the Subject.

his

gu-

the

dge

ría-

anneir

and

ich,

give

Was

fted

his

0, 2

fuf-fion

Vay

lay;

the

lay

for and the

Paf-ard, e he

Arri-

was when

Ge-

was

oved,

Though some Things of this Kind are carried too far, yet I cannot but be of Opinion, that these Restraints on the Conduct of the Ministers, which produce so great Regularity among them, contribute much to the Respect they meet with from the People, for although they have not the Advantage of any outward Appearance, by Dress, to strike the Imagination, or to distinguish them from other Men who happen to wear Black, or dark Grey, yet they are, I think I may say, ten Times more reverenced than our Ministers in England.

THEIR Severity, likewise, to the People, for Matters of little Consequence, or even for Works of Necessity, is sometimes extraordinary.

A POOR Man who lodged in a little House where (as I have said) one Family may often hear what is said in another; this Man was complained of to the Minister of the Parish, by his next Neighbour, that he had talked too freely to his own Wife, and threatened her with such Usage, as we may reasonably suppose she would easily forgive.

In Conclusion, the Man was sentenced to do Penance for giving Scandal to his Neighbours: A pretty Subject for a Congregation to ruminate

upon!

THE Informer's Wife, it feems, was utterly against her Husband's making the Complaint, but it was thought she might have been the innocent Occasion of it, by some provoking Words or Signs that bore Relation to the Criminal's Offence. This was done not far from Edinburgh.

ONE of our more northern Ministers, whose Parish lies along the Coast between Spey and Findorn, made some Fishermen do Penance for Sabbath-breaking, in going out to Sea, though purely with Endeavour to fave a Veffel in Distress by a Storm. But behold how inconsistent with this pious Zeal, was his Practice in a Case relating to his own Profit.

WHENEVER the Director of a certain English Undertaking in this Country fell short of Silver, wherewith to pay a great number of Workmen, and he was therefore obliged, on Pay-Day, to give Gold to be divided among several of them; then this careful Guardian of the Sabbath exacted of the poor Men a Shilling for the Change of every Guinea, taking that exorbitant Advantage of their Necessity.

In Business, or ordinary Conversation, they are, for the most Part, complaisant, and, I may say, supple, when you talk with them singly; at least I have found them so; but, when collected in a Body at a Presbytery, or Synod, they assume a vast Author rity, and make the poor Sinner tremble.

CONSTANTLY attending Ordinances, as they phrase it, is a Means with them of softening Vices into mere Frailties; but a Person who neglects the Kirk, will find but little Quarter.

SOMETIME ago two Officers of the Army had transgressed with two Sisters at Sterling: One of these Gentlemen seldom failed of going to Kirk, the other never was there. The Affair came to a Hearing before a Presbytery, and the Result was, That the Girl who had the Child by the Kirk-goer was an impudent Baggage, and deserved to be whipped out of the Town, for seducing an honest Man; and that he who never went to Kirk, was an abandoned Wretch for debauching her Sister.

WHETHER the ordinary People have a Notion that when so many holy men meet together upon any Occasion, the evil Spirits are thereby provoked to be mischievous, or what their whimsical Fancy 13.

th

CO

ful

wł

2 1

fo !

is, I cannot tell; but it is with them a common Saying, — That when the Clergy assemble, the Day is certainly tempestuous.

13

0 Ь

n,

ve

en

ne

гу

ar

e, dy

0-ey es he ad

of k,

0 2

as,

be

eft

vas

ion

non

ced

cy

13,

Is my Countrymens Division of the Year were just, there would always be a great Chance for it, without any supernatural Cause; for they say, in these northern Parts, the Year is composed of nine Months Winter, and three Months bad Weather; but I cannot fully agree with them in their Observation, though, as I have said before, the neighbouring Mountains frequently convey to us such Winds, as may, not improperly, be called Tempests.

In one of my Journeys hither, I observed, at the first Stage on this Side Berwick, a good deal of Scribling upon a Window; and, among the rest, the following Lines, viz.

A. H.

By the two initial Letters of a Name, I foon concluded it was your Neighbour Mr. Aaron Hill, but wondered at his Manner of taking Leave of this Country, after he had been fo exceedingly complainant to it, when here, as to compare its subterraneous Riches with those of Mexico and Peru.

THERE is one Thing which I always greatly disapproved, which is; that when any thing is whispered, though by few, to the Disadvantage of a Woman's Reputation, and the Matter be never so doubtful; the Ministers are officiously busy to find

&quot; Scotland! Thy Weather's like a modifit Wife,

&quot;Thy Winds and Rains for ever are at Strife; So Termagant, a while her Bluster tries, &quot;And when she can no longer fcold — she "cries."

H

W

2

to

of

be

C

te

no tio

to

a

an the

the

an

up

aga in wit

La

ma

de (

unn

te te

c cc

Tha

gran

s ar But f

eft b

find out the Truth, and, by that Means, make a Kind of Publication of what, perhaps, was only a malicious Surmise; or, if true, might have been hushed up. But their stirring in it, possesses the Mind of every one, who has any Knowledge of the Party accused, to her Disadvantage: And this is done to prevent Scandal! I will not say what I have heard others alledge, That those who are so needlessy inquisitive, in Matters of this Nature, must certainly feel a secret Pleasure in such like Examinations. And the Joke among the English is, that they highly approve of this Proceeding, as it serves for a Direction where to find a loving Girl upon Occasion.

I HAVE been told, that if two, or more, of these Ministers admonish, or accuse a Man, concerning the Scandal of suspected Visits to some Woman, and that he, through Anger, Peevishness, Contempt, or Desire to skreen the Woman's Reputation, should say; She is my Wife; then the Ministers will make a Declaration upon the Spot to this Purpose, viz.

In the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, We pronounce you A. B. and C. D. to be Man and Wise; and the Marriage is valid at least so far as it relates to Scotland; but whether this Kind of Coupling would be binding when the Parties are in any other Country, has not come to my Knowledge.

IF a Woman of any Confideration has made a Slip which becomes visible, and her Lover be a Man of some Fortune and an Inhabitant, the Kirk will support her, and oblige him either to marry her, to undergo the Penance, or leave the Country. For the Woman in that Circumstance always declares she was deceived under Promise of Marriage; and some of them have spread their Snares

e a

nly

en

the

the 18

t I

fo

re,

ike

lifb

as

irl

of

on-

10-

efs,

pu-

Mi-

to

oly

be

east

this

my le a e a

the

to

the nce

e of

heir

ares

Snares with Design, by that Means, to catch a Husband*. Nay I have known English Gentlemen, who have been in Government Employments, that, after fuch an Affair, have been hunted from Place to Place, almost from one End of Scotland to the other, by the Women, who, where ever they came, have been favoured by the Clergy, and at best the Man has got rid of his Embarasment by a Composition. And, indeed, it is no jesting Matter; for although his Stay in this Country might not be long enough to fee the End of the Profecution, or, by Leave of Absence, he might get away to England, yet the Process being carried on from a Kirk Session to a Presbytery, and thence to a Synod, and from them to the General Affembly, which is the dernier Refort in these Cases; yet from thence the Crime and Contempt may be represented above; and how could any particular Person expect to be upheld in the Continuance of his Employment, against so considerable a Body as a National Clergy, in Transgression against the Laws of the Country, with a Contempt of that Authority by which those Laws are supported.

I MENTION this, because I have heard several make a Jest of the Kirk's Authority.

WHEN

* Monf. De St. Evremont, in a Letter to the Marquis de Crequi, fays much the same Thing of the young unmarried Dutch Women.

&quot;A la Verité on ne trouve pas à redire à la Galanterie des Filles, qu'on leur laisse employer bonnement comme une aide innocente à se procurer des Epoux." That is; It's certain, young Maids are not censured for granting the last Favour but are lest to use it honestly, is an innocent Means to procure themselves Husbands. But first he makes it very rare that they are afterwards est by their Lovers.

hi

ti

al

th

ar

M

ei

le

Pa

m fre

ob

C

for

ca

Sta

cei

wi

of

he tol

the

Ly

dro

the

Ne

cho

the

the

low

of a

I

Gal

wel

WHEN a Woman has undergone the Penance, with an Appearance of Repentance, she has wiped off the Scandal among all the Godly, and a Female Servant, in that regenerated State, is as well received into one of those Families, as if she had never given a Proof of her Frailty.

THERE is one Kind of Severity of the Kirk which I cannot but think very extraordinary, and that is, the shameful Punishment by Penance for Ante-nuptial Fornication, as they call it; for the greatest Part of Male-Transgressors, that Way, when they have gratified their Curiofity, entertain a quite different Opinion of the former Object of their Defire, from what they had while the retain'd her Innocence, and regard her with Contempt, if not with Hatred. And therefore one might think it a Kind of Virtue, at least Honesty, in the Man who afterwards makes the only Reparation he can for the Injury done, by marrying the Woman he has otherwise brought to Infamy. Now may not this publick Shame deter many from making that honest Satisfaction? But the great Offence is against the Office, which formerly here was the Prerogative of the civil Magistrate, as well as the Minister, till the former were justled out of it by Clamour.

THERE happened, a very few Years ago, a fatal Instance of the Change of Opinion above-mentioned.

A YOUNG Gentleman (if he may deserve the Title) made his Addresses to the only Daughter of a considerable Merchant in a City of the Lowlands; and one Evening, as the young People were alone together, being supposed to be just upon the Eve of Marriage, and the young Woman's Father and Mother in the next Room, which was separated only by a slight Partition; the eager Spark made

nce,

iped

male

re-

had

Kirk

and

for

the

Vay,

nter-

bjed

: The

Con-

one

efty,

epa-ying

amy.

from great

here

well

nt of fatal

men-

e the

ter of ands;

alone

Eve

r and rated

made

his

his villainous Attempt with Oaths and Imprecations; and using the common Plea, that they were already Man and Wife before God, and promifing the Ceremony should be performed the next Day, and perhaps he meant it at that Instant. By these Means he put the poor Girl under a Dilemma, either to give herself up, or, by resisting the Violence, to expose her Lover to the Fury of her Thus fhe was - what shall I say - one Parents. must not say undone, for fear of a Joke, though not from you. And as that Kind of Conquest, once obtained, renders the Vanquish'd a Slave to her Conqueror, the Wedding was delayed, and she soon found herfelf with Child. At length the Time came when she was delivered, and in that feeble State she begged she might only speak to her Deceiver, who, with great Difficulty, was prevailed with to fee her. But when she put him in Mind of the Circumstance she was in when he brought her to Ruin, he, in a careless, indolent Manner, told her she was as willing as himself, upon which the cried out - Villain, you know yourfelf to be a Lyar! and immediately jumped out of Bed, and dropped down dead upon the Floor.

BUT I must go a little further to do Justice to the young Gentlemen of that Town, and the Neighbourhood of it; for as soon as the melancholy Catastrophe was known, they declared to all the Keepers of Taverns and Cossee-Houses where they came, that if ever they entertained that Fellow, they would never after enter their Doors.

Thus, in a very little Time, he was deprived of all Society, and obliged to quit the Country.

I AM afraid your finant ones in London would have call'd this Act of Barbarity only a Piece of Gallantry; and the Betrayer would have been as well received among them as ever before.

IKNOW

I KNOW I should be laugh'd at by the Libertine for talking thus gravely upon this Subject, if m Letter were to fall into their Hands. But it is not in their Power, by a Sneer, to alter the Nature of Justice, Honour, or Honesty, for they will always be the fame.

WHAT I have faid is only for repairing the Effect of Violence, Deceit, and Perjury; and of this, every one is a conscious Judge of himself.

IF any one is brought before a Presbytery, & to be questioned for Sculduddery, i. e. Fornication. or Adultery, and shews a Neglect of their Author rity, the Offender is not only brought to Punish ment by their Means, but will be avoided by his Friends, Acquaintance, and all that know him and his Circumstance in that Respect.

I REMEMBER a particular Instance in Edinburgh where the Thing was carried to an extraordinar Height.

A MARRIED Footman was accused of Adulter with one of the Wenches in the fame Family where he ferved, and, before a Kirk Seffion, wa required to confess, for nothing less will fatisfy But he persisted in a Denial of the Fact.

THIS Contempt of the Clergy and Lay Elden or, as they fay, of the Kirk, excited against him fo much, the Refentment and Horror of the ordi nary People, (who looked upon him as in a State of Damnation, while the Anathema hung over his Head) that none of them would drink at the Houle where his Wife kept a Change.

Thus the poor Woman was punished for th Obstinacy of her Husband, notwithstanding sh was innocent, and had been wronged the other Way.

I was told in Edinburgh, that a certain Scott Colonel being convicted of Adultery (as being married

ent

000

A

ou

ow 5 (

fide nd

nis

S

igh

V O ho.

em

ulp pec

H

oni

lirt

T

bnec oliti

e K

arg

As

rs a u w

tion

le,

rtici linbu

d lei nes.

not e of

Vava

the

d of පිද tion,

itho

nish-

y his and

ltery amily

tisfy

Elders

him

ordi

tate o

er hi

House

eing narrie

parried Man) and refusing to compound, he was entenced to stand in a Hair Cloth, at the Kirk nd to this he fubmitted.

At the Beginn: oor, every Sunday Morning for a whole Year,

AT the Beginning of his Penance, he concealed is Face as much as he could, but three or four oung Lasses passing by him, one of them stooped own, and cried out to her Companions, Lord! Colonel - Upon which he fuddenly threw fide his Disguise, and said, Miss, you are right, and if you will be the Subject of it, I will wear is Coat another Twelvemonth.

Some young Fellows of Fortune have made ight of the Stool of Repentance, being attended yothers of their Age and Circumstances of Life, ho, to keep them in Countenance, stand with em in the fame Gallery or Pew, fronting the inar ulpit; fo that many of the Spectators, Strangers pecially, cannot distinguish Culprit from the eft.

HERE is a long extemporary Reproof and Ad-, W25 onition, as I faid before, which often creates firth among some of the Congregation.

THIS Contempt of the Punishment has occaned, and more especially of late Years, a Comofition in Money with these young Rakes; and e Kirk Treasurer gives regular Receipts and Disarges for fuch and fuch Fornications.

As I have already told you how much the Minifis are revered, especially by the Commonalty, will readily conclude the Mob are at their Deor the tion, upon the least Hint given for that Pur-ng she, of which there are many riotous Instances, other ticularly at the Opening of the Play-house in linburgh, to which the Clergy were very averse, Scott deft no Stone unturned to prevent it.

I Do not indeed remember there was much Disturbance at the Institution of the Ball or Assembly, because that Meeting is chiefly composed of ing People of Distinction, and none are admitted but such as have, at least, a just Title to Gentility, except Strangers of good Appearance. And if, by But Chance, any others intrude, they are expelled upon the Spot, by Order of the Directrice or Governors, who is a Woman of Quality. I say it is not the in my Memory there was any Riot at the first of these Meetings, but some of the Ministers with least these Meetings. these Meetings, but some of the Ministers pub hap lished their Warnings and Admonitions against man promiscuous Dancing. And in one of their printer usur Papers, which was cried about the Streets, it was have faid, that the Devils are particularly bufy upon fuch Occasions. And Asmodeus was pitch'd upon and as the most dangerous of all, in exciting to Car nality. In both these Cases, viz. the Play-How Visi and the Assembly, the Ministers lost Ground t their great Mortification, for the most Part of th Ladies turned Rebels to their Remonstrances notwithstanding the frightful Danger.

I THINK I never faw fo many pretty Wome of Distinction together as at that Assembly, an therefore it is no Wonder, that those who know the artful Infinuations of that fleshly Spirit shoul be jealous of fo much Beauty.

But I have not done with my Kirk Treasura This, in Edinburgh, is thought a profitable En

I HAVE heard of one of them (severe enough In upon others) who, having a round Sum of Me ney in his Keeping, the Property of the Kin would marched off with the Cash, and took his Neighbut F bour's Wife along with him, to bear him Con he Sa pany, and partake of the Spoil.

hey

ure

our f V

elve

T

pon

o fee ffron

Wife

1

Men iers,

n In

PEC

hiftli

THERE are some rugged Hills about the Skirts of that City, which, by their Hollows and Windings, may ferve as Skreens from incurious Eyes; but there are Sets of Fellows, Enemies to Love, and Lovers of Profit, who make it a Part of their Business, when they see two Persons of different Sexes walk out to take the Air, to dog them about from Place to Place, and observe their Motions, while they themselves are concealed. And if they happen to see any Kind of Freedom between them, or perpub haps none at all, they march up to them and de-ains mand the Bulling-filler (alluding to the Money mand the Bulling-filler (alluding to the Money interest in the street of the Use of a Bull;) and if they have not something given them, (which to do upon would be a tacit Confession) they, very likely, go upon and inform the Kirk Treasurer of what perhaps they never saw, who certainly makes the Man a House Visit the next Morning. And as he, the Treasurer, like our informing Justices formerly, entourages these Wretches, People lie at the Mercy and the Villains, who would, perhaps, forswear themselves for Six-pence a Piece.

The same Fellows, or such like, are peeping bout the Streets of Edinburgh in the Night-time, and so see who and who are together, and sometimes should firont a Brother and Sister, or a Man and his Wife.

I have known the Town-Guard, a Band of

THE

uch em-

of

but lity, by

afure I HAVE known the Town-Guard, a Band of En Men armed and cloathed in Uniforms, like Soliers, to beset a House for a whole Night, upon Information that a Man and a Woman went of Month there, though in the Day-time. In short, one Kirl would think there was no Sin, according to them, Neighbut Fornication; or other Virtue besides keeping Combe Sabbath.

PEOPLE would startle more at the humming or histling Part of a Tune on a Sunday, than if any Body should tell them you had ruined

n

21

Ca

cl

ez

be

W

is gai

mu Mi

the 1

to g

Th

told

a Sa

Family.

I THOUGHT I had finished my Letter, but stepping to the Window, I saw the People crowding out of the Kirk from Morning Service; and the Bell begins to ring, as if they were to sace about and return. And now I am sat down again to add a few Words on that Subject; but you have perceived that such occasional Additions have been pretty common in the Course of this Prattle.

THIS Bell is a Warning to those who are going out, that they must soon return, and a Notice to fuch as are at Home, that the Afternoon Service is fpeedily to begin. They have a Bell in most of the Lowland Kirks: and as the Presbyterians, and other Sectaries in England, are not allowed to be convened by that Sound (of their own) fo neither are those of the Episcopal Church in Scotland, But I need not tell you, that every where the reigning Church will be Paramont, and keep all other Communities under. The People, in the short Interval between the Times of Service, walk about in the Church-yard, the neighouring Fields, or step Home, and eat an Egg, or some little ready-dreffed Morfel, and then go back to their Devotions. But they fare better in the Evening which has given Rife to a common Saying Scotland, viz.

"IF you would live well on the Sabbath, you must eat an Episcopal Dinner, and a Presbyterian Supper." By this it should seem, that the Episcoparians here provide a Dinner, as in England; I say it seems so, for I never was at one of their Meetings, or dined with any of them at their Houses on a Sunday.

I HAVE just now taken Notice, that each Churchas but one Bell, which leads me to acquaint you that on a Joy-Day, as the King's Birth-Day, &c. (we will suppose in Edinburgh, where there are nine Churches) the Bells are all rung at a Time, and almost all of them within Hearing. This causes a most disagreeable Jangling, by their often clashing one with another. And thus their Joy is expressed by the same Means, as our Sorrow would be for the Death of a good King.

Bur their Musick Bells (as they call them) are very entertaining, and a Disgrace to our Clock-

Work Chimes.

out

d-

ind

ace

ain

ave

een

ing

e to e is

e of

and

be

ther

and.

the

all

the walk elds, little their ning erial the Engine of their hurc t you

th

THEY are plaid at the Hours of Exchange, that is from Eleven to Twelve, upon Keys like an Organ or Harpficord, only as the Force, in this Case, must be greater than upon those Instruments, the Musician has a small Cushion to each Hand to save them from bruising.

He plays Scots, English, Irish, and Italian Tunes to great Perfection, and is heard all over the City. This he performs every Week-Day, and, I am told, he receives from the Town, for this Service, a Salary of Fifty Pounds a Year.

LETTER X

Me

faid Ye he

he

beer

Mai

need

hard

Scra

iou

Dec

V

erp

cour

happ

aug

or l

ntir

I

woul

Anfv

pect

Mon

ip a

Am now to acquaint you, that I have not, at this Time, sufficient Provision for your usual Repast: But, by the Way, I cannot help accusing myself of some Arrogance, in using such a Metaphor, because your ordinary Fare has been little else beside Brochan, Cale, Stirabout, Sowings, &c. (Oatmeal varied in several Shapes:) But that you may be provided with something, I am now about to give you a Haggass, which would be yet less agreeable, were it not to be a little seasoned with Variety.

The Day before Yesterday, an Occasion called me to make a Progress of about six or seven Miles among the Mountains; but before I set out, I was told the Way was dangerous to Strangers, who might lose themselves in the Hills if they had not a Conductor. For this Reason, about two Miles from hence, I hired a Guide, and agreed with him for Sixpence to attend me the whole Day. This poor Man went Baresoot, sometimes by my Horse's Side, and in dangerous Places leading him by the Bridle, winding about from Side to Side among the Rocks, to such Gaps where the Horses could raise aife their Feet high enough to mount the Stones. or firide over them.

In this tedious Passage, in order to divert myself having an Interpreter with me), I asked my Guide great many Questions relating to the Highlands.

which he answered very properly.

In his Turn, he told me, by Way of Question, o hear what I would fay, that he believed there would be no War, but I did not understand his Meaning till I was told. By War he meant Rebellion; and then, with a dismal Countenance, he aid he was, by Trade, a Weaver, and that in the Year 1715 the Sidier Roy, or Red Soldiers, as hey call them (to diffinguish them from the Highand Companies, whom they call Sidier Dou; or he Black Soldiers) I fay he told me, that they burnt his House and his Loom, and he had never een in Condition, fince that Time, to purchase Materials for his Work; otherwise he had not needed to be a Guide; and he thought his Case very ard, because he had not been in the Affair, or the Grape, as they call it all over Scotland, being cauious of using the Word Rebellion. But this last Declaration of his I did not fo much depend on.

WHEN he had finished his Story, which, by Inerpreting, took up a good deal of Time, I recounted to him the Fable of the Pigeon's Fate that appened to be among the Jack Daws, at which he aughed heartily, notwithstanding his late Grief or his Loss; and doubtless the Fable was to him ntirely new.

, at

ifual

fing

etaittle

&c.

you

bout

1ess

with alled

Tiles

Was

who not a

Miles

him

This

orfe's

y the nong

could

raife

I THEN asked his Reason why he thought there would not be another War (as he called it) and his Answer was, he believed the English did not expect one, because they were fooling away their Money, in removing great Stones, and blowing up of Rocks.

HERE

m

H

tic

A

I

EL

an do

CI

2]

a ma

ane

to Ru

ha

Lo

not

by

the one ling

Lo

wer

and

Slav

beli

eng

Reb

told

Yea

for 1

ter

HERE he spoke his Grievance as a Guide, and indeed, when the Roads are finished, according to the Plan proposed, there will be but little Occasion for those People, except such as can speak English, and may, by some, be thought necessary for Interpreters in their Journeys: I say they will be useless as Guides alone, reckoning from the South of Scotland to this Town the Mountain Way (for along the Coast hither, the Road can hardly be mistaken) and counting again from the Lowlands to the West End of the Opening among the Mountains that run from hence quite across the Island.

But all the Highlands, be-north this Town and the faid Opening, will remain as rugged and dangerous as ever.

AT length I arrived at the Spot, of which I was to take a View, and found it most horrible, but in the Way that I went, being the shortest Cut going Southward, it is not to be avoided.

THIS is a deep narrow Hollow, between very steep Mountains, whereinto huge Parts of Rocks It is a terrifying Sight to those who have fallen. are not accustomed to such Views; and at Bottom is a fmall but dangerous Burne, running wildly among the Rocks, especially in Times of Rain. You descend by a Declivity in the Face of the Mountain, from whence the Rocks have parted (for they have visibly their Decay) and the Rivulet is particularly dangerous, when the Passenger is going along with the Stream, and purfued by the Torrent. But you have not far to go in this Bottom, before you leave the Current, which purfue its Way, in continued Windings, among the Feet of the Mountains; and foon after you ascend by steep and rocky Hill, and when the Height is attained, you would think the most rugged Ways you could possibly conceive of to be a happy Variety WHEN

WHEN I was returned to the Hutt where I took my Guide, being pleased with the Fellow's good Humour, and Frankness in answering my Questions, instead of Six-pence I gave him a Shilling. At first he could not trust his own Eyes, or thought I was mistaken; but being told what it was, and that it was all his own, he fell on his Knees and cry'd out, he never, in all his Life before, knew any Body give more than they bargained for. This done, he ran into his Hutt, and brought out four Children almost naked, to shew them to me, with a Prayer for the English. Thus I had, for so small a Price as one Six-pence, the exquiste Pleasure of making a poor Creature happy for a Time.

UPON my Highlander's Lamentation of his Loss, and present bad Circumstances, I could not forbear to reflect and moralize a little, concluding, that Ruin is Ruin, as much to the Poor as to those that had been Rich.

and

g to fion

lift,

ter-

eles

Scot-

ong

ken)

Veft

run

and dan-

Was

ut in oing

very locks

who

ttom

rildly

Rain.

the

arted

vulet

er is

y the

Bot-

irfues

Feet

by a

is at-

Ways

riety

HEN

HERE's a poor Highlandman (whose House, Loom, and all his other Effects were, its likely, not worth Thirty Shillings) as effectually undone, by the Loss he sustained, as one that had been in the Possession of Thousands; and the burning of one of their Hutts, which does not cost fifteen Shillings in Building, is much worse to them than the Loss of a Palace by Fire is to the Owner. were it not for their fond Attachment to their Chiefs. and the Advantage those Gentlemen take of their Slave-like Notions of Patriarchal Power, I verily believe there are but few among them that would engage in an Enterprize fo dangerous to them as Rebellion; and, as some Proof of this, I have been told, by feveral People of this Town, that, in the Year 1715, the then Earl of Mar continued here for near two Months together before he could muster two Hundred Highlanders, fo unwilling were G 3

h

á á

d

g

m li

m ar

pe

to

fo

PI

pa

T

de

for

Ar

wa

bac

Pla

for

we

ye

as

thefe poor People to leave their little Houses and their Families to go a King making.

Bur when a Number sufficient for his present Purpose had been corrupted by Rewards and Promises, he sent them out in Parties from Hutt in Hutt, threatning Destruction to such as resused in join with them.

But it may be necessary to let you know that these Men, of whom I have been speaking, were not such as were immediately under the Eye of their respective Chiefs, but scattered in little Dwell.

ings about the Skirts of the Mountains.

HERE follows the Copy of a Highlander's Letter, which has been lately handed about this Town as a Kind of Curiofity.

WHEN I first saw it, I suspected it to be supposed fittious, and calculated as a Lure, whereby to into some Highlanders to the Colony from whence it was supposed to be written; but I was afterward assured, by a very credible Person, that he knew it to be genuine.

Endorsed.

LETTER from Donald M<sup>c</sup>. Pherson a young Highland Lad, who was sent to Virginia with Captain Toline, and was born near the House of College where his Father lives.

Portobago in Marilante 2 June 17-Teer Lofen Kynt Fater, plessed be Got for dat, houpin te here de ly frae yu, as I am yer nane Sin, I wad a bine il leart gin I had na latten ye ken tis, be Kapti Rogirs Skep dat geangs te Innernes, per cunnan dinna ket sika anither apertunti dis Towmen agen De Skep dat I kam in was a lang tym o de Scumi cumin oure heir, but plissit pi Got for à ting wi à kepit our Heels unco weel, pat Shonie Magwilligray dat hat ay a Sair Heet. Dere was Saxty o's á kame inte te Quintry hel a lit an lim an nane o's á dyt pait Shonie Magwillivray an an otter Ross Lad dat ham oure wi's, an mai pi dem twa wad a dyit gin tey hed bitten at hame.

es and

refent

utt to

fed to

v that

Were

ve of

well-

etter.

own

1ppo intice

ice i ward

ew i

oung

Colla

Teal

le ly

ne ill

apti

nan

agen

e Se umi

Pr mi fait I kanna komplin for kumin te dif Ouintry, for mestir Nicols, Lort pliss hem, pat mi till a pra Mestir dey ca him Shon Bayne an hi lifes in Marylant in te Rifer Potomak, he nifer gart mi wark ony ting pat fat I lykit mi fel: de meast o à mi Wark is waterin a pra stennt Hors, an pringin wyn an Pread ut o de Seller to mi Mestir's Tebil.

SIN efer I kam til him I nefer wantit a Pottle o petter Ele nor is in à Shon Glass hous, for I ay set toun wi de Pairns te Dennir.

MI Mestir seys til mi, fan I kon speek lyk de fouk hier dat I sanna pe pidden di nating pat gar his Plackimors wurk, for de fyt Fouk dinna ife te wurk pat te first yeer aftir dey kum in te de Quintry.

Tey speek à lyk de Sogers in Inerness.

LOFEN Fater, fan de Sarvants hier he deen wi der Mestirs, dey grou unco rich, an its ne wonter for day mak a hantil o Tombako; an de Sivites an Apels an de Sheries an de Pires grou in de Wuds wantin Tyks apout dem. De Swynes te Tucks an Durkies geangs en de Wuds wantin Mestirs.

DE Tombako grous shust lyk de Dockins en de back o de Lairts yart an de Skeps dey kum fra ilka Place an bys dem an gies a hantel o Silder an Gier for dem.

MI nane Mestir kam til de Quintry a Sarfant an weil I wot hi's nou wort mony a fusan punt. Fait ye mey pelive mi de pirest Plantir hire lifes amost as weil as de Lairt o Collottin. Mai pi fan mi

Tim is ut I wel kom hem an sie yu pat not for de furst nor de neest yeir til I gater somting o mi nane, sor san I ha dun wi mi Mestir, hi maun gi mi a Plantashon te set mi up, its de Quistium hier in dis Quintry; an syn I houp te gar yu trink wyn insteat o Tippeni in Innerness.

I wis I hat kum our hier twa or tri yiers feener nor I dit, fyn I wad ha kum de feener hame, pat Got bi tankt dat I kam fo feen as I dit.

GIN yu koud sen mi owr be ony o yur Innerness skeps, ony ting te mi, an it war as muckle Clays as mak a Quelt it wad, mey pi, gar mi Meistir tink te mare o mi. It's trw I ket Clays eneu se him bat oni ting se yu wad luck weel an Pony an ant plese Got gin I life, I sal pey yu pack agen.

LOFEN Fater, de Man dat vryts dis Letir for mi is van Shams Macheyne, hi lifes shust a Myl se mi, hi hes pin unko hyn te mi sin eser I kam te de Quintrie. Hi wes Porn en Petic an kam our a Sarfant se Klesgou an hes peen hes nane Man twa yeirs, an has Sax Plackimors wurkin til hem alrety makin Tombako ilka Tay. Heil win hem, shortly an à te Geir dat he hes Wun hier an py a Letts kip at hem. Luck dat yu duina forket te vryt til mi ay, san yu ket ony Ocashion.

Got almichte plis yu Fater an a de leve o de hous, for I hana forkoten nane o yu, nor dinna yu forket mi, for plise Got I sal kum hem wi Gier eneuch te di yn à an mi nane Sel Guid.

I weir yu will be veri vokie, fan yu sii yur nane Sins Fesh agen, for I heive leirt a hantle hevens sin I sau yu an I am unco buick leirt.

A tis is fe yur lofen an Opetient Sin,

Tonal Mackaferson.

DIRECTED — For Shames Mackaferson neir te Lairt o Collottin's Hous, neir Innerness en de Nort o Skotlan.

THIS

cern

who

s no

tra

tio

pi

no

th

M fic

yo

his

the

ou

ano

Wil

fir

fin

fig

THIS Letter is a notable Instance of those extravagant Hopes that often attend a new Condition. Yet Donald, notwithstanding all his Happiness, desires his Father to send him some Cloaths, not that he wants, or shall want them; but that they would look bonny, and recommend him to his Master. But I shall not surther anticipate that Difficulty, which I know will not be unpleasing to you.

Ir you should think poor Donald's Sentiments of his Change to be worth your Notice, and, at the same Time, find yourself at a Loss to make out any Part of his Letter, your Friend Sir Alexander, who is very communicative, will be pleased with the Office of your Interpreter.

de

ne,

ia

dis

eat

ner

pat

ress

ays

ftir

fe

an

mi

mi,

e de

IT a twa rety ortly

de a yu Gier

yur herson.

ir te

s en

Гніз

THERE is one Thing I should have told your at first, which is, that where I have marked the single (a) thus (a) it must be pronounced (au) which signifies (all.)

LETTER XI.

NEAR the Conclusion of my last Letter but one, I happened to say a Word or two conterning the Episcoparians of this Country, of whom I do not remember to have known one that s not a professed Jacobite, except such as are in G 5

the Army, or otherwise employed under the Government; and therefore I must suppose all those who have accepted of Commissions, or Places, were in their Hearts of Revolutional Principles, before they entered into Office, or that they changed for them on that Occasion.

You know my true Meaning, but many People in this Country render the Word Revolutions very equivocal Expression; nor, among many, is

b

n

di

in ra

fin

as

the

fing

we

dow

thro

Filt

foul

to n

And.

ofth

Wor

spect

chear

they

by the fome

excep

Is

it free from Ambiguity in the South.

THEIR Ministers here are all Nonjurors, that know, except those of the Chief Baron's Chape in Edinburgh, and the episcopal Church at Aberdeen; but whether there is any qualified episcopal Minister at Glasgow, St. Andrews, &c. I do not know.

THE Non-juring Ministers generally lead to gular Lives, and it behoves them fo to do, for otherwise they would be distanced by their Rivals.

I saw a flagrant Example of the People's Difate fection to the present Government, in the above mentioned Church of Aberdeen, where there is a Organ, the only one I know of, and the Service is chaunted as in our Cathedrals.

Being there one Sunday Morning, with anothe English Gentleman, when the Minister came to that Part of the Litany, where the King is praye for by Name, the People all rose up as one, in Contempt of it, and Men and Women set them selves about some trivial Action, as taking Sous Esc. to shew their Dislike, and signify to each other they were all of one Mind. And when the Responsal should have been pronounced, though the had been loud in all that preceded, to our Amaze ment there was not one single Voice to be hear but our own, so suddenly and intirely were will dropped.

Ar coming out of the Church, we complained to the Minister (who, as I said before, was qualified) of this rude Behaviour of his Congregation, who told us, he was greatly ashamed of it; and had often admonished them, at least, to behave with more Decency.

the

all

10 onal

01

Peo-

ion a

y, is hat l napel

Aber-

copa

not

re

for ls.

Difaf

bove

is an ice i

othe

ne t

raye

ie, I

hem

Snuf

othe

e Re

h the maze

hear re w THE Non-juring Ministers have made a Kind of Linsey-Woolsey Piece of Stuff of their Doctrine, by interweaving the People's civil Rights with Religion, and teaching them, that it is as Unchristian not to believe their Notions of Government, as to disbelieve the Gospel. But I believe the Business, in a great Measure, is to procure and preserve separate Congregations to themselves, in which they find their Account, by inciting State Enthusiasm, as others do Church Fanaticism, and, in Return, their Hearers have the secret Pleasure of transgresfing, under the Umbrage of Duty.

I HAVE often admired at the Zeal of a pretty well-dressed Jacobite, when I have seen her go down one of the narrow steep Wyndes in Edinburgh, through an Accumulation of the worst Kind of Filth, and whip up a blind Stair-case almost as soul, yet with an Air as degagé, as if she was going to meet a favourite Lover in some poetick Bower. And, indeed, the Difference between the Generality of those People and the Presbyterians (particularly the Women) is visible when they come from their respective Instructors; for the former appear with chearful Countenances, and the others look as if they had been just before convicted and sentenced by their gloomy Teachers.

I SHALL now, for a while, confine myself to some Customs in this Town, and shall not wander, except fomething material starts in my Way.

THE Evening before a Wedding, there is a Ceremony called the Feet Washing, when the Bride. Maids attend the future Bride, and wash her Feet.

THEY have a Penny-Wedding; that is, when a Servant-Maid has ferved faithfully, and gained the good Will of her Master and Mistress, they invite their Relations and Friends, and there is a Dinner or Supper on the Day the Servant is married, and Musick and Dancing follow to complete

1

n

gi

in be

W

bu

lo

Pa

go of

he

66

"

66

W

Co

Eng

nea

Ch

liev

Me

Wo

all 1

the Evening.

THE Bride must go about the Room, and kiss every Man in the Company, and, in the End, every Body puts Money into a Dish, according to their Inclination and Ability. By this Means, a Family in good Circumstances, and respected by those they invite, have procured for the new Couple wherewithal to begin the World pretty comfortably for People of their low Condition. But I should have told you, that the whole Expence of the Feast and Fiddlers is paid out of the Contributions. This, and the former, are likewise Customs all over the Lowlands of Scotland.

I NEVER was present at one of their Weddings, nor have I heard of any Thing extraordinary in that Ceremony, only they do not use the Ring in Marriage as in England. But it is a most comical Farce to fee an ordinary Bride conducted to Church by two Men, who take her under the Arms and hurry the poor unwilling Creature along the Streets, as you may have feen a Pick-pocket dragged to a Horse-pond in London. I have somewhere read of a Kind of Force, of old, put upon Virgins in the Article of Marriage, in some Eastern Country, where the Practice was introduced to conquer their Modesty: But I think in this Age and Nation there is little Occasion for any such Violence. And, perhaps, (with Reverence to Antiquity, though it often often reproaches our Times) it was then only used to save Appearances.

THE Moment a Child is born, in these Northern Parts, it is immerged in cold Water, be the Season of the Year never fo rigorous.

de-

et.

n a

the

ins a

ar-

ete

kifs

nd,

to to

, 2

by ou-

ort-

t I

e of

bu-

oms

ngs,

that

lar-

ical

ırch

and

eets,

to a id of

the

itry,

heir

here

And, th it

ften

WHEN I feemed, at first, a little shocked at the Mention of this strange Extreme, the good Women told me, the Midwives would not forego that Practice, if my Wife, though a Stranger, had a Child born in this Country.

Ar the Christening, the Husband holds up the Child before the Pulpit, from whence the Minister gives him a long extemporary Admonition concerning its Education. In most Places, the Infant's being brought to the Church is not to be dispensed with, though it be in never so weak a Condition; but here, as I said before, they are not so scrupulous in that and some other Particulars.

For inviting People to ordinary Buryings in all Parts of the Low Country, as well as here, a Man goes about with a Bell, and when he comes to one of his Stations, suppose the Deceased was a Man, he cries, " All Brethren and Sisters, I let you to " wot, that there is a Brother departed this Life, " at the Pleasure of Almighty God; they called "him, &c. - he lived at, &c." And fo for a Woman, with the necessary Alterations. Corps is carried, not upon Men's Shoulders, as in England, but, under Hand, upon a Bier; and the nearest Relation to the Deceased carries the Head; the next of Kin on his right Hand, &c. and if the Church-yard be any Thing distant, they are relieved by others as Occasion may require. The Men go two and two before the Bier, and the Women, in the same Order follow after it; and all the Way the Bell-man goes tinkling before the Procession, Procession, as is done before the Host in Popish Countries.

Nor long ago a Highland-Man was buried here. There were few in the Procession besides Highlanders in their usual Garb; and all the Way before them, a Piper plaid on his Bagpipe, which was hung with narrow Streamers of black Crape.

WHEN People of some Circumstance are to be buried, the nearest Relation sends printed Letters, signed by himself; and sometimes, but rarely, the Invitation has been general, and made by Beat of Drum.

THE Friends of the Deceased usually meet at the House of Mourning the Day before the Funeral, where they sit a good while, like Quakers at a silent Meeting, in dumb Shew of Sorrow; but, in Time, the Bottle is introduced, and the Ceremony quite reversed.

IT is esteemed very slighting, and scarcely ever to be forgiven, not to attend after Invitation, if you are in Health: The only Means to escape Resentment, is to send a Letter, in Answer, with some reasonable Excuse.

THE Company, which is always numerous, meets in the Street at the Door of the Deceased; and when a proper Number of them are assembled, fome of those among them, who are of highest Rank, or most esteemed, and Strangers, are the first invited to walk into a Room, where there usually are several Pyramids of Plumb Cake, Sweetmeats, and several Dishes, with Pipes and Tobacco; the last is according to an old Custom, for it is very rare to see any Body smoak in Scotland.

THE nearest Relations and Friends of the Person to be interred, attend, and, like Waiters, serve you with Wine for about a Quarter of an Hour, and no sooner have you accepted of one Glass, but another

21 ti

A

fo

0 tu

w

the fur

per

De

fun

nef

the

tha

Ti

Th

to l

another is at your Elbow, and so a Third, &c. There is no Excuse to be made for not Drinking; for then it will be said, you have obliged my Brother, or my Cousin such a one, pray, Sir, what have I done to be refused? When the usual Time is expired, this Detachment goes out, and another succeeds, and when all have had their Tour, they accompany the Corps to the Grave, which they generally do about Noon.

THE Minister, who is always invited, performs no Kind of Funeral Service for those of any Rank whatever, but most commonly is one of the last that leaves the Place of Burial.

bilb

ere.

gh-

be-

ich

ers,

the

of

the

ral,

it a

in ony

you

ent-

me

ous,

ed;

led,

heft

the

ere eet-

To-

for fon

erve

our,

but

her

be

When the Company are about to return, a Part of them are selected to go back to the House, where all Sorrow seems to be immediately banished, and Wine is filled about as fast as it can go round, till there is hardly a sober Person among them. And, by the Way, I have been often told, that some have kept their Friends drinking upon this Occasion, for more Days together than I can venture to mention.

In the Conclusion, some of the Sweetmeats are put into your Hat, or thrust into your Pocket, which enables you to make a great Compliment to the Women of your Acquaintance.

This last Homage they call the Drudgy, but I suppose, they mean the Dirge, that is, a Service performed for a dead Person some Time after his Death; or this may be instead of a Lamentation sung at the Funeral, but I am sure it has no Sadness attending it, except it be for an aching Head the next Morning. The Day following, every one that has Black puts it on, and wears it for some Time afterwards; and if the Deceased was any Thing considerable, though the Mourner's Relation to him was never so remote, it serves to sooth the

wh

bot

per

le

ole

cre

We

000

he

beir

not

et

ST

Peo

B

Mou

o fe

he a

T

o rii

oin

re fi

Vatin

he fi

lway lain

nd u

Is

liver his

the

des d waf

ue i

Vanity of some, by inciting the Question; For whom do you mourn? My Cousin the Laird of such a Place, or my Lord such a one, is the Answer to the Question begged by the sorrowful Dress. I have seen the Doors and Gates blacked over in Token of Mourning.

I MUST confess I never was present at more than one of these Funerals, though afterwards invited to several, and was pretty hard put to it to find out proper Excuses; but I never failed to enquire what had passed at those Assemblies, and found but little Difference among them.

You know I never cared to be fingular when once engaged in Company, and, in this Case, I thought it best, being a Stranger, to comply with their Customs, though I could not but foresee the Inconvenience that was to follow so great an Intimacy with the Bottle.

You will, perhaps, wonder why I have continued so long upon this Subject, none of the most entertaining; but as the better Sort here are almost all of them related to one another in some Degree, either by Consanguinity, Marriage, or Clanship, it is to them, as it were, a Kind of Business, and takes up good Part of their Time. In short, they take a great Pride and Pleasure in doing Honours to their Dead.

The Minister, or Parish, has no Demand for Christening, Marrying, or Burying. This last Expence, particularly, I have ever thought unreasonable to be charged upon the poorer Sort in England. A poor industrious Man, for Example, who has laboured hard for fifty Years together, brought up a numerous Family, and being at last reduced to Necessity by his extraordinary Charge, Age, and long Sickness, shall not be intitled to his Length and Breadth, under the Ground of that Parish where where he had lived; but his poor old Widow must borrow or beg to pay the Duties, or, which to her perhaps is yet worse, be forced to make her humble Suit to an imperious Parish Officer, whose Inolence to his Inferiors (in Fortune) was ever inreasing with the Success he met with in the World. Besides the Disgrace and Contumely the poor Wretch must suffer from her Neighbours, in he Alley, for that remarkable State of Poverty, viz. eing reduced to beg the Ground. And none nore ready than the Poor to reproach, with their Poverty, any whom they have the Pleasure to think et poorer than themselves. This to her may be sreal Distress, as any Dishonour that happens to People of better Condition.

BEFORE I proceed to the Highlands, i. e. the Mountains, I shall conduct you round this Town, ofee if there be any Thing worth your Notice in he adjacent Country.

X

of 1-

S.

in

IR

to

ut

at

le

en I

ith

he

iti-

on-

oft

аге

me

10

Bu-

In

for laft

rea-

Eng-

who

nced

and ngth

here

Toward the North-West, the Highlands begin orise within a Mile of the Town. To some other loints (I speak exclusive of the Coast Way) there re from three, to five or six Miles, of what the latives call a flat Country, by Comparison, with the surrounding Hills; but to you, who have been lways accustomed to the South of England, this lain (as they deem it) would appear very rough and uneven.

Ishall begin with the Ruins of a Fort built by liver Cromwell in the Year 1653, or 1654, which, his Time, commanded the Town, the Mouth the River, and Part of the Country on the Land des of it where there are no Hills.

It lies fomething to the North East of us, and washed by a navigable Part of the Ness, near its ue into the Murray Frith.

THE Figure of the Out-work is a Pentagon of two hundred Yards to a Side, furrounded to Landward with a Fosse, now almost filled up with Rubbish. The Rampart is not unpleasant for a Walk in a Summer's Evening, and, among the Grass, grows Carways that have often regaled my Palate, and of which the Seeds are supposed to have been scatter'd, by Accident, in Time out of Mind.

OLIVER had one thousand two hundred Men in and near this Citadel, under the Command of one Colonel Fitz, who had been a Taylor, as I have been informed by a very ancient Laird, who said he remembered every remarkable Passage which happened at that Time, and, most especially Oliver's Colours, which were so strongly impresse on his Memory, that he thought he then say them spread out by the Wind, with the Won Emmanuel (God with us) upon them, in very large golden Characters.

LETTE

to

cor

the

upo

fhu I mac And the cont near Beh B Mea that it is land, to br Scots Engli this F And-Rub-Walk Grass, alate, have

en in

have faid which

ially

reffe

fav

Won

larg

LETTER XII.

THE Name of Oliver, I am told, continues fill to be used, in some Parts, as a Terror to the Children of the Highlanders; but that is so common a Saying of others, who have rendered themselves formidable, that I shall lay no Stress upon it.

HE invaded the Borders of the Highlands, and that the Natives up within their Mountains.

In several Parts he penetrated far within, and made Fortresses and Settlements among them. And obliged the proudest, and most powerful, of the Chiefs of Clans, even such as had formerly contended with their Kings, to send their Sons and nearest Relations as Hostages for their peaceable Behaviour.

But, doubtless, this Success was owing, in great Measure, to the good Understanding there was, at that Time, between England and France; otherwise it is to be supposed, that the ancient Ally of Scatland, as it is called here, would have endeavoured to break those Measures, by hiring and affishing the Scots to invade our Borders, in order to divert the English Troops from making so great a Progress in this Part of the Island.

NEAR

NEAR the Fort is the Kay, where there are feldom more than two or three Ships, and those of no great Burthen.

ABOUT a Mile Westward from the Town. there rifes out of a perfect Flat, a very regular Hill, whether natural or artificial, I could never find by any Tradition; the Natives call it Toma. beurach. It is almost in the Shape of a Thame's Wherry turned Keel upwards, for which Reason they fometimes call it Noah's Ark.

THE Length of it is about Four hundred Yards. and the Breadth at Bottom about One hundred and fifty. From below, at every Point of View, it feems to end at Top in a narrow Ridge; but, when you are there, you find a Plain large enough to draw up two or three Battalions of Men.

HITHER we sometimes retire in a Summer's Evening, and fitting down on the Heath, we best with our Hands upon the Ground, and raife a most fragrant Smell of wild Thyme, Penyroyal, and other aromatick Herbs, that grow among the Heath: And as there is likewise some Grass among it, the Sheep are fed the first, and when they have eaten it bare, they are fucceeded by Goats, which browse upon the sweet Herbs that are left untouched by the Sheep.

I MENTION this purely because I have often heard you commend the Windfor Mutton, supposing its Delicacy to proceed from those Herbs, and, indeed, the Notion is not uncommon.

Bur this is not the only Reason why I speak of this Hill, it is the weak Credulity with which it is attended that led me to this Detail; for as any Thing, ever so little, extraordinary, may ferve a a Foundation (to fuch as are ignorant, heedles, or interested) for ridiculous Stories and Imaginations; so the Fairies within it are innumerable, and

Witches

h

2

n

A

je

gu

ag the

of W upo Co

mai

be c

ing

ther

Pro

B

thou

on a

A

ate

be fo

vort

Apar

is 3

vas l

one

Witches find it the most convenient Place for their Frolicks and Gambols in the Night-time.

I AM pleased when I restect, that the Notion of Witches is pretty well worn out among People of any tolerable Sense and Education in England; but here it remains even among some that sit judicially; and Witchcrast and Charming (as it is called) make up a considerable Article in the recorded Acts of the General Assembly.

I AM not unawares, that here the famous Tryal, at Hertford, for Witchcraft, may be objected to me.

el-

no

vn,

lar

ver

ma-

ne's

afon

rds.

and

, it

hen

h to

ner's

beat

most

and

the

nong

have

which

iched

often fup-

Herbs,

eak of a it is

s any rve as

edles,

agina-

e, and

Vitches

Ir is true the poor Woman was brought in guilty by an ignorant, obstinate Jury; but it was against the Sentiments of the Judge, who, when the Minister of the Parish declared, upon the Faith of a Clergyman, he believed the Woman to be a Witch, told him, in open Court, that therefore, upon the Faith of a Judge, he took him to be no Conjurer.

Thus you see, by the Example of this Clergyman, that Ignorance of the Nature of Things may be compatible with what is generally called Learning; for I cannot suppose, that, in a Case of Blood, there could be any Regard had to the Interest of a Profession.

But, perhaps, the above Affertion may be hought a little too dogmatical — I appeal to Rea-on and Experience.

AFTER all, the Woman was pardoned by the ate Queen, (if any one may properly be faid to be forgiven a Crime they never committed) and a worthy Gentleman, in that County, gave her an apartment over his Stables, fent her Victuals from its Table, let her attend his Children, and the was looked upon, ever after, by the Family, as an lonest, good-natured old Woman.

Bur

Bur I shall now give you an Instance (in this Country) wherein the Judge was not so clear.

fighted.

In the Beginning of the Year 1727, two poor Highland Women (Mother and Daughter) in the Shire of Sutherland, were accused of Witchcrast, tried and condemned to be burnt, This Proceeding was in a Court held by the Deputy Sherist. The young one made her Escape out of Prison, but the old Woman suffered that cruel Death, in a Pitch-Barrel, in June following, at Dornoch, the Head Borough of that County.

Title of Witchcraft in Nelson's Justice, which I have by me, there are these Words:

"It feems plain that there are Witcher, because "Laws have been made to punish such Offenders, "though few have been convicted of Witchcraft." Then he quotes one single Statute, viz. 1 Jac. C. 12.

May not any one say, with just as much Reson, it seems plain there has been a Phænix, because Poets have often made it serve for a Simile in their Writings; and Painters have given us the Representation.

fentation of such a Bird in their Pictures?

It is faid those Highland Women confessed but, as it is here a Maxim that Wizards and Witches will never acknowledge their Guilt, a long as they can get any Thing to drink; I should not wonder if they owned themselves to be Devils for Ease of so tormenting a Necessity, when their Vitals are ready to crack with Thirst.

I AM almost ashamed to ask feriously how in comes to pass, that in populous Cities, among the most wicked and abandoned Wretches, this Ar should not be discovered, and yet that so many little Villages and obscure Places should be Nur

ferie

n

ffi

Ye

pp om

oui im

nay

he I

ich

ope

ng to

W

thin

y ho w th

ark u

an I

ed th

loug

onge

BUT

includ

ects.

ade a

the

his

ar-

100

the

ift,

ed-

iff.

on,

n a

the

the

h I

aufe

lers,

aft." Fac.

Rea-

cause

their

epre-

ffed

and

t, 6

hould

evils

their

OW I ng the

is Ar

man

Nur

ferie

eries for Witchcraft: But the Thing is not worth peaking of, any further than that it is greatly to be wished, that any such Law should be annulled, which subjects the Lives of human Creatures to the Weakness of an ignorant Magistrate or Jury, for a Crime of which they never had the Power to be suilty. And this might free them from the Miseies and Insults these poor Wretches suffer, when inhappily fallen under the Imputation.

In this County of Sutherland, as I have been fured, several others have undergone the same fate within the Compass of no great Number of

I MUST own it is possible there may be some, ppressed by Poverty, and actuated by its consomitant Envy, who may malign a thriving Neighbour so far as to posson his Cattle, or privately do im other Hurt in his Property, for which they may deserve the Gallows as much as if they did he Mischief by some supernatural Means; but for sich wicked Practices, when discovered, the Law sopen, and they are liable to be punished according to the Quality of the Offence.

WITCHCRAFT, if there were such a Crime, think would be of a Nature never to be proved y honest Witnesses; for who could testify they were identical Person of such a one riding in the ark upon a Broomstick through the Air. A human Body, composed of Flesh and Bones, crammed through a Key-hole, or know an old Woman brough the Disguise of a Cat. These are some the common Topicks of your wise Witch-longers!

But to be more ferious; we have Reason to include, from several authentick Relations of acts, that this supposed Crime has sometimes been ade a political Engine of Power, whereby to destroy such Persons as were to be taken off, which could not otherwise be done with any seeming Appearance of Justice: And who should be fitter instruments to this Purpose, than such, who would be so wicked as for Hire, and Assurance of Indemnity, to own themselves Accomplices with the Party accused?

NOTWITHSTANDING this Subject has led me further, than I at first intended to go, I must add to it a Complaint made to me about two Months fince, by an Englishman who is here in a Government Employment.

As he was observing the Work of some Carpenters, who were beginning the Construction of large Boat, there came an old Woman to get fome Chips, who, by his Description of her, was, in deed, ugly enough. One of the Workmen rate her, and bid her be gone, for he knew she wa a Witch. Upon that this Person took upon him to vindicate the old Woman, and unluckily to drop some Words as if there were none such. Immediately two of them came up to him, and held their Axes near his Head, with a Motion as if the were about to cleave his Scull, telling him he do ferved Death; for that he was himself a Warled or Wizard, which they knew by his taking th Witch's Part. And he observing their Ignorano and Rage, got away from them as fast as he could in a terrible Fright, and with a Refolution to la aside all Curiosity relating to that Boat, though the Men were at Work not far from his Lodgings.

THE greatest Ornament we have in all the adjacent Country, is about a Quarter of a Mile from the Town, but not to be seen from it, by Reaso of the Castle Hill. It is an Island about six hundre Yards long, surrounded by two Branches of the River Nass, well planted with Trees of different

Kind

h

r

h ol he bo

XC

no

l nd

Cir

ich

ou hei

eaf

T

rui

pon ke

e 7

na

on :

arit

vhic

one

Valls

hefe

in a

be able.

renu

e M

a I

kinds, and may not unaptly be compared with he Island in St. James's Park; all, except Fruit Trees, Gravel-walks, and Grafs-plots, for I speak hiefly of its outward Appearance, the Beauty hereof is much encreased by the Nakedness of he furrounding Country, and the Blackness of the ordering Mountains. For in any View herebouts, there is hardly another Tree to be feen, acept about the Houses of two or three Lairds. nd they are but few.

HITHER the Magistrates conduct the Judges. nd their Attendants, when they are upon their Circuit in the Beginning of May; and sometimes ich other Gentlemen, to whom they do the Hoours of the Corporation by presenting them with heir Freedom, if it happens to be in the Salmon eafon.

ch

Ip-

In-

uld

m-

the

me

add

nths

em-

penof a ome

, in-rated

Was

him

ly to

Imd held

they

he de

arloc

ng th orano

could to la

igh th

igs. ne adja

le from

Kind

THE Entertainment is Salmon, taken out of the ruives just by, and immediately boiled and fet on a Bank of Turf, the Seats the same, not unke one of our Country Cock-Pits; and during e Time of Eating, the Heart of the Fish lies upna Plate in View, and keeps in a panting Moon all the while, which to Strangers is a great arity. The Cruives above the Salmon Leap hich is a steep Sloap, composed of large loose ones) are made into many Divisions by loose alls, and have about three or four Feet Water. hele render such a Number of Fish as they conn an agreeable Sight, being therein confined, be ready, at any Time, for the Barrel or the able.

I AM told there was formerly a fine planted Reale renue from the Town to this Island; but one of hundre Magistrates, in his folitary Walk, being shot of the a Highlander, from behind the Trees, upon differe me Clan Quarrel, they were soon after cut down;

a

0 n

In

gu Y

روي

Off Gr

ori

ion

wh f fo

hat,

00 (

iz.

I

T

im (

voul

ther

he A

cula

Bu

eigne

ou th

and, indeed, I think such Kind of Walks, unler very near a House, are not the most suitable to this Country: I do not mean on Account of Robberies, but Revenge.

In feveral Places upon the Heaths, at no great Distance from this Town, and in other Parts of the Country, there are large Moor stones, set up in regular Circles one within another, with a good Space between each Round. In some of these Groups there are only two such Circles, is others three; and some of the Stones in the outermost Ring are nine or ten Feet high above the Surface of the Ground, and in Bulk proportionable.

How long Time they have been in that Situation no Body knows, or for what Purpose the were disposed in that Order; only some pretend by Tradition, they were used as Temples for a crifices in the Time of the Romans; and other have been taught, by that variable Instruction that they were Tribunals for the Tryals of so posed Criminals in a Roman Army.

WHAT Matter of Wonder and Curiofity the Size might be upon Hounslow-Heath I do no know, but here, among these Rocks, by Comparison, they make no Figure at all. Besides, it Soldiers, by the Force of Engines and Strengthave raised Stones as large, or larger, that I more than half buried under Ground, in the Lin marked out for the new projected Roads; and the have likewise set them upright along the Sides those Ways.

HAVING chanced to mention the Stones rail out of the Ground by the Troops, I cannot be bear a little Tattle, concerning two Officers the are employed upon the new Roads, as Director of the Work in different Parts of the Highland

lef

to

ob+

reat

8 0

u

h

e of

s, i

uter-

the

tion

Situ

the

etend

or S

other

านอิเท

f fup

the

Con

es, th

rengt

hat I

e Lin

nd the

Sides

s rail

not fo

ers th

chland

and, if you please, you may take it for a Piece of Highland News, for I am sure your publick Papers often contain Paragraphs altogether as trifling, and not so true.

Upon one of these Stones (surprizingly large to be removed) one of those Gentlemen employed a Soldier, who is a Mason by Trade, to engrave an inscription, of his own making, in Latin, fearing perhaps his Renown might wear out with our Language. The Substance of it is, The Date of the Year, Time of the Reign, Director's Name,

Some little Time after this was done, the other Officer's Party of Men, having raised out of the Ground a Stone, as he thought, yet bigger than the former, he began to envy his Competitor's Foundation for Fame, and applied himself to a third Officer who had done several little Poetical Pieces) to think of some Words for his Stone. But I should tell you, hat, before he did so, it had been remarked, he had not often boasted of the Exploit in the first Person, his.

I raised a larger Stone than &c.

THE Poet Officer told him he would fatisfy im off Hand, and it should be in English, which would be understood by more People than the ther's Latin, and by that Means he would have be Advantage of his Rival, at least in that Parcular.

BUT instead of his real Name, I shall insert a signed one, and, under that only Disguise, give on the proposed Inscription as follows,

Hibern alone
Rais'd up this Stone;
Ah! Hone, Ah! Hone.
H 2

UPON

Upon this, the Hero turned ridiculously grave; and, says he, The Soldiers did the slavish Part only with my Hands, but, in Effect, it was I that did it with their Heads; and therefore I do not like any Burlesque upon my Performance.

ONE Thing, which I take to be a Curiofity in its Kind, had like to have escaped me, viz. a single enclosed Field, near adjoining to the Suburbs of this Town, containing, as near as I can guels, about five or fix Acres, called Fair-field. This to the Owner gives the Title of Laird of Fair-field, and it would be a Neglect or Kind of Affront to call him by his proper Name, but only Fair-field, For those they call Lairds in Scotland do not go by their Sirname, but, as in France, by the Name of their House, Estate, or Part of it. But if the Lairdship be fold, the Title goes along with it to the Purchaser, and nothing can continue the Name of it to the first Possessor but mere Courtefy.

rei

Tr

er

the

Vac

ffic

nd nor lou rn

e p

THERE are few Estates in this Country free from Mortgages and Incumbrances (I wish I could not say the same of England;) but the Reason given me for it, by some Gentlemen of pretty good Estates, seems to be something extraording pary.

THEY do not care to ascribe it to the Poverty of their Tenants, from the inconsiderable Farms they occupy, or other Disadvantages incident to these Parts, but say it has proceeded from the Fortunes given with their Daughters. Now the Portion or Tocker, as they call it, of a Laird's eldest Daughter, is looked upon to be a handsome one, if it amounts to One thousand Merks, which is 55 l. 11 s. 1 d. \frac{1}{3}. Sterling; and Ten thousand Merks, or 555 l. 11 s. 1 d. \frac{1}{3}. is generally esteement no bad Tocker for a Daughter of the lower Rank of Quality.

THE Scots Merk is Thirteen pence and one Third of a Penny of our Money.

HAVING touched upon Mortgages, which in Scotland are called Wadsetts, I shall say a few Words on that Article.

ve;

art

hat

like

y in

ngle

s of ies,

This

field,

it to field.

t go

lame

f the

th it

tinue

mere

free

could

eafon pretty aordi-

Farms
ent to m the laird's adfome
which aoufand teemed

By the Canon Law of Scotland, all Kind of Usury is prohibited; but as the forbidding it is ery incommodious to a Country, on Account of Trade and Husbandry, as well as to particular Persons, and besides, a Law most easily evaded; here was a Method contrived by the People, hereby to fell their Estates, with a conditional light of Redemption. This is called a proper Vadfett, where the Mortgagee takes into his Poffion fo much Land as will fecure the Principal nd Interest of the Money lent, and sometimes ore; for which he is never to give Account, ough there should be a Surplus, but only to rem the Lands to the former Proprietor, when e principal Sum is paid off.

LETTER XIII.

I Shall now return to the neighbouring Country.

Here are but two Houses of any Note within many Miles of us, on this Side the Murray Frith; one is the House of Colloden, which I have mentioned in a former Letter.

THIS is about two Miles off, and is a pretty large Fabrick built with Stone, and divided into many Rooms, among which the Hall is very for cious.

THERE are good Gardens belonging to it, and a noble planted Avenue, of great Length, that leads to the House, and a Plantation of Tree about it.

THIS House (or Castle) was besieged in the Year 1715, by a Body of the Rebels; and the Laird being absent, in Parliament, his Lady baffet all their Attempts, with extraordinary Courag and Presence of Mind.

NEAR adjoining are the Parks, that is, one larg Tract of Ground, furrounded with a low Wall loofe Stones, and divided into feveral Parts, Partitions of the same. The Surface of the Ground is all over Heath, or, as they call it, He ther, without any Trees; but some of it has been

to C C ar ne 217 be in an he

Wa

You

oth

wa

fee

wit

an gro

put

you

me

Rea

beer

befo

tenc

effe

ther

and

man

7

lately fown with the Seed of Firs, which are now grown about a Foot and Half high, but are hardly to be feen for the Heath.

An English Captain, the Afternoon of the Day following his Arrival here from London, defired me to ride out with him, and shew him the Parks of Colloden, without telling me the Reason of his Curiofity. Accordingly we fet out, and when we were pretty near the Place, he asked me, Where are these Parks? for, says he, there is nothing near in View but Heath, and, at a Distance, Rocks and Mountains. I pointed to the Inclofure, and, being a little Way before him, heard him curfing in Soliloquy, which occasioned my making a Halt, and asking if any Thing had displeased him. Then he told me, that, at a Coffee-house in London, he was one Day commending the Park of Studley in Torksbire, and those of several other Gentlemen in other Parts of England, when a Scot's Captain, who was by, cried out, Ah! Sir, but if you were to fee the Parks of Colloden in Scotland!

intry.

ithin

rith:

men-

pretty

inte

fpa-

, and

that

Tree

n th

d th

baffle

ourag

e larg

all o ts, b

of the s bee

latel

This my Companion repeated feveral Times with different Modulations of Voice; and then, in an angry Manner, fwore, If he had known how grolly he had been imposed on, he could not have put up so great an Affront. But I should have told you, that every one of the small Divisions abovementioned is called a separate Park, and that the Reason for making some of the inner Walls has been to prevent the Hares, (with which, as I said before, the Country abounds) from cropping the tender Tops of those young Firs, which, indeed, effectually spoils their regular Growth.

THE other House I spoke of, is not much further distant from the contrary Side of the Town, and belongs to the younger Brother of the Gentleman above-mentioned. He is Lord Advocate, or H 4 AttorneyAttorney-General for Scotland; it is a good old Building, but not so large as the other; and near it there is a most romantick Wood, whereof one Part consists of great Heights and Hollows; and the Brushwood at the Foot of the Trees, with the Springs that issue out of the Sides of the Hills, invite the Woodcocks, which, in the Season, are generally there in great Numbers, and render it the best Spot for Cock-Shooting that ever I knew.

NEITHER of these Houses are to be seen from any Part near the Town.

THE Gentleman, of whose House I have last been speaking, were it not for a valetudinary State of Health, and the Avocations of his Office, would be as highly pleased to see his Friends about him at Table, and over a Bottle, as his hospitable Brother.

In the Spots of arable Land, near the Town, the People fometimes plough with eight small Beasts, Part Oxen, and Part Cows. They do not drive them with a Goad, as in England, but beat them with a long Stick, making a hideous Irish Noise in calling to them, as they move along.

THE Poverty of the Field-Labourers hereabouts is deplorable. I was one Day riding out for Air and Exercise; and, in my Way, I saw a Woman cutting green Barley in a little Plot before her Hutt.

This induced me to turn aside, and ask her what Use she intended it for; and she told me it was to make Bread for her Family.

THE Grain was so green and soft, that I easily pressed some of it between my Fingers, so that when she had prepared it, certainly it must have been more like a Poultice, than what she called it, Bread. There was a Gentleman with me, who was my Interpreter, and though he told me what

the

he

pp

Kine

aid ell

I

end

heir

Testic

nfer

F

ligh

nou

Vhe Jur

etw

out

r fr

rth

nar

me at t e tr

ock eat

terv

on iced

IN

any ats i

e C

her!

old the Woman faid, yet he did not feem greatly to ar it one

- Air

man her

her eafily

have

who

the

pprove of my Curiosity.

THEIR Harvest-Labourers are often paid in the Kind, viz. Oats or Barley; and the Person thus the raid, goes afterwards about with the Sheaves, to-in ell them to fuch as will purchase them.

If they are paid in Money, their Wages is Twoence Half-penny, or Three-pence, a Day, and ew heir Dinner, which, I suppose, is Oatmeal.

THERE is no other Sort of Grain hereabouts, esides Oats, Barley, and Beer, which last is an ensemble of the Sort of Grain hereabouts, esides Oats, Barley, and Beer, which last is an elast of Field of Wheat would be as great a Rarity as a could elightingale in any Part of Scotland, or a Catan at nountain in Middlesex. And yet I have seen good else Wheat in some of the lowland Part of the Shire of Wheat in some of the lowland Part of the Shire of Aurray, which is, indeed, but a narrow Space own, etween the Sea and the Mountains not very far which outh of us. It is true, a certain Gentleman, not a from the Coast in the County of Ross, which is the refer North than we are, by Favour of an extraor-list in the North than we are, by Favour of an extraor-list in the Stack stood in his Court-yard till the Rats of Air and almost devoured it. This and a good Melon ad almost devoured it. This, and a good Melon. treated me with, which was raifed under a ock, facing the South, and strongly reflecting the. eat of the Sun, so equally flattered him, that he terwards made Use of me as a Witness of both me it toon feveral Occasions. But Melons may be proiced in Lapland.

In the Lowlands of Scotland I have feen, in that any Places, very fertile Land, good Wheat, and ats in particular, much better than ever I faw of ed it e Growth of England. But perhaps you will agine, that, as Oatmeal ferves for Bread, and, in what ther Shapes, for most Part of the rest of the ordinary

H 5

People's Diet, they are more careful in the Choice of the Seed than our Farmers are, who know their Oats are chiefly used as Provender for Cattle. But I think, in fome Parts of the Country, the Soil is peculiarly adapted to that Kind of Grain.

In some remote Parts of England, I have seen Bread for the Field-Labourers, and other poor People, fo black, fo heavy, and harsh, that the Bonnack, as they call it, (a thin Oatmeal Cake baked on a Plate over the Fire) may, by Comparison,

2

2

D

th

to

th

th

Sc

T

the

the tre

use

hap

the

the

like

To

Gar

We

be called a Pye-cruft.

By the small Proportion the arable Lands hereabouts bear to the rocky Grounds and barren Heaths, there is hardly a Product of Grain fuffcient to fupply the Inhabitants, let the Year be ever fo favourable; and therefore any ill Accident that happens to their Growth, or Harvest, produces melancholy Effect. I have known, in fuch a Circumstance, the Town in a Consternation for Wan of Oatmeal, when Shipping has been retarded, and none to be procured in these Parts, as we say, for Love or Money.

THERE are but few in this Town that eat When Bread, befides the English, and those that belong to them, and fome of the principal Inhabitants, bu not their Servants. Among the English I think may include good Part of the private Soldiers that are working Men.

ALL the handicraft Tradefmen have improve their Skill, in their feveral Occupations, by Ex ample of the Workmen among the Troops, wh are often employed by the Inhabitants as Journey men; and, in particular, the Bakers, whose Breat I think, is not inferior to that of London, except when their Flour is grown, or mufty, when in ported. This fometimes happens, but they are to national to hold any Correspondence but with the Countrymet Countrymen, who, I think, have not the same Regard for them, but study too carefully their own extraordinary Profit. I am speaking of such as have their Goods from England.

ice

eir

But

is een

100

the

ked

fon,

ere-

rren

uffi-

ever

that es a

Cir-

Vant

and

for heat

ng to

, bu

tha

rove

Ex

wh

rney

Bread

xcep

n im

re to the ymer

This brings to my Remembrance an Observation I met with in London a good many Years ago, and that is, what an Advantage the Scots, the Quakers, and French Refugees, have over the Generality of Trading People in England; since they all confine the Profit of their Dealings, so far as ever they can, within their respective Circles; and moreover have an equal Chance for Trading Profit with all others, who make no such partial Distinction; and therefore it was no Wonder they throve accordingly.

I HAPPENED lately, upon a certain Occasion, to mention this to an old Officer in the Army, who thereupon told me he had observed, through all the Quarters in England, that if there were any Scots Tradesmen or Shop-keepers in a Country Town, the New-comers of that Nation soon found them out, and would deal with no others, so far as they could be ferved or fupplied by them.

This, I think, is carrying it too far, and teaching an ill Lesson against themselves. And we, on the other Hand, are accused of the contrary Extreme, which is an un-national Neglect (if I may use such an Expression) of one another, when we happen to meet in foreign Countries.

But to return. When the Flour is musty, they mingle Seeds with the Dough, to overcome the disagreeable Smell and Taste. This I have likewise met with in Edinburgh, and other great Towns of the Low-Country.

ABOUT the Time of one great Scarcity here, the Garrison of Fort William, opposite to us on the West Coast, was very low in Oatmeal, and the little

little Hovel Town of Maryburgh, near adjoining to it, was almost destitute.

Some Affairs, at that Time, called me to the Fort; and being at the Governor's House, one of the Townswomen came to his Lady, and befought her to use her Interest, that she might be spared out of the Stores, for her Money, or to repay it in Kind, only one Peck of Oatmeal to keep her Children from starving; for that there was none to be fold in the Town, or other Food to be had The Lady, who is one of the best, and most agreeable, of Women, told her, she feared her Husband could not be prevailed on to part with any at that Time. This fhe faid, as knowing that Kind of Provision was almost exhausted, and a great Number of Mouths to be fed. That there was but a very precarious Dependance upon the Winds for a Supply, and that other Sea Accidents might happen; but, to shew her good Will, she gave her a The poor Woman holding up the Money, first looked at that, in a musing Manner, then at the Lady, and burfting out into Tears, cried-Madam, what must I do with this? My Children cannot eat it! And laid the Shilling down upon the Table in the greatest Sorrow and Despair. It would be too trite to remark upon the Uselessness of Money, when it cannot be bartered for fomething absolutely necesfary to Life. But I do affure you I was hardly ever more affected with Diffress, than upon this Occafion, for I never faw fuch an Example of it before.

I MUST not leave you in Suspence: The Governor, commisserating the poor Woman's Circumstance, spared her that small Quantity, and then the Passion of Joy seemed more unruly in the poor Creature's Breast, than all her Grief and Fear had been before.

SOME

lil

of

F

bu

ca

tha

yo

wh

yet

wei

but Kir

the

orig

Can

grea to R

I.

and atio

urro

lifta

mpa

aftly

Mou

Occa

elati

Cow

nto a

wa

Some few Days afterwards, a Ship that had lain Wind-bound, in the Orkneys, arrived; and, upon my Return hither, I found there had been a Supply likewise, by Sea, from the Low-Country.

I SHALL make no Apology for going a little out of my Way, to give you a short Account of the Fortress Fort William, and the Town of Maryburgh that belongs to it; because, upon a like Occasion, you gave me a Hint in one of your Letters, that such sudden Starts of Variety were agreeable to

you.

ng

he

of

ht

ut

in

er

to

ad nd

ed

ith

nat

eat

out

for

ap-

a

10-

nen |-

an-

ble

too

hen

cef-

19ver

ccait

Go-

um-

hen

1000 had

OME

THE Fort is situate in Lochaber, a Country, which, though bordering upon the Western Ocean, yet is within the Shire of Inverness. Oliver Cromwell made there a Settlement, as I have said before, but the present Citadel was built in the Reign of King William and Queen Mary, and called after the Name of the King. It was, in great Measure, originally design'd as a Check upon the Chief of the Camerons, a Clan, which, in those Days, was greatly addicted to plunder, and strongly inclined to Rebellion.

It stands in a most barren, rocky Country, and is washed, on one of the Faces of the Fortistation, by a navigable Arm of the Sea. It is almost burrounded on the Land Sides with Rivers not far listant from it, which, though but small, are often mpassable from their Depth and Rapidity. And, affly, it is near the Foot of an exceeding high sountain, called Benevis, of which I may have occasion to say something in some suture Letter elating particularly to the High Country. The sown was erected into a Barony in Favour of the sovernor of the Fort, for the Time being, and to a Borough bearing the Name of Queen Mary. I was originally designed as a Sutlery to the Garri-fon in fo barren a Country, where little can be had for the Support of the Troops.

THE Houses were neither to be built with Stone or Brick, and are to this Day composed of Timber, Boards, and Turf. This was ordained to the End they might the more suddenly be burnt, or other wise destroyed, by Order of the Governor, to prevent any Lodgment of an Enemy that might annoy the Fort, in Case of Rebellion or Invasion.

In your last Letter you defire to know, of me, what is the Qualification of Fortune required of the Elector and Elected to a Seat in Parliament, for

I

n

la

fu

po

ne

fhe

tio

of

ver

me

Fov

is n deep

whi

But

whil

near being

Scen

our think

canno

Coun

A

a County or Borough in Scotland.

This induces me to believe the Baronet is either gone into Bedfordsbire, or come to Edin burgh.

What you now require of me is one, amony many, of those Articles I have left out of my Account, concluding you might have met with it is some Treatise of the Constitution of Scotland; so I intended, from the Beginning, to give you not thing but what I supposed was no where else to be found. And now I shall endeavour to satisfy you Curiosity, in that Point, according to the best la formation I have obtained.

ONE and the same Qualification is required of Voter, and a Candidate for a County, which four hundred Pounds Scots, or thirty-three Pound six Shillings and Eight-pence Sterling per Annua according to the old Rent, or as they stand rate on the King's Books. These are called Baron and none others vote for the Shires, except som few in the County of Sutberland, where several the old Voters, refusing to pay their Quota of 13 s. 4 d. Scots, or 11 s. 1 d. \frac{1}{3}. Sterling per Diet for the Maintenance of their Representative Time of the Session, others were willing to lad

one

er,

and

er-

ore-

noy

mt,

d of

for

is ei-

Edin-

mong

y Ac-

it is

; for u no

to b y you

ft In

ed of nich

ound

nnun

d rate

Baron

t for veral

a of 6

Die

tive

g to

tax

taxed in their Stead, provided they might have the Privilege of voting, which they obtained thereby to the Exclusion of the former.

THE Magistrates and Town Council elect Members to represent the Boroughs, or Corporation Towns, and there is neither Land or Money Qualification required either of the Candidate or Electors.

THIS Letter brings you the Conclusion of my Chat in Relation to this Town, and the Country near it, having at present exhausted my Memory, as well as my written Remarks on that Head. In my next, I shall begin my Account of the Highlands, which, I hope, will be something more grateful to your Curiosity, than I think the former could possibly be.

But if, in my Mountain Progress, any Thing new and worth your Notice relating to these Parts. should happen either by Occurrence or Recollection, you may expect a separate Letter, by Way of Supplement. But what am I faying? This very Moment a Thought has obtruded, which tells me, that when I was speaking of our Hunting and Fowling, I did not remember to acquaint you, it is no uncommon Thing, when the Mountains are deep in Snow, for us to fee Hares almost as white, which descend into these Plains for Sustenance. But although we have hunted feveral of them for a while, yet always without Success, for they keep near the Feet of the Hills, and immediately, upon being started, make to the Heights, where the Scent is loft, and they baffle all Pursuit.

As white Rabbits are common in England, and our Ideas arise from what we know, you may think, perhaps, we have been deceived, but that cannot be, for there is not a Rabbit in all the Country; and besides, if there were any, we have been too near those Hares, at starting, to be mistaken in that Particular. But this is not the only Thing of the Kind; Snow fends down from the Mountains large Flights of small Birds, about the Size of Larks or fomething bigger, and very White, which they are not in Summer any more than the Mountain Hare. These have here no other Name than Snow-Birds.

been

Ir should seem as if Nature changed the Coats of these Creatures, that they might not be too easy a Prey to the Foxes, Wild-Cats, Eagles, and Hawks, as they would be from distant Views, in Time of Snow, if they retained in Winter their natural Colour. But, in general, Nature has been provident, in rendering difficult the finding of Animals, pleasing to Mankind for Food, Diversion, and Exercise, as you may have observed in England; the Hare, the Partridge, Woodcock, Feldifare, &c. are all by their Cloathing, in good Meafure, fuited to their respective Haunts, and Places of Concealment: And some of them, one might almost think were sensible of the Advantage, when we fee them lie without Motion 'till they are almost trod upon, as if knowing, that Action would catch the Eye; and being motionless, they should continue concealed by their refembling Colour.

I SHALL never entertain the least Doubt of your fincere Intentions in every thing, but fince I received your last Letter, which relates to this Prattle, I cannot but be apprehensive your favourable Opinion of it proceeds less from your Satisfaction, than a friendly Partiality to - Gc.

I

far

Hig

elfe

my

plac dete

S

for 1

Acc

vious

s m torio

Y

befor

00 1

viz.

T near etw ron nore

LETTER XIV.

IN my last Letter relating to this northern Part of the Low Country, I promised (notwith-standing I should be engaged on the Subject of the Highlands) to give you an Account of any thing else that should fall out by the Way, or recur to my Memory: But whether this Letter is to be placed to the High or Low Country, I leave you to determine, and I think it is not very material.

Some time ago a Highlander was executed here for Murder, and I am now about to give you some Account of his Education, Character, and Behaviour; and, I flatter myself, I shall do it at least as much to your Satisfaction, as the Reverend His-oriographer of Newgate.

ly ne ne e, ne

ats afy

nd in eir en

ni-

n,

ng-

diea-

ces

ght

nen

al-

uld

uld

our

re-

rat-

able

tion,

R

You know I have rallied you feveral Times before now, upon your bestowing, as I thought, on much Attention upon that Kind of Narrative, viz. The Session Papers, and last Dying Speeches.

This Man was by Trade a Smith, and dwelt near an English Foundery in Glengary, which lies between this Town, and Fort William; of which from Work, I shall have some Occasion to speak nore particularly before I conclude this Letter.

THE

THE Director of that Work had hired a Smith from England, and, as it is faid, that Kings and Lovers can brook no Partners, so neither could the Highlander suffer the Rivalship of one of his own Trade, and therefore his Competitor was, by him, destined to die.

ONE Night he came armed to the Door of the Englishman's Hut with Intent to kill him, but the Man, being for some Reason or other, apprehensive of Danger, had fastened the Door of his Hovel more firmly than usual; and while the Highlander was employed to force it open, he broke a Way through the back Wall of his House, and made his Escape, but, being pursued, he cry'd out for Assistance.

This brought a Lowland Scot's Workman to endeavour to fave him, and his generous Intention cost him his Life.

Upon this, feveral others took the Alarm and came up with the Murderer, whom they tried to fecure, but he wounded fome of them, and received feveral Wounds himself, however he made his Escape for that Time. Three Days afterward he was hunted out, and found among the Heath (which was then very high) where he had lain all that Time with his Wounds rankling, and without any Sustenance, not being able to get away, because continual Search was made all round about both Night and Day, and for the most Part within his Hearing; for it is more difficult to find a Highlander among the Heather, except newly tracked than a Hare in her Form.

He was brought to this Town, and committed to the Talbooth, where Centinels were posted to prevent his second Escape, which, otherwise, in a Probability, would have been essected.

Som

de

Si

ho

he

his

to

the

ing

the

in aní

tolo

tru

hav

Hin

was

his

whi

a Si

Tob

tain

V

by a

his (

Hon

one

that is co

himf

Effee

him

nith Lo-

the

own im,

the

the hen-

Iovel

nder

in to ward

ause

both

in hi

High

acked

Some Time afterwards the Judges, in their Circuit, arrived here, and he was try'd and condemn'd.

THEN the Ministers of the Town went to the Gaol to give him their Ghostly Advice, and endeavoured to bring him to a Confession of his other Sins, without which they told him he could not hope for, Redemption: For besides this Murder, he was strongly suspected to have made away with his former Wife, with whose Sister he was known to have had too great a Familiarity. But when Way the Ministers had said all that is customary concerning the Merit of Confession, he abruptly asked them, if either, or all, of them could pardon him, in Case he made a Confession; and when they had answered, No; not absolutely: He said, you have told me, God can forgive me: They said it was true; then, faid he, as you cannot pardon me, I have nothing to do with you, but will confess to Him that can.

A LITTLE while after, a Smith of this Town was fent to take Measure of him, in order to make Heath while the Man was doing it, the Highlander, with a Sneer, faid; Friend, you are now about to do a thou lob for a better Workman the lob for a better Workman than yourfelf: I am certain I could fit you better than you can me.

WHEN the Day for his Execution came (which, by a late Law, could not be under Forty Days after his Condemnation) and I had refolved to flay at Home, though perhaps I should have been the only one in the Town that did so; I say having taken that Resolution, a certain Lieutenant Colonel, who is come into these Parts to visit his Friends, and is himself a Highlander, for whom I have the greatest Esteem; he came to me, and would have me bear Soul him Company, declaring, at the same Time, that

is

HOW

whi

OU

gett

by I

um

11

Fac

e c

e l

rife

Lade

Body

han

IT

Chir

ung

Infk

·H han,

hie

e F

om

deo

at e mn

an,

thi

as n

To

ade

d ru

e o

although he had a great Desire to see how the Criminal would behave, yet he would weave all that, unless I would go with him, and therefore rather than disoblige my Friend, I consented, but I assure you with Reluctancy.

THE Criminal was a little Fellow, but a fearless Desperado, and having annexed himself to the Clan of the Camerons, the Magistrates were apprehensive that some of the Tribe might attempt his Rescue; and therefore they made Application to the Commanding Officer for a whole Company of Men to guard him to the Place of Execution, with greater Security.

ACCORDINGLY they marched him in the Centre, with two of the Ministers, one on each Side, talking to him by Turns all the Way for a Mile together. But I, not being accustomed to this Sort of Sights, could not forbear to reflect a little upon the Circumstance of a Man's walking so far on Foot to his own Execution.

THE Gibbet was not only erected upon the Summit of a Hill, but was itself fo high, that it put me in Mind of Haman's Gallows.

Being arrived at the Place, and the Ministers having done praying by him, the Executioner, a poor helpless Creature, of at least eighty Years of Age, ascended the Ladder. Then one of the Magistrates ordered the Malesactor to go up after him; upon which the Fellow turning himself hastily about, says he, "I did not think the Magistrates of Inver"ness had been such Fools, as to bid a Man go up "a Ladder, with his Hands tied behind him."
And, indeed, I thought the great Burgher looked very silly, when he ordered the Fellow's Hands to be set at Liberty.

WHEN the Knot was fixed, the old Hangman, (being above the Criminal) began to feel about with his Feet, to find some Footing whereby to come fown beside the other, in order to turn him off, which I think could hardly have been done by a roung Fellow the most nimble and alert, without getting under the Ladder, and coming down chiesly y his Hands.

ri-

at,

her

ure

21-

the

re-

his

to

y of

vith

enide,

Aile

this

ittle

far

the

at it

fters

100g

Age,

rates

noqu

bout,

nver-

co. up

im."

oked

ds to

man,

with

Thus the Highlander feeling the Executioner, imbling about him, in a little Time, feem'd to lofe Ill Patience, and turning himfelf about, with his face from the Ladder, and his Cap over his Eyes, to cried out upon the Trinity, which, I dare fay, to had never heard of before he was committed Prisoner for this Fact; and then jumped off the Ladder. And though his Hands were free, there id not appear in them, or any other Part of his Body, the least Motion or Convulsion, any more han if he had been a Statue.

It is true, I could not compare this with other hings of the fame Kind, but I thought it a very ungling Execution, yet liked the Cause of their Inskilfulness.

His Mother, who, it feems, is a very vile Wonan, and had bred him up in Encouragement to hieving and other Crimes, was present, lying on the Heath at some little Distance, when he leaped om the Ladder, and at that Instant set up such an deous Shriek, followed by a screaming Irish Howl, at every Body seemed greatly surprized at the unmmon Noise. And those who knew the Woan, loaded her with Curses for being the Cause this shameful End of her Son, who, they said, as naturally a Man of good Sense.

To conclude this Subject; the Smith who had ade the Irons (I suppose frighted at the Execution) drun away, leaving his Tools behind him; and e of the Magistrates was forced to rivet them,

there

there being none other that would undertake for shameful a Work for any Reward whatever.

BUT I had forgot to acquaint you, that my Friend the Colonel, as we stood together all the while, favoured me with the Interpretation of that which passed, and most particularly what was said as by the Criminal, who could not speak one Word of English.

You have now had a View of two tragick Scenes, viz. one at Glengary, and the other (being the Catastrophe) near Inverness; at this Time a new Subject calls upon me to withdraw the latter Scene and restore the former which represents Glengary.

Some few Years ago a Company of Liverton Merchants contracted with the Chieftain of this Tribe, at a great Advantage to him, for the Uk of his Woods, and other Conveniencies for the Smelting of Iron, and foon after they put the Project in Execution, by building of Furnaces fending Ore from Lancasbire, &c.

By the Way, I should tell you that those Work were fet up in this Country merely for the Sakeo the Woods, because Iron cannot be made from the Ore with Sea or Pit Coal, to be malleable, and fi for ordinary Uses.

THE Dwelling-House of this Chieftain had bee burnt by the Troops in the Year 1715, but the Walls, which were of Stone, remained. An therefore the Director of the above-mentions Works, thought it convenient to fit it up with no Timber, for the Use of himself, or his Successon during the Term of the Leafe.

This being effectually done, a certain Number hab of Gentlemen of the Tribe came to him one Even one ing, on a feeming friendly Visit, whom he treat heir in a generous Manner, by giving them his better wines and Provisions Wines and Provisions. Among other Thing eader

(thoug

on

101 ı

out.

hoi

hof

ell

mo

he i

hou

ron

Fhis

he !

is A

IT

nin

nd i

is 1

y an

No

y Co

e wo

et a

ney

though a Quaker by his religious Principles, yet is ie a Man of polite Behaviour) he faid to them my fomething to this Purpose (for he told me himself the how he had been used) "Gentlemen, you have given me a great deal of Pleasure in this Visit, and when you all, or any of you, will take the Trouble to repeat it, let it be when it will, you hall be welcome to any Thing that is in my

faid

thoug

the Upon those two last Words, one of them cried Upon those two last Words, one of them cried new out, — G—d d—n you, Sir, — your House! I tene hought it had been Glengary's House? And, upon hose Watch-words they knocked out the Candles, with mong them; but he being strong and active, and he Darkness putting them in Confusion, less they hould wound one another, he made a Shift to slip their from them in the Bustle, and to gain another Room. This he immediately barricaded, and cried out at he Window to his Workmen, that were not far strong is Assistance, those Gentlemen made off.

It only now remains that I make some little and shimadversion upon this rancorous, treacherous, and inhospitable Insult, which, but for an Accident, it is much more than probable, would have gone at the Notwithstanding this House was repaired attook y Consent of the Chief, and, in Course of Time, y Consent of the Chief, and, in Course of Time, the net e would have the Benefit of so great an Expence; et an English Trader dwelling in the Castle, as hey call it, when, at the same Time, the Laird imbe habited a miserable Hut of Turf, as he did, and level oes to this Day: This, I say, was intolerable to treat heir Pride; and as it was apparently their Design his bet first to raise a Querelle d'Altemand, (a wrong-Thing eaded Quarrel) whatever other Words he had thouse used, they would have found some among them that they might wrest to their inhuman Purpose But those Words (my House) unluckily ferved, in an eminent Degree, to provoke their Rage, as a Lunatick, who is reasonable by Intervals, returns to his Ravings when any one touches upon the Cause of his Madness. However, some Good arose from this Evil, for, upon Complaint made, the Chieftain was threatened with a great Number of Troops to be quartered upon him, and, by that Means, the Liverpool Company obtained fome new advantageous Conditions to be added to their original Contract, which have made some Amends for the bad Usage of their Manager and Partner, And, fince that Time, he has met with no ill Treatment from any of the Tribe, except some little Pilferings, which might have happened any where elfe.

I AM next to give you a Conversation Piece, which, with its Incidents, I foresee will be pretty spacious; but I shall make no Apology for it, because I know your leifure Hours to be as many as my own.

Micd.

I HAVE often heard it urged, as an undeniable Argument for the Truth of incredible Stories, that the Number and reputed Probity of the Witnesse to the Truth of a Fact is, or ought to be, fufficient to convince the most Incredulous. And I have known the Unbeliever to be treated by the greated Part of a Company as an Infidel, or, at best, as a conceited Sceptick; and that only, because he could not, without an hypocritical Complaifance, own his Affent to the Truth of Relations the most repugnant to Reason, and the well-known Laws you and Operations of Nature.

THE being accused of unreasonable Unbelied was, some Time go, my own Circumstance; and lice; perhaps

pe tia

by

no

Pe

wi

no

of

the

twe

his

(w) in I

fay

the

this

wife

non

for

they I ve

reci

in t fore

Ir

ter :

And

al Wite

the 1

faid

A

erni

perhaps I have fuffered in my Character, as a Chriftian, (though Christianity has nothing to do with it) by disputing the Truth of a Tale, which I thought no Body, above the ordinary Run of unthinking People, could have believed, if taking upon Trust, without Examination, may be called Believing.

UPON making my first Visit to a certain Lord, not many Miles from this Town, I found there one of our Ministers of the Gospel; for so they call themselves, very probably, for a Distinction between them and Ministers of State.

em

ofe.

in

5 2

Ths the

ood ade,

ber

by

ome

heir

ends

ner.

ill

ome

any

Piece,

retty

neffer

have eatest

25 2

rhaps

THIS Gentleman, being in a declining Way in his Constitution, had been invited by our Lord, (who, I make no Doubt, has some particular View in making his Court to the Presbyterian Clergy) I fay this Invitation to him was to pass some Time in the Hills for the Benefit of the Mountain Air. But this was not a Compliment to him alone, but likewife to the whole Town; for, I do affure you, none could be more esteemed than this Minister, for his affable Temper, exemplary Life, and what they call found Doctrine. And, for my own Part, I verily think, from some of what I am about to take the cite, that he was a true Believer, for I do not that in the least suspect him of Falshood, it being so the foreign to his known Character. oreign to his known Character. icient

In the Evening, our noble Hoft, with the Minifer and myself, sat down to a Bottle of Champain. And after the Conversation had turned upon seveal Subjects (I do not remember how, but) e he Witchcraft was brought upon the Carpet. By fance, the Way, I did intend, after what I have formerly a most faid upon that frivolous Subject, never to trouble Laws you with it again. But to my present Purpose.

AFTER the Minister had faid a good deal conbelief terning the Wickedness of such a diabolical Prac-; and ice as Sorcery, and that I, in my Turn, had declared clared my Opinion of it, which you knew many Years ago, he undertook to convince me of the Reality of it by an Example, which is as follows:

by

th

up Pl

of

tw

be

the

her

V

Argu

A CERTAIN Highland Laird had found himself, at feveral Times, deprived of some Part of his Wine; and having as often examined his Servants about it, and none of them confessing, but all denying it with Affeverations, he was induced to conclude they were Innocent.

THE next Thing to consider was, how this could happen? " Rats there were none to father the Those you know, according to your " philosophical next Door Neighbour, might have drawn out the Corks with their Teeth, and ness "then put in their Tails, which, being long and Bed " fpungeous, would imbibe a good Quantity of I Liquor. This they might suck out again, and of i so on, till they had emptied as many Bottles a with fpungeous, would imbibe a good Quantity of "were fufficient for their Numbers, and the had "Strength of their Heads." But to be more ferious: I say there was no Suspicion of Rats, and toul it was concluded it could be done by none but had Witches.

HERE the new Inquisition was set on Foot, and who they were was the Question: But how should furdithat be discovered? To go the shortest Way to not work, the Laird made Choice of one Night, and a value an Hour when he thought it might be watering with Time with the Hags, and went to his Cellar with ate out a Light, the better to furprize them. Then with his naked Broad-Sword in his Hand, he suffer with denly opened the Door, and shut it after him, and were fell to cutting and slashing all round about him still at last, by an Opposition to the Edge of his Sword, he concluded he had at least wounded on ination of them. But I should have told you, that although his last the Place was very dark, yet he made no Doubt ord, ny,

the

s: elf,

his ints

de-

Minister

by the Glare and Flashes of their Eyes, that they were Cats; but upon the Appearance of a Candle, they were all vanished, and only some Blood left upon the Floor. I cannot forbear to hint, in this Place, at Don Quixot's Battle with the Borachios of Wine.

THERE was an old Woman, that lived about de THERE was an old Woman, that lived about two Miles from the Laird's Habitation, reputed to be a Witch: Her he greatly suspected to be one of

be a Witch: Her he greatly suspected to be one of the Confederacy, and immediately he hasted away to her Hut, and, entering, he found her lying upon your her Bed, and bleeding excessively.

This alone was some Confirmation of the Justand hes of his Suspicion, but casting his Eye under the Bed, there lay her Leg in its natural Form!

I MUST confess I was amazed at the Conclusion and of this Narration; but ten Times more, when, with the most serious Air, he assured me, that he had seen a Certificate of the Truth of it, signed by the second multiple of that Part of the Country, and sould procure me a Sight of it, in a few Days, if I had the Curiosity to see it.

When he had finished his Story, I used all the Arguments I was Master of, to shew him the Ab-and Arguments I was Master of, to shew him the Abhould write to suppose a Woman could be transformed ay to the Shape and diminutive Substance of a Cat; o vanish like a Flash of Fire, carry her Leg Home stering with her, &c. And I told him, that if a Certifiwith ate of the Truth of it had been signed by every them dember of the General Assembly, it would be im-Then demoer of the General Appendix, it would be interested to offible for me (however strong my Inclination in, and vere to believe) to bring my Mind to affent to it. It him had, at last, I told him, that if it could be supposed to be true, it might be ranked in one's Imaged on ination among the most eminent Miracles. Upon though his last Word (like my House at Glengary) my good Doubt Lord, who had been silent all this while, said to the Minister - Sir, you must not mind Mr. -, for he is an Atheist.

I SHALL not remark upon the Politeness, good Sense, and Hospitality of this Reflection; but this Imputation, although perhaps it might have passed with me for a Jest, or unheeded, before another, induced me, by my present Situation, to justify myself to the Kirk; and therefore it put me upon telling him, I was forry his Lordship knew me no better, for that I thought there was nothing in the World, that is speculative, would admit of the thousandth Part of the Reasons for its Certainty, as would the Being of a Divine Providence: And that the vifible Evidences were the stupendous Contrivance and Order of the Universe, the Fitness of all the Parts of every individual Creature, for their respective Occasions, Uses, and Necessities, & And concluded, that none but an Idiot could imagine that fenfeless Atoms could jumble themselves into this wonderful Order and Oeconomy. To this, and a good deal more to the same Purpose, our Host said nothing, perhaps he was conscious he had given his own Character for mine.

fo

it D

tic

di

mi

Be

ter

ill i

Ego

o v ice

S

Mol

Fact

d, ike

ind

ny

pon ny F

thi

hem

Meafi

Heter

had reat

THEN I turned to the Minister, and told him, that, for my own Part, I could not think there was any Thing irreligious in denying the supernatural Power of Witchcraft, because I had early in my Youth, met with such Arguments as then convinced me, that the Woman of Endor was only an Impostor, like our Astrologers and Fortune-tellers, and not a Witch in the present Acceptation of the Word. And, if my Memory did not deceive me, the principal Reasons were, that to support herself in her dishonest Profession, she must have been a Woman of Intelligence and Intrigue, and therefore knew what passed in the World, and could not be ignorant of Saul's unhappy and abandoned

for good

this

affed

her.

ftify

pon

e no

the the

, as

that ntri-

of all their E.

ima-

elves To

pofe,

is he

him,

here

erna-

ly in

con-

y an llers,

f the

ceive

port

oned

doned State at that Time. Nor could she be unacquainted with the Person and Dress of the Prophet in his Life-time, and therefore might eafily describe him. And that Saul faw nothing, though he was in the same Room, but took it all from the Woman's Declaration.

BESIDES, I told him I might quote the Cafe of Copernicus, who was not far from fuffering Death for broaching his new System of the Earth, because it feemed to contradict a Text in the Pfalms of David, although the fame is now become unqueftionable among the Astronomers, and is not at all disproved by the Divines. And to this I told him I might add an Inference relating to the prefent Belief of the Plurality of Habitable Worlds. Thus tenderly did I deal with a Man of his Modesty and Il State of Health.

I SHOULD have been ashamed to relate all this Egotism to any other than a truly Bosom Friend, o whom one may and ought to talk as to one's felf; or otherwise it is, by Distrust, to do him Injustice.

Some of these Ministers put me in Mind of Moliere's Physicians, who were esteemed, by the faculty, according as they adhered to, or neglectd, the Rules of Hippocrates and Galen, and thefe, ike them, will not go a Step out of the old Road, nd therefore have not been accustomed to hear ny Thing out of the ordinary Way, especially pon Subjects, which, in their Notion, may have ny Relation even to their traditional Tenets. And think this close Adherency to Principles, in hemselves indifferent, must be owing, in good and leterodoxy. But this Gentleman heard all that had to fay against his Notion of Witchcraft with ban- reat Attention, either for the Novelty of it, or by Indulgence to a Stranger, or both. And I am fully persuaded it was the Newness of that Opposition which tempted him to sit up later than was convenient for him: I say his sitting up only, because I think the very little he drank could make no Alteration in his Health; but not many Days after I heard of his Death, which was much lamented by the People of this Town, and the surrounding Country.

174 LETTER XIV.

END OF THE FIRST VOLUME.

T

A

LETTERS

FROM

am ppo-

was be-

nake Days

fur-

A Gentleman in the North of Scotland

TO

His FRIEND in London.

CONTAINING,

The Description of a Capital Town in that Northern Country;

WITH

An Account of some uncommon Customs of the Inhabitants:

LIKEWISE,

An Account of the HIGHLANDS, with the Customs and Manners of the HIGHLANDERS.

To which is added,

A LETTER relating to the MILITARY WAYS among the Mountains, began in the Year 1726.

The whole interspers'd with Faels and Circumstances intirely New to the Generality of People in England, and little known in the Southern Parts of Scotland.

VOL. II.

DUBLIN:

Printed for PETER WILSON, in Dame-street.

MDCCLV.

11 45 8

27 6

Modium by ind I min the liffe modi ke, ake and y to

LETTER XV.

Have hitherto been speaking only of the Part of Scotland, where I am, viz. the Eastern Side of this Island, bordering upon the northern Mountains, which Part I take to be a Kind of Medium between the Lowlands and Highlands; both y its Situation, and as it partakes of the Language and Customs of both those Extremes.

In England the Name of Scotsman is used discriminately, to signify any one of the Male-Part of the Natives of North Britain; but the Highlanders of the Natives of North Britain; but the Highlanders of the Low Country in almost every Circumstance of Life. Their Language, Customs, Manners, Dress, &c. are unke, and neither of them would be contented to be aken for the other; insomuch, that in speaking of unknown Person of this Country (I mean Scotand) as a Scotsman only, it is as indefinite as bareto call a Frenchman an European, so little would is native Character be known by it.

I. 5.

Lown

I own it may be faid, there is a Difference in the other Part of this Island, between the English and the Welsh; but I think it is hardly in any Degree to be compared with the abovementioned Distinction.

You will conclude, I am speaking only of such among the People of Scotland, who have not had the Advantages of Fortune and Education; for Letters and Converse with polite Strangers will render all Mankind equal, so far as their Genius and Application will admit; some few Prejudices, of no very great Consequence, excepted.

A CROWD of other Remarks and Observations were just now pressing for Admittance, but I have rejected 'em all, as fit only to anticipate some of the Contents of the Sheets that are to follow; and therefore I am now at Liberty to begin my Account of the most northern Part of Great-Britain, so far as it has fallen within my Knowledge.

THE Highlands take up more than one half of Scotland: They extend from Dunbarton, near the Mouth of the River Clyde, to the northermost Part of the Island, which is above two hundred Miles, and their Breadth is from fifty to above an hundred. But how to describe 'em to you, so as to give you any tolerable idea of such a rugged Country; to you, I say, who have never been out of the South of England, is, I fear, a Task altogether impracticable.

Ir it had been possible for me to procure a Landskip (I should say Heathskip, or Rockskip) of any one tremendous View among the Mountains, it would be satisfactory and informing a one single Cast of the Eye: But Language, you know, can only communicate Ideas, as it were by Retail; and a Description of one Part of a Object, which is composed of many, defaces of weaken

t

W

fu

Si

an

Wi

w gre

one

fwe

que

hay

the

ì

Pro

Eaf

are

for thof

Bed

whi

furn

weakens another that went before: Whereas Painting not only shews the whole intire at one View, but leaves the several Parts to be examin'd separately, and at Leisure, by the Eye.

FROM Words we can only receive a Notion of fuch unknown Objects, as bear some Resemblance with others we have seen; but Painting can even create Ideas of Bodies, utterly unlike to any Thing that ever appear'd to our Sight.

in 16

le-

if-

ich

nad

for

en-

and

of

ions

ave

e of

and

Ac-

tain,

lf of

the

Part

Tiles,

hun-

as to

Coun-

ut of ether

ure a

kskip

Noun-

ing a

e, you

were

of an

Thus am I entering upon my most difficult Task; for the Customs and Manners of the Highlanders will give me little Trouble more than the Transcribing. But, as I believe I am the first who ever attempted a minute Description of any success herein; and nothing but your Friendship and your Request (which to me is a Command) could have engaged me to hazard my Credit even with you (indulgent as you are) by an Undertaking, wherein the Odds are so much against me.

But to begin—The Highlands are, for the greatest Part, composed of Hills as it were piled one upon another, till the Complication rises and swells to Mountains; of which the Heads are frequently above the Clouds, and near the Summit have vast Hollows fill'd up with Snow, which, on the North Side, continues all the Year long.

From the West Coast they rise, as it were, in Progression upwards, toward the midland Country, Eastward (for on the East Side of the Island they are not generally quite so high) and their Ridges, for the most Part, run West and East, or near those Points, as do likewise all the yet discover'd Beds or Seams of Minerals they contain; with which, I have good Reason to believe they are well furnish'd.

THIS

THIS Polition of the Mountains has created Arguments for the Truth of a universal Deluge, as if the Waters had formed those vast Inequalities, by rushing violently from East to West.

THE Summits of the Highest are mostly destitute of Earth, and the huge naked Rocks, being just above the Heath, produce the disagreeable Appearance of a scabbed Head, especially when they appear to the View in a conical Figure; for a you proceed round 'em in Valleys, on leffer Hills, or the Sides of other Mountains, their Form varies according to the Situation of the Eye that beholds

THEY are cloath'd with Heath, interspers'd with Rocks, and it is very rare to fee any Spot of Grass; for those (few as they are) lie conceal'd, from an outward View, in Flats and Hollows among the Hills. There are indeed fome Mountains that have Woods of Fir, or small Oaks on their Declivity, where the Root of one Tree is almost upon a Line, with the Top of another: These are rarely seen in a Journey; what there may be behind, out of all common Ways, I do not know, but none of them will pay for felling and removing over Rocks, Bogs, Precipices and Conveyance by rocky Rivers, except fuch as are near the Sea-Coast, and hardly those; as I believe the York-Buildings Company will find in the Conclu-

I HAVE already mention'd the Spaces of Snow, near the Tops of the Mountains: They are great Hollows, appearing below as small Spots of white (I will suppose of the Dimensions of a pretty large Table) but they are fo diminish'd to the Eye by their vast Height and Distance, from, perhaps, a Mile, or more in Length, and Breadth proportionable. This I know by Experience, having rid

fi

n tl

S

th

St

Si

Wi

tar

Gi

the the

be cat

nai Co

im

am

by who

tha

con

dirt

mix

Thi

over fuch a Patch of Snow in the Month of June: The Surface was smooth, not slippery, and so hard, my Horse's Feet made little or no Impression on it; and in one Place I rid over a Bridge of Snow, hollow'd into a Kind of Arch. I then made no doubt this Passage for the Water, at Bottom of the deep Burne, was open'd by the Warmth of Springs; of which, I suppose, in dry Weather, the Current was wholly composed.

FROM the Tops of the Mountains there descend deep, wide and winding Hollows, plough'd into the Sides, by the Weight and violent Rapidity of the Waters; which often loosen and bring down

Stones of an incredible Bigness.

ated

ali-

esti-

eing

able

hey

r 26

ills,

ries

olds

ers'd

ot of

al'd,

ows

un-

on e is

ner:

nere

not

and

Con-

near the clu-

low,

reat

hite

arge

e by 15, 2

orti-

over

Or one of these Hollows, only Part appears to Sight, in different Places of the Descent; the rest is lost to View, in Meanders among the Hills.

When the uppermost Waters begin to appear with white Streaks in these Cavities, the Inhabitants, who are within View of the Height, say, The Grey Mare's Tail begins to grow, and it serves to them as a Monitor of ensuing Peril, if at that Time they venture far from Home; because they might be in Danger, by Waters, to have all Communication cut off between them and Shelter or Sustenance. And they are very skilful to judge, in what Course of Time the Rivers and Burnes will become impassable.

THE dashing and foaming of these Cataracts among the Rocks make 'em look exceeding white, by Comparison with the bordering Heath; but when the Mountains are cover'd with Snow, and that is melting, then those Streams of Water, compared with the Whiteness near 'em, look of a dirty yellowish Colour, from the Soil and Sulphur mix'd with them as they descend. But every Thing, you know, is this, or that, by Comparison.

ISHALL

I SHALL foon conclude this Description of the outward Appearance of the Mountains, which I am already tired of, as a disagreeable Subject, and I believe you are so too; but for your future Ease in that Particular, there is not much more Variety in it, but gloomy Spaces, different Rocks, Heath, and high, and low.

To cast one's Eye from an Eminence toward a Group of them, they appear still one above another, fainter and fainter, according to the aerial Perspective, and the whole of a dismal gloomy Brown, drawing upon a dirty Purple; and most of all disagreeable, when the Heath is in Bloom.

THOSE Ridges of the Mountains that appear next to the Æther, by their rugged, irregular Lines, the Heath and black Rocks, are rendered extremely harsh to the Eye, by appearing close to that diaphanous Body, without any Medium to soften the Opposition, and the clearer the Day, the more rude and offensive they are to the Sight; yet in some few Places, where any white Cragge are a-top, that Harshness is something softened.

But of all the Views, I think the most horrid is, to look at the Hills from East to West, or viewersa; for then the Eye penetrates far among 'em, and sees, more particularly, their stupendous Bulk, frightful Irregularity, and horrid Gloom, made yet more sombrous by the Shades and faint Ressections they communicate one to another.

As a Specimen of the Height of those Mountains, I shall here take notice of one in Lochaber, called Benevis; which from the Level below, to that Part of the Summit only, which appears to View, has been several Times measured by different Artists, and found to be three Quarters of a Mile of perpendicular Height.

Ιτ

hu

go Cl

th

Pr

the

TO

ing

an

too

the

lat

the

Mo

the

mo

ter

paf

and

Me

the

Hu

pro

of a

it f

liev

wer

roc

pe&

WOL

I

impossible

Ir is reckoned feven Scots Miles to that Part, where it begins to be inaccessible.

the

n I

and

afe

ety

ath,

rd a

no-

rial

my nost

. .

pear

ular

ered

lofe

n to

Day,

ght;

aggs

orrid

vice

'em,

Bulk,

e yet

tions

oun-

aber,

v, to

rs to

dif-

of a

IT

Some English Officers took it in the Fancy to go to the Top, but could not attain it for Bogs and huge perpendicular Rocks; and when they were got as high as they could go, they found a vast Change in the Quality of the Air, saw nothing but the Tops of other Mountains, and altogether a Prospect of one tremendous Heath, with here and there fome Spots of Craggs and Snow.

THIS wild Expedition, in ascending round and round the Hills; in finding accessible Places, helping one another up the Rocks, in Disappointments, and their returning to the Foot of the Mountain. took 'em up a whole Summer's Day, from five in This is according to their own Rethe Morning. lation. But they were fortunate in an Article of the greatest Importance to them, i. e. That the Mountain happened to be free from Clouds while they were on it, which is a Thing not very common in that dabbled Part of the Island, the Weftern Hills; I fay, if those condensed Vapours had pas'd, while they were at any considerable Height, and had continued, there would have been no Means left for them to find their Way down, and they must have perished with Cold, Wet, and Hunger.

In passing to the Heart of the Highlands, we proceed from bad to worse, which makes the worst of all the less surprizing; but I have often heard it said, by my Countrymen, that they verily believed, if an Inhabitant of the South of England were to be brought blindfold into some narrow rocky Hollow, enclosed with these horrid Prospects, and there to have his Bandage taken off, he would be ready to die with Fear, as thinking it impossible he should ever get out to return to his native Country.

Now what do you think of a poetical Mountain, smooth and easy of Ascent, cloathed with a verdant flowery Turf, where Shepherds tend their Flocks; sitting under the Shade of tall Poplars,

In fhort, what do you think of Richmond Hill, where we have passed so many Hours together, delighted with the beautiful Prospect.

But after this Description of these Mountains, it is not unlikely you may ask, of what Use can be fuch monstrous Excrescences?

To this I should answer — They contain Minerals, as I said before; and serve for the breeding and feeding of Cattle, wild Fowls and other useful Animals, which cost little or nothing in keeping.

They break the Clouds, and not only replenish the Rivers, but collect great Quantities of Water into Lakes and other vast Reservoirs, where they are husbanded, as I may say, for the Use of Mankind in Time of Drought; and thence, by their Gravity, perforate the Crannies of Rocks, and looser Strata, and work their Way either perpendicularly, horizontally, or obliquely; the two latter, when they meet with solid Rock, Clay, or some other resisting Stratum, till they find proper Passages downward, and, in the End, form the Springs below. And certainly, it is the Desormity of the Hills that makes the Natives conceive of their naked Straths and Glens, as of the most beautiful Objects in Nature.

Bur, as I suppose you are unacquainted with these Words, I shall, here, take Occasion to explain them to you.

A Strath

lo

we tee

0 :

Wi

he

ou

re eir

fo

Elen

ery

eer

han Day

N

an ou elie

int

nd ]

fth

ılar

ener

ou i

oute

as I

OUg

mn

A Strath is a flat Space of arable Land, lying long the Side or Sides of some capital River, beween the Water and the Feet of the Hills; and teeps its Name 'till the River comes to be confined a narrow Space, by stony Moors, Rocks, or Windings among the Mountains.

Windings among the Mountains.

The Glen is a little Spot of C

THE Glen is a little Spot of Corn Country, by he Sides of fome small River or Rivulet, likewise ounded by Hills; this is in general; but there re some Spaces that are called Glens, from their eing Flats in deep Hollows, between the high dountains, although they are perfectly barren, as Slen-dou, or the black Glen, Glen-Almond, &c.

By the Way, this Glen-Almond is a Hollow fo ery narrow, and the Mountains, on each Side, fo eep and high, that the Sun is feen therein no more an between two and three Hours in the longest Day.

his

un-

h a

neir

ars,

Iill,

ner,

ins,

be

tain

eed-

ther in nish

ater

hey

lanheir

and two

, or oper

the

nity.

e of

eau-

with

ex-

rath

Now let us go among the Hills, and fee if we an find fomething more agreeable than their outard Appearance. And to that End I shall give on the Journal of two Days Progress; which, I elieve, will better answer the Purpose than a disinted Account of the Inconvenience, Hazards, and Hardships, that attend a Traveller in the Heart is the Highlands. But before I begin the partiular Account of my Progress, I shall venture at a meral Description of one of the Mountain Spaces etween Glen and Glen: And when that is done, ou may make the Comparison with one of our uthern Rambles; in which, without any previous soute, we used to wander from Place to Place, just as the Beauty of the Country invited.

How have we been pleas'd with the eafy Ascent an Eminence, which almost imperceptibly ought us to the beautiful Prospects seen from its mmit? What a delightful Variety of Fields, and

Meadows

Meadows of various Teints of Green, adorn'd with Trees and blooming Hedges; and the whole imbellish'd with Woods, Groves, Waters, Flocks, Herds, and magnificent Seats of the Happy (a least feemingly so) and every other rising Ground opening a new and lovely Landskip.

But in one of these Monts (as the Highlander call 'em) soon after your Entrance upon the sind Hill you lose, for good and all, the Sight of the Plain from whence you parted; and nothing sold lows but the View of Rocks and Heath, both be neath and on every Side, with high and barret chi

u ro ro

11

on 0

Wa

he mal

or (

ake

B

have bein

Roa

of fi

apic

ilmo

and t

I o

erry

Mountains round about.

Thus you creep flowly on, between the Hill in rocky Ways, fometimes over those Eminence and often on their Declivity, continually hopin the next Ridge before you will be the Summit of the highest, and so often deceived in that Hope, a almost to despair of ever reaching the Top: An thus you are still rising by long Ascents, and again descending by shorter, 'till you arrive at the highest Ground, from whence you go down in much the same Manner, reversed, and never have the Gle in View, that you wish to see, as the End of you present Trouble, 'till you are just upon it. An when you are there, the Inconveniences (thoug not the Hazards) are almost as great as in the tedious Passage to it.

As an Introduction to my Journal, I must a quaint you, that I was advised to take with m fome cold Provisions, and Oats for my Horse there being no Place of Refreshment, 'till the E of my first Day's Journey.

The 2d of October, 172-

SET out with one Servant, and a Guide: The

with atter, because no Stranger (or even a Native, macquainted with the Way) can venture among he Hills, without a Conductor; for if he once y (a nes aside, and most especially, if Snow should ound all (which may happen on the very Hills, at any Season of the Year.) In that, or any other Case. ınden ne may wander into a Bog, to impassable Burnes r Rocks, and every ne plus ultra oblige him to hange his Courfe, 'till he wanders from all Hopes f ever again feeing the Face of a human Creaure.

OR if he should accidentally hit upon the Way from whence he stray'd, he would not distinguish it from another; there is fuch a feeming Samenefs in Il the rocky Places.

e imocks

e firf

of the

g fol

th be parrer

Hill

ence

opin

mit o pe, a

: An

agai

nighe

ch th e Gle

f you

An

thoug

in th

ust a

th m

Torfes

he Er

latte

OR again, If he should happen to meet with ome Highlander, and one that was not unwilling o give him Directions, he could not declare his Wants, as being a Stranger to the Language of he Country: In short, one might as well think of naking a Sea Voyage without Sun, Moon, Stars, r Compass, as pretend to know which Way to ake, when lost among the Hills and Mountains.

Bur to return to my Journal, from which I ave stray'd, though not with much Danger; it king at first setting out, and my Guide with me.

AFTER riding about four Miles of pretty good Road, over heathy Moors, hilly, but none high or of steep Ascent, I came to a small River, where here was a Ferry; for the Water was too deep and apid to pass the Ford above. The Boat was patch'd most every where with rough Pieces of Boards, nd the Oars were kept in their Places, by small Bands of twisted Sticks.

I COULD not but enquire its Age, feeing it had many Marks of Antiquity; and was told by the ferry-man, it had belong'd to his Father, and was THE Horses swim very well at first setting out, but if the Water be wide, in Time they generally turn themselves on one of their Sides; and patiently fuffer themselves to be dragg'd along.

Head, by a Halter or Bridle.

I REMEMBER, one of these Boats was so very much out of Repair, we were forced to stand upon Clods of Turf, to stop the Leaks in her Bottom, while we pass'd across the River.

Writers — This to be continued in my next.

LETTER XVI.

ROM the River's Side I ascended a steep Hill, so full of large Stones, it was impossible to make a Trot: This continued up and down, about a Mile and Half.

Ат

He

m

WO

ter

h

I

on nui

Def

Roa Tre

7 loa

loc

eet.

wei not i Vind

ivul

oot:

e P

y 01

nd of

, but

new

f the

very large he is p his

out.

erally

ently

very

upon

tom.

lews-

fleep

npof-

AT

AT Foot of the Hill, tolerable Way for a Mile, here being no great Quantity of Stones among the Heath, but very uneven; and at the End of it a mall Burne descending from between two Hills, worn deep among the Rocks, rough, rapid, and heep, and dangerous to pass. I concluded some Rain had fallen behind the Hills, that were near me; which I could not see, because it had a much reater Fall of Water, than any of the like Kind had passed before.

FROM hence a Hill five Miles over, chiefly composed of lesser Hills; so stony, it was impossible to crawl above a Mile in an Hour: But I must except a small Part of it from this general Description; for there ran across this Way (or load, as they call it) the End of a Wood of Fir-frees, the only one I had ever passed.

This, for the most Part, was an easy rising loap of about half a Mile. In most Places of he Surface, it was Bog about two Feet deep, and eneath was uneven Rock; in other Parts the lock and Roots of the Trees appeared to View.

THE Roots fometimes croffed one another, as bey ran along a good Way upon the Face of the ock; and often above the boggy Part, by both hich my Horses Legs were so much entangled, but I thought it impossible to keep them upon their let. But you would not have been displeased to be were, for the Crannies of the Rock; and there to into 'em, as a Hold against the Pressure of Winds above.

At the End of this Hill was a River, or rather mulet, and near the Edge of it, a small graffy ot; such as I had not seen in all my Way, but Place not inhabited. Here I stopp'd to bait. I wown Provisions were laid upon the Foot of a

Rock,

Rock, and the Oats upon a Kind of mosfy Grass, as the cleanest Place for the Horses feeding.

WHILE I was taking some Refreshment, Chance provided me with a more agreeable Repast; the Pleasure of the Mind. I happened to espy a poor Highlander at a great Height, upon the Declivity of a high Hill; and ordered my Guide to call him down. The Traucho (or come hither) feemed agree able to him, and he came down with wonderful Celerity, confidering the Roughness of the Hills and asking what was my Will in his Language, he was given to understand I wanted him only to ea and drink. This unexpected Answer raised such Joy in the poor Creature, as he could not help flewing it by skipping about, and expressing Sounds of Satisfaction. And when I was retired a little Way down the River, to give the Men at Opportunity of enjoying themselves with less Restraint, there was such Mirth among the Three as I thought a fufficient Recompence for my for Bur perhaps you may question how there could be fuch Merriment, with nothing but Water?

I CARRIED with me a Quart Bottle of Brandy for my Man and the Guide; and for myself, had always in my Journeys a Pocket-Pistol, loaded with Brandy, mixed with Juice of Lemons (when they were to be had) which again mingled with Water, in a wooden Cup, was upon fuch Occa fions my Table-Drink.

WHEN we had truss'd up our Baggage, I en tered the Ford, and passed it, not without Danger tered the Ford, and passed it, not without Danger as she the Bottom being filled with large Stones, the Cur rent rapid, a steep rocky Descent to the Water see h and a Rising on the farther Side, much worse; so oins, having mounted a little Way up the Declivity, it turning the Corner of a Rock, I came to an ex by b ceeding

ee

war

ov

d.

7

ca

fee etv

N

Gui

t w

I

Surf

n fe

the Tut

ow ther

uite

he fi

арра

rent

Grav

ack. By

uite

ery t one ere

Hour

as reeding steep Part before I was aware of it, where thought my Horse would have gone down backovered a small Flat of the Rock, and dismount-out d.

There was nothing remarkable afterwards, 'till him came near the Top of the Hill; where there was

the

elf, I

oade

eedin

came near the Top of the Hill; where there was feeding Plain of about a hundred and fifty Yards, erful etween me and the Summit.

No sooner was I upon the Edge of it, but my he Guide desired me to alight; and then I perceived twas a Bog, or Peatmoss, as they call it.

I HAD Experience enough of these deceitful help surfaces, to order that the Horses should be led filing a separate Parts; lest, if one broke the Turf, the street there treading in his Steps, might sink.

The Horse I used to ride, having little Weight at this own, went on pretty successfully; only here ow and then breaking the Surface a little, but the there that carried my Portmanteau, and being not uite so nimble, was much in Danger, 'till near could be further End, and there he sunk. But it luckily appened to be in a Part, where his long Legs appened to be in a Part, where his long Legs and the to the Bottom, which is generally hard all bravel or Pock to but he was in almost up to the fravel, or Rock; but he was in, almost up to the ack. when

By this Time my own (for Distinction) was uite free of the Bog, and being frighted, stood Occasery tamely by himself; which he would not have me at another Time. In the mean while we I en ere forced to wait at a Distance, while the other anger as flouncing and throwing the Dirt about him; a Cur of there was no Means of coming near him to Water the him of the heavy Burthen he had upon his e; for oins, by which he was formetimes in danger to be ity, it med upon his Back, when he rose to break the an ex og before him. But in about a Quarter of an

C

W

y

th

m

h

R

Ca

TO

21

B

R

fe

W

P

H

W

Q

hi

2

T

lor

En

wi

tw

my fid

Wa

wh

or his

Hour he got out, bedaubed with the Slough, shaking with Fear, and his Head and Neck all over in a Foam.

This Bog was stiff enough at that Time, to bear the Country Garrons in any Part of it. But it is observed of the English Horses, that when the find themselves hampered, they stand still, and tremble 'till they sink, and then they struggle violently, and work themselves surther in; and if the Bog be deep, as most of them are, it is next to impossible to get them out, otherwise than by digging them a Passage. But the little Highland Hobbies when they find themselves bogged, will lie still 'till they are relieved. And besides being bred in the Mountains, they have learnt to avoid the weaker Parts of the Mire; and sometimes on own Horses having put down their Heads, an smelt to the Bog, will refuse to enter upon it.

THERE is a certain Lord in one of the monorthern Parts, who makes Use of the little Garrons for the Bogs and rough Ways; but has fizable Horse led with him, to carry him through the deep and rapid Fords.

As for myself, I was harrassed on this Slough by winding about from Place to Place, to find such Tusts as were within my Stride or Leap, in meavy Boots with high Heels; which, by meavy Boots with high Heels; which is solved to meave the solve with high Heels; which will be meaved to meave the solve with high Heels; which, by meave too safe the solve with high Heels; which, by meave too safe the solve with high Heels; which, by meave too safe the solve with high Heels; which, by meave too safe the solve with high Heels; which, by meave too safe the solve with high Heels; which, by meave too safe the solve with high Heels; which, by meave too safe the solve with high Heels; which, by meave too safe the solve with high Heels; which, by meave too safe the solve with high Heels; which, by meave too safe the solve with high Heels; which, by meave the solve with high Heels; which high Heels; which, by meave the solve with high Heels; which, by meave the solve with high Heels; which heels; which heels with high Heels; which heels; which heels with high Heels; which heels; which heels with high high Heels; which heels

THIS Hill was about three Quarters of a Mi over, and had but a short Descent on the farth Side. Rough indeed, but not remarkable in this Country.

I HAD now five computed Miles to go, before I came to my first Asylum; that is, five Scots Miles, which, as in the North of England, are longer than yours, as three is to two. And if the Difficulty of the Way were to be taken into the Account, it might well be called Fifteen.

fhak

ver i

ne, to

, and

e vio

if th

to im

iggin

bbies

e still

red in

id th

es ou

, an

mo

e Gar

has

roug

lough

d fuc

in m y m

far i

myle

to m

Bod

, an

he O

a Mi

farth

Bu n the

This (except about three Quarters of a Mile of heathy Ground, pretty free from Stones and Rocks) confifted of stony Moors, almost impracticable for a Horse with his Rider; and likewise of rocky Way, where we were obliged to dismount, and sometimes climb, and otherwhiles slide down. But what vexed me most of all, they called it a Road: Yet after all, I must confess, it was preferable to a boggy Way. The great Difficulty was to wind about with the Horses, and find such Places as they could possibly be got over.

When we came near the Foot of the lowermost Hill, I discovered a pretty large Glen, which before was not to be seen. I believe it might be about a Quarter of a Mile wide, enclosed by exceeding high Mountains, with nine dwelling Huts; besides a sew others of a lesser Size, for Barns and Stables. This they call a Town, with a pompous Name belonging to it; but the Comfort of being near the End of my Day's Journey (heartily tired) was mixed with the Allay of a pretty wide River, that ran between me and my Lodging.

HAVING passed the Hill, I entered the River; my Horse being almost at once up to his Midfides. The Guide led him by the Bridle, as he was sometimes climbing over the loose Stones, which lay in all Positions; and many of them two or three Feet diameter. At other Times, with his Nose in the Water, and mounted up behind.

K

Thus he proceeded with the utmost Caution, ne. ver removing one Foot, 'till he found the others firm; and all the while feeming impatient of the Pressure of the Torrent, as if he was sensible, that once losing his Footing, he should be driven away, and dashed against the Rocks below.

In other rapid Rivers, where I was fomething acquainted with the Fords, by having passed them before, tho' never fo stony, I thought the Leader of my Horse to be an Incumbrance to him; and I have always found (as the Rivers, while they are passable, are pretty clear) the Horse is the surest Judge of his own Safety. Perhaps some would think it strange I speak in this Manner of a Creature, that we proudly call irrational.

THERE is a certain Giddiness attends the violent Passage of the Water, when one is in it, and therefore I always at entering refolved to keep my Eye steadily fixed on some remarkable Stone on the Shore of the farther Side, and my Horse's Ears as near as I could in a Line with it, leaving him to chuse his Steps; for the Rider, especially if he casts his Eye down the Torrent, does not know whether he goes directly forward or not, but fancies he is carried (like the Lee-way of a Ship, Sideways) along with the Stream. If he can't forbear looking aside, it's best to turn his Face toward the coming Current.

ANOTHER Precaution is (and you can't use too many) to let your Legs hang in the Water, and where the Stones will permit, to preferve a firmer Seat: in case of any sudden Slide or Stumble.

By what I have been faying, you will perceive I still retain the Custom of my own Country, in not fending my Servant before me through these dangerous Waters, as is the constant Practice of all the Natives of Scotland; nor could I prevail bad

ven

con

cou Dai

ho

rea

olu

I

gai

A

he

Cou

ong

o w

y D

hey

Curi

T

he

High

ad o ides

bre.

SE

bob

ucke

elves

nd 1

nd I

trea

ent.

with myself to do fo, at least, unless like theirs, nine always went before me in smooth as well as had Roads. But in that, there are feveral Incon-veniencies, and altho' a Servant may, by some, be ontemned for his servile Circumstance of Life, I bould never bear the Thoughts of exposing him to Dangers for my own Safety and Security; left he hould despise me with more Justice, and in a reater Degree, for the Want of a necessary Re-olution and Fortitude.

I SHALL here mention a whimfical Expedient, gainst the Danger of these Highland Fords.

An Officer, who was lately quartered at one of he Barracks, in a very mountainous Part of the Country, when he travelled, carried with him a ong Rope: This was to be put round his Body, nder his Arms, and those that attended him were wade the River, and hold the Rope on the other ide; that if any Accident should happen to him Depth of Water, or the Failure of his Horse, hey might prevent his being carried down the Current, and drag him ashore.

THE Instant I had recovered the farther Side of ne River, there appeared near the Water fix lighland Men and a Woman: These I suppose ad coasted the Stream over Rocks, and along the ides of steep Hills; for I had not feen them be-

ore.

neers

the hat ay,

ing

nem ider

and are

reft ould

rea-

lent

ere-

Eye

the

's as

n to

f he

now

fan-

Ship,

forward

e too

and

rmer

ceive

y, in thefe

ce of revail

with

SEEING they were preparing to wade, I stay'd observe 'em. First, the Men and the Woman icked up their Petticoats, then they cast themlves into a Rank, with the Female in the Middle; nd laid their Arms over one another's Shoulders; nd I saw they had placed the strongest toward the tream, as best able to resist the Force of the Torent.

IN

he

ere

Do

eno

was

had

was

bull

hap

n a

igh

Har

Clu

o g

hat

an

om

Peat

he ]

Chir

nev

nd

nud

T

rool

arge

he T

ent

he F

or t he (

ble.

In their Passage the large slippery Stones made fome of them now and then to loose their Footing; and on those Occasions the whole Rank change Colour and Countenance.

I BELIEVE no Painter ever remarked fo strong Impressions of Fear and Hope on a human Face with so many and sudden Successions of those two opposite Passions, as I observed among those poor People; but in the Highlands this is no uncommon Thing.

PERHAPS you will ask — How does a single Highlander support himself against so great a Force? He bears himself up against the Stream, with a Stick, which he always carries with him for that Purpose.

As I am now at the End of my first Day's Journey, and have no Mind to resume this disagreeable Subject in another Place, I shall as Leave to mention one Danger more attending the Highland Fords: And that is, the sudden Gushe of Waters that sometimes descend from behind the adjacent Hills; insomuch, that when the Riva has not been above a Foot deep, the Passenger thinking himself secure, has been overtaken and carried away by the Torrent.

SUCH Accidents have happened twice within my Knowledge, in two different small Rivers; both within seven Miles of this Town. One to an Exciseman, and the Messenger who was carrying him from hence to Edinburgh, in order to answer some Accusations relating to his Office. The other to two young Fellows of a neighbouring Clan; all drowned in the Manner abovementioned: And from these two Instances we may reasonably conclude, that many Accidents of the same Nature have happened; especially in more mountainous Parts, and those hardly ever known, but in he narrow Neighbourhoods of the unhappy Sufmade erers.

WHEN I came to my Inn, I found the Stableanged Door too low to receive my large Horses, tho' high enough for the Country Garrons, fo the Frame was taken out, and a small Part of the Roof pulled lown for their Admittance; for which Damage I ad a Shilling to pay the next Morning: My Fear was, the Hut being weak and fmall, they would full it about their Ears; for that Mischance had appened to a Gentleman, who bore me Company na former Journey, but his Horses were not much ourt by the Ruins.

WHEN Oats were brought, I found them for ight, and so much sprouted, that, taking up a Handful, others hung to 'em, in Succession like a Cluster of Bees; but of such Corn it is the Custom o give double Measure.

ting

trong

Face

two

poor

nmon

fingle

eat i

eam.

him

Day's

s dif

l afk

g the

ushe

d the

River

enger

and vithin

vers:

to an

rying

1 wer

The

iring

enti-

rea-

fame

oun-

ut in

the

My next Care was to provide for myself; and to hat End I entered the dwelling House. There my andlady fat with a Parcel of Children about her, ome quite, and others almost naked, by a little Peat Fire, in the Middle of the Hut; and over he Fire-Place was a small Hole in the Roof for a chimney. The Floor was common Earth, very neven, and no where dry, but near the Fire; nd in the Corners, where no Foot had carried the huddy Dirt from without Doors.

THE Skeleton of the Hut was formed of small rooked Timber; but the Beam for the Roof was arge, out of all Proportion. This is to render he Weight of the whole more fit to refift the vioent Flurries of Wind, that frequently rush into he Plains, from the Openings of the Mountains; or the whole Fabrick was fet upon the Surface of he Ground, like a Table, Stool, or other Move-

ble.

HENCE.

HENCE comes the Highlander's Compliment, or Health, in drinking to his Friend — For, as we fay among familiar Acquaintance — To your Fire. Side; he fays much to the fame Purpose — To your Roof Tree, alluding to the Family's Safety from Tempests.

THE Walls were about four Feet high, lind with Sticks watled like a Hurdle, built on the Outside with Turf; and thinner Slices of the same served for Tiling. This last they call Divet.

WHEN the Hut has been built fome Time, it is covered with Weeds and Grass; and I do affure you I have seen Sheep, that had got up from the Foot of an adjoining Hill, feeding upon the Top of the House.

If there happens to be any Continuance of dry Weather, which is pretty rare, the Worms drop out of the Divet, for want of Moisture; insemuch that I have shuddered at the Apprehension of their falling into the Dish, when I have been eating.

A

Bec

par

all

pro

fou

Na for app Mathod and left that green droited and the green droite

in aff

nent, as we Fire-

lined Out-Same

ime, I do

rom

the dry

drop

nfo-

fion

peen

R

LETTER XVII.

T a little Distance, was another Hut, where Preparations were making for my Reception. It was fomething lefs, but contained two Beds, or Boxes to lie in, and was kept as an Apartment, for People of Diffinction; or, which is all one, for fuch as feem by their Appearance to promise Expence. And indeed, I have often found but little Difference in that Article, between one of those Huts and the best Inn in England. Nay, if I were to reckon the Value of what I had for my own Use, by the Country Price, it would appear to be ten Times dearer: But it is not the Maxim of the Highlands alone (as we know) that those who travel must pay for such as stay at Home; and really the Highland Gentlemen themselves are less scrupulous of Expence in these publick Huts, than any where elfe. And their Example, in great Measure, authorifes Impositions upon Strangers, who may complain, but can have no Redrefs.

THE Landlord not only fits down with you, as in the northern Lowlands, but in fome little Time asks Leave (and sometimes not) to introduce his Brother, Cousin, or more, who are all to drink your Honour's Health in Usky; which, tho a

K 4

ftrong:

gair ind

B

he

ny i

nd

T

Con

ight

ont

t W sai

I

Engl

Cou

ew

ng;

Butt

A

or

Toll

000 M

vhic

nco ion

he ran

Irm

odg

wo,

re

oor B

hat

arly

ftrong Spirit, is to them like Water. And this I have often feen 'em drink out of a Scollop Shell. And in other Journeys, notwithstanding their great Familiarity with me, I have several Times seen my Servant at a Loss how to behave, when the Highlander has turned about, and very formally drank to him: And when I have baited, and eaten two or three Eggs, and nothing else to be had, when I ask'd the Question, What is there for eating? The Answer has been, Nothing for you, Sir; but Sixpence for your Man.

THE Host, who is rarely other than a Gentleman, is Interpreter between you and those who don't speak English; so that you lose nothing of what any one has to say relating to the Antiquity of their Family, or the heroick Actions of their Ancestors in War, with some other Clan.

If the Guest be a Stranger, not seen before, by the Man of the House, he takes the first Opportunity to enquire of the Servant, from whence his Master came, who he is, whither he is going, and what his Business in that Country? And if the Fellow happens to be surly, as thinking the Enquiry impertinent, perhaps chiefly from the Highlander's poor Appearance, then the Master is sure to be subtilly sifted (if not asked) for the Secret; and if obtained, it is a help to Conversation, with his survey Guests.

Notice at last was brought me, that my Apartment was ready; but at going out from the first Hovel, the other seemed to be all on Fire within: For the Smoke came pouring out, through the Ribs and Roof all over; but chiefly out at the Door, which was not four Feet high, so that the whole made the Appearance (I have seen) of a fuming Dunghil removed, and fresh piled up again, gain, and pretty near the same in Colour, Shape, and Size.

By the Way, the Highlanders fay, they love he Smoke; it keeps 'em warm. But I retired to ny first Shelter, 'till the Peats were grown red, nd the Smoke thereby abated.

This Fewel is seldom kept dry, for want of Convenience, and that is one Reason why, in ighting, or replenishing the Fire, the Smoakyness continues so long a Time. And Moggy's puffing of twith her Petticoat, instead of a Pair of Bellows, as a dilatory Way.

I BELIEVE you would willingly know (being an Englishman) what I had to eat. My Fare was a Couple of roasted Hens (as they call 'em) very poor, ew killed, the Skins much broke with plucking; black with Smoke, and greazed with bad Butter.

this

nell.

reat

een

the ally

iten

ad,

eat-

ou,

tle-

vho

of

lity

eir

re,

-10

his

ng,

the In-

gh-

ure

ind

his

rt-

n:

he

he he

2

up

n,

As I had no great Appetite to that Dish, I spoke or some hard Eggs; made my Supper of the solks, and washed 'em down with a Bottle of good fmall Claret.

My Bed had clean Sheets and Blankets; but thich was best of all (tho' Negative) I found no inconvenience from those troublesome Compations, with which most other Huts abound. But he bare Mention of 'em brings to my Rememance a Passage between two Officers of the trmy, the Morning after a Highland Night's odging.

ONE was taking off the flowest Kind of the wo, when the other cried out, Z-—ds, what re you doing?—Let us first secure the Dra-oons; we can take the Foot at Leifure.

Bur I had like to have forgot a Mischance, hat happened to me the next Morning; for rising arly, and getting out of my Box pretty hastily, I.

K 5 unluckily

of

th

th

Fe

fc

at 21

ca

m

TH

pr va

ha

Pr

for re hi

fre

fo

th

W

Sp

m

N

th

fh

D

P

he

unluckily fet my Foot in the Chamber-Pot, a Hole in the Ground by the Bed-side, which was made to serve for that Use, in case of Occasion.

I SHALL not trouble you with any Thing that passed, 'till I mounted on Horse-back, only for want of something more proper for Breakfast, I took up with a little Brandy, Water, Sugar, and Yolks of Eggs, beat up together; which I think they call Old-Man's Milk.

I was now provided with a new Guide, for the Skill of my first extended no farther than this Place; but this could speak no English, which I found afterwards to be an Inconvenience.

Second Day.

Ar mounting I received many Compliments from mine Host; but the most earnest was, that common one of wishing me good Weather. For, like the Sea-faring Man, my Safety depended upon it; especially at that Season of the Year.

As the Plain lay before me, I thought it all fit for Culture; but in riding along, I observed a good deal of it was Bog, and here and there Rock even with the Surface: However, my Road was smooth; and if I had had Company with me, I might have said jestingly, as was usual among us, after rough Way; Come, let us ride this our again.

Ar the End of about a Mile, there was a fteep Afcent, which they call a Carne; that is an exceeding ftony Hill, which at fome Diftance feems to have no Space at all, between Stone and Stone I thought I could compare it with no Ruggedness, fo aptly as to suppose it like all the different Stone in a Mason's Yard, thrown promiscuously upon one another. This I passed on Foot, at the Rate of about half a Mile in the Hour. I do not reckon the Time that was loft, in backing my Horses out of a narrow Place without side of a Rock; where the Way ended with a Precipice of about twenty Feet deep. Into this Gap they were led by the Mistake, or Carelessness of my Guide. The Descent from the Top of this Carne was short, and thence I ascended another Hill, not so stony; and at last, by several others, (which tho' very rough, are not reckoned extraordinary in the Highlands) I came to a Precipice of about an hundred Yards in Length.

ot, a

Was

that

y for

kfaft,

ugar,

ch I

r the

this ich I

nents

that

For.

ended

all fit

red a

Was

ne, I

nong

over

Iteep

ex-

eems

tone

ness.

ones

Rate

n.

THE Side of the Mountain below me was almost perpendicular; and the rest above, which feemed to reach the Clouds, was exceeding steep. The Path which the Highlanders and their little Horses had worn, was scarcely two Feet wide, but pretty fmooth, and below was a Lake, whereinto valt Pieces of Rock had fallen, which I suppose had made, in some Measure, the Steepness of the Precipice; and the Water that appeared between some of them, seemed to be under my Stirrup. really believe the Path where I was, is twice as high from the Lake, as the Cross of St. Paul's is from Ludgate-Hill: And I thought I had good Reafon to think fo; because a few Huts beneath, on the farther Side of the Water, which is not very wide, appeared to me, each of 'em, like a black Spot, not much bigger than the Standish before me:

A CERTAIN Officer of the Army going this Way, was so terrified with the Sight of the Abyss, that he crept a little higher; fondly imagining he should be safer above, as being surther off from the Danger, and so to take hold of the Heath in his Passage: There, a panick Terror seized him, and he began to lose his Forces, finding it impracticable

cable to proceed, and being fearful to quit his Hold, and flide down, left in fo doing he should overshoot the narrow Path; and had not two Soldiers came to his Affistance, viz. One who was at fome little Distance before him, and the other behind, in all Probability he had gone to the Bot-But I have observed, that particular Minds are wrought upon by particular Dangers, according to their different Sets of Ideas. I have sometimes travelled in the Mountains with Officers of the Army, and have known one in the Middle of a deep and rapid Ford, cry out, he was undone; another was terrified with the Fear of his Horse's falling in an exceeding rocky Way; and perhaps neither of 'em would be fo much shocked at the Danger that fo greatly affected the other. Or, it may be, either of 'em at standing the Fire of a Battery of Cannon.

But for my own Part, I had passed over two such Precipices before, which rendered it something less terrifying; yet, as I have hinted, I chose to ride it, as I did the last of the other two, knowing by the first I was liable to fear, and that my Horse was not subject either to that disarming Passion, or to Giddiness; which, in that Case, I take to be the Effect of Apprehension.

IT is a common Thing for the Natives to ride their Horses over such little Precipices; but for myself, I never was upon the Back of one of em. And by the Account some Highlanders have given me of them, I think I should never chuse it in such Places as I have been describing.

THERE is in some of those Paths, at the very Edge or Extremity, a little mosfly Grass; and those Sheltys, being never shod, if they are ever so little Footsore, they will, to favour their Feet,

сгеер

CT

ve

Iv

Iw

it v fall

1

6

I

the

tim

Lan

I

ibov Plac

I

oug

our on l

Part Imo

f he

Hom

e m

nd

agge

0 ain Iixt

efor

urm

Is

hen

creep to the very Brink, which must certainly be very terrible to a Stranger.

It will hardly ever be out of my Memory, how I was haunted by a Kind of poetical Sentence, after I was over this Precipice; which did not cease 'till it was supplanted by the new Fear of my Horse's falling among the Rocks, in my Way from it.

IT was this:

his

uld

at

her

ot-

nds

rdne-

of of

ne;

fe's

aps

the

f a

two

ne-

WO.

hat e, I

ride

for

em.

ven

uch

rery

and

r fo

eet,

" There hov'ring Eagles wait the fatal Trip."

By the Way this Bird is frequently seen among the Mountains, and I may say, severely selt, sometimes, by the Inhabitants, in the Loss of their Lambs, Kids, and even Calves and Colts.

I HAD now gone about fix Miles, and had not bove two, as I understood afterwards, to the Place of baiting.

In my Way (which I shall only say, was very ough and hilly) I met a Highland Chieftain with ourteen Attendants, whose Officers about his Perion I shall hereafter describe; at least the greatest Part of 'em. When we came, as the Sailor says, smost Broad-side and Broad-side, he eyed me, as so she would look my Hat off; but as he was at Home, and I a Stranger in the Country, I thought the might have made the first Overture of Civility, and therefore I took little Notice of him and his agged Followers.

On his Part he feemed to shew a Kind of Difain at my being so slenderly attended, with a slixture of Anger, that I shewed him no Respect fore his Vassals; but this might only be my urmife, yet it looked very like it.

I SUPPOSED he was going to the Glen, from thence I came (for there was no other Hut in all my Way,) and there he might be fatisfied by the Landlord who I was, &c.

I SHALL not trouble you with any more at prefent, than that I fafely arrived at my baiting Place; for, as I hinted before, there is fuch a Sameness in the Parts of the Hills, that the Description of one rugged Way, Bog, Ford, &c. will ferve pretty well to give you a Notion of the rest.

HERE I defired to know what I could have for and was told there was fome undressed This I esteemed as a Rarity, but as I did not approve the Fingers of either Maid or Miltress, I ordered my Man (who is an excellent Cook fo far as a Beef-Stake, or a Mutton-Chop to broil me a Chop or two, while I took a little Turn to eafe my Legs; weary with fitting fo long on Horseback.

THIS proved an intolerable Affront to my Land lady, who raved and stormed, and faid, What's your Master! I have dressed for the Laird of this and the Laird of that, fuch and fuch Chiefs; and this very Day, fays she, for the Laird ofwho I doubted not was the Person I met on the Hill.

To be short, she absolutely refused to admit a any fuch Innovation, and fo the Chops ferved for my Man and the Guide; and I had Recourse to my former Fare, hard Eggs.

EGGs are feldom wanting at the public Huts tho' by the Poverty of the Poultry, one migh wonder how they should have any Inclination produce 'em.

HERE was no Wine to be had; but as I carrie with me a few Lemons in a Net, I drank form fmall Punch for Refreshment. When my Ser vant was preparing the Liquor, my Landlor came to me, and asked me seriously, if those wer

Apple

(

(

r

ar

th

ar

lo

th

Hi

thi

the pin

up

feer

Spr

the

mu

with whi

Acc

ries

to th

it ha

High

nefit

gone

as be

Snow

of th

near

This,

from

IN

I

Apples he was fqueezing? And indeed, there are as many Lemon-Trees as Apple-Trees in that Country; nor have they any Kind of Fruit in their Glens that I know of.

THEIR Huts are mostly built on some rising rocky Spot, at the Foot of an Hill, secure from any Burne or Springs, that might descend upon them from the Mountains; and thus situated, they are pretty safe from Inundations from above, or below, and other Ground they cannot spare from their Corn. And even upon the Skirts of the Highlands, where the Laird has indulged two or three Trees not far from his House, I have heard the Tenant lament the Damage done by the Droppings and Shades of 'em, as well as the Space taken up by the Trunks and Roots.

THE only Fruit the Natives have, that I have feen, is the Bilberry; which is mostly found near Springs, in Hollows of the Heaths. The Taste of them, to me, is not very agreeable; but they are much esteem'd by the Inhabitants, who eat them with their Milk. Yet in the Mountain-Woods, which for the most Part are distant and difficult of Access, there are Nuts, Rasberries, and Strawberries; the two last, tho' but small, are very grateful to the Taste; but those Woods are so rare, (at least it has always appear'd so to me) that sew of the Highlanders are near enough to partake of the Bernstein.

nefit.

the

ce:

ness

n of ret-

for ffed

as I

Mif-

llent

hop)

little

long

and

hat

this

and

n the nit o

ed for

rfe to

Huts

migh

on t

arne

fom

y Ser

ndlor

e wer

Apple

I now fet out on my last Stage, of which I had gone about five Miles, in much the same Manner as before, when it began to rain below; but it was Snow above, to a certain Depth from the Summits of the Mountains.

In about half an Hour afterwards, at the End of near a Mile, there arose a most violent Tempest. This, in a little Time, began to scoop the Snow from the Mountains, and made such a surious Drift, which did not melt as it drove, that I could hardly fee my Horse's Head.

THE Horses were blown aside from Place to Place, as often as the sudden Gusts came on, being unable to resist those violent Eddy-Winds; and at the same Time they were very near blinded with the Snow.

Now I expected no less than to perish; was hardly able to keep my Saddle, and for Increase of Mifery, my Guide led me out of the Way, having entirely loft his Land-marks.

WHEN he perceived his Error, he fell down on his Knees by my Horse's Side, and in a beseeching Posture, with his Arms extended; and in a howling

Tone, he feem'd to ask Forgiveness.

I IMAGIN'D what the Matter was, for I could but just see him, and that too, by Fits; and spoke to him with a soft Voice, to signify I was not in Anger. And it appear'd afterwards, that he expected to be shot; as they have a dreadful Notion of the English.

Thus finding himself in no Danger of my Refentment, he addres'd himself to the searching about for the Way, from which he had deviated; and, in some little Time, I heard a Cry of Joy, and he came and took my Horse by the Bridle, and never afterwards quitted it, 'till we came to my new Lodging, which was about a Mile: For it was almost as dark as Night. In the mean Time I had given Directions to my Man, for keeping close to my Horse's Heels, and if any Thing should prevent it, to call to me immediately; that I might not lose him.

As good Luck would have it, there was but one fmall River in my Way; and the Ford, tho' deep and winding, had a fmooth fandy Bottom, which is very rare in the Highlands.

THERE

ir po

reen

dif

owd

ari

bo

re

I

ne

ad an rea

oul

on

un

rdly

e to

d at

the

ard-

Mi-

en-

n on ling

ould

ooke

t in

exn of

and my was had fe to vent lofe

one

eep

h is

ERE

THERE was another Circumstance favourable to s, (I shall not name a third as one, which is our eing not far from the Village; for we might have erish'd with Cold in the Night, as well near it, as arther off) there had not a very great Quantity f Snow fallen upon the Mountains, because the ir began a little to clear, tho' very little, within bout a Quarter of a Mile of the Glen; otherwise remight have been buried in some Cavity hid from s, by the Darkness and the Snow.

But if this Drift had happen'd to us upon some ne of the wild Moors, had continued, and we had ad far to go, we might have perish'd; notwithanding the Knowledge of any Guide whatever.

THESE Drifts are, above all other Dangers, readed by the Highlanders; for my own Part, I ould not but think of Mr. Addison's short Description of a Whirlwind, in the wild sandy Desarts of sumidia.

LETTER XVIII.

VERY high Wind, in many Places of the Highlands, is a Whirlwind. The agitated pouring into the narrow and high Spaces betten the Mountains, being confin'd in its Course; dif I may use the Expression, push'd on by a owding Rear, 'till it comes to a bounded Hollow, or Kind of Amphitheatre: I say, the Air, in that violent Motion, is there continually repell'd by the opposite Hill, and rebounded from others, 'tillifinds a Passage; insomuch that I have seen in the Western Highlands, in such a Hollow, some scattering Oaks, with their Bark twisted, almost as it had been done with a Lever.

THIS I suppose was effected, when they were young; and consequently, the rest of their Growth was in that Figure. And I myself have met with such Rebuffs on every Side, from the Whirlings such Winds, as are not easy to be described.

WHEN I came to my Inn, (you will think the Word a Burlesque) I found it a most wretched Ho vel, with several pretty large Holes in the Sides and, as usual, exceeding smoaky.

My Apartment had a Partition about four Fee high, which separated it from the Lodging of the Family. And being enter'd, I call'd for Straw of Heather, to stop the Gaps. Some Straw was brought; but no sooner was it apply'd, but it was pull'd away on the Outside.

This put me in very ill Humour, thinking som malicious Highlander did it to plague or affront me and therefore I sent my Man (who had just hous his Horses, and was helping me) to see who it coul be, and immediately he return'd laughing, and to me it was a poor hungry Cow, that was got to the Backside of the Hut for Shelter, and was pulling out the Straw for Provender.

THE Smoke being fomething abated, and the Edifice repair'd, I began to reflect on the miles able State I had lately been in, and esteem'd the very Hut, which at another Time I should have greatly despised, to be to me as good as a Palace and like a keen Appetite, with ordinary Fare, I en joyed it accordingly, not envying even the Inhabitants of Buckingham-House.

HER

Wi

WE

w

ap

Pla

fall

tolo

Th ble

Sea

Par

and

the

and

o b

in t

he

ob

wea ful (

A

hat

he

teaf

ery

Tim

and

r fr

ppe

her

r he ell o

Rock

lly a

T

f G

HERE I conclude my Journal, which I fear you will think as barren and tedious as the Ground I went over; but I must ask your Patience a little while longer concerning it, as no great Reason yet appears to you why I should come to this wretched

Place, and go no further.

tha

y th

tilli

n the

fcat

asi

wer

owt

with ing o

k th

d Ho

Sides

r Fee

of th

aw o

v. ws it wa

fom

nt me

hous' coul

nd tol

to th oulling

nd th

mifer

'd tha

d hav

alace

HER

By a Change of the Wind, there happened to fall a good deal of Rain in the Night; and I was told by my Landlord, the Hills presaged more of it: That a wide River before me was become impaffable, and if I remained longer in the Hills at that Season of the Year, I might be shut in for most Part of the Winter; for, if fresh Snow should fall, and lie lower down on the Mountains, than it did he Day before, I could not repass the Precipice, and must wait till the Lake was frozen so hard, as obear my Horses: And even then it was dangerous n those Places, where the Springs bubble up from he Bottom, and render the Ice thin, and incapable obear any great Weight. But that, indeed those weak Spots might be avoided, by Means of a skilul Guide.

As to the narrow Path, he faid he was certain, hat any Snow which might have lodged on it from he Drift, was melted by the Rain; which was then reased. To all this, he added a Piece of News (not ery prudently, as I thought) which was, that some Time before I pass'd the Precipice, a poor Highander leading over it his Horse loaden with Creels, fmall Paniers, one of them ftruck against the pper Part of the Hill, as he supposed; and wheher the Man was endeavouring to fave his Horse, r how it was he could not tell, but that they both ell down, and were dash'd to Pieces among the locks. This, to me was very affecting, especilly as I was to pass the same Way in my Return. , I en Inhabi

Thus I was prevented from meeting a Number f Gentlemen of a Clan, who were to have affembled

fembled in a Place affigned for our Interview, about a Day and Half's Journey farther in the Hills; and on the other Side of the River were Numbers of Highlanders waiting to conduct me to 'em. But I was told, before I enter'd upon this Peregrination, that no Highlander would venture upon it at that Time of the Year; yet I piqued myself upon solvening the unreasonable Directions of such as knew nothing of the Matter.

Now I return'd with as hasty Steps as the Way you have seen would permit, having met with no more Snow or Rain, till I got into the lower Country; and then there sell a very great Storm (as they call it) for by the Word Storm they only mean Snow. And you may believe I then hugg'd my.

felf, as being got clear of the Mountains.

But before I proceed to give you some Account of the Natives, I shall (in Justice) say something relating to Part of the Country of Athol, which, tho' Highlands, claims an Exception from the preceding general and gloomy Descriptions; as may likewise some other Places, not far distant from the Borders of the Lowlands, which I have not seen.

This Country is said to be a Part of the ancient Caledonia. The Part I am speaking of is a Track of Land, or Strath, which lies along the Sides of the Tay; a capital River of the Highlands.

THE Mountains, tho' very high, have an easy Slope a good Way up, and are cultivated in many Places; and inhabited by Tenants, who, like those below, have a different Air from other Highlanders in the Goodness of their Dress, and Chearfulness of their Countenances.

THE Strath, or Vale is wide, and beautifully adorned with Plantations of various Sorts of Trees. The Ways are smooth, and in one Part you ride in pleasant Glades; in another you have an agreeable Vista. Here you pass through Corn Fields; there

VOU

mo

Val

Atb

re

I

he

Mat

Brar

non

bscı

erec

voul

hem

erfu

ang

SP

ritte

he D

ieml

hat 1

is is,

quity

olist

ie Ef

TH

ough

e Eng

s; b bout you ascend a small Height, from whence you have a and pleasing Variety of that wild and spacious River, which altogether give a greater Pleasure than the most romantick Description in Words, heightened that that by a lively Imagination can possibly do. But the fol-Satisfaction seemed beyond Expression, by comparing it in our Minds with the rugged Ways and horid Prospects of the more northern Mountains, when we pass'd southward from them, through this thing Vale to the low Country. But with respect to Abol in general, I must own, that some Parts of it

that ower m (as

g re-

n the een.

cient

Fract

des of

eafy

many thole

High-

hear

ifully

rees.

ide in

eable

there

you

I SHALL not pretend to give you (as a People) my he Original of the Highlanders, having no certain faterials for that Purpose. And, indeed, that Branch of History, with Respect even to Combicured by Time, falfified by Tradition, or ren-ered fabulous by Invention; nor do I think it may rould be of any great Importance, could I trace hem up to their Source with Certainty. But I am ersuaded they came from Ireland, in regard their anguage is a Corruption of the Irish Tongue.

Spencer, in his View of the State of Ireland, ritten in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, fets forth he Dress and Customs of the Irish; and, if I reember right, they were at that Time very near hat the People are now in the Highlands. But is is, by the bye, as having little Relation to Anquity; for Dress is variable, and Customs may be polished by Authority; but Language will baffle e Efforts even of a Tyrant.

THE Highlanders are exceeding proud to be ought an unmixed People, and are apt to upbraid e English with being a Composition of all Natis; but for my own Part, I think a little Mixture

ture in that Sense would do them no manner of Harm.

THE Stature of the better Sort, fo far as I can Way make the Comparison, is much the same with the Win English, or Low-Country Scots, but the common B. People are generally small; nor is it likely, that win by being half starved in the Womb, and never a afterwards well fed, they should, by that Means, by the THE Stature of the better Sort, fo far as I can rendered larger than other People.

How often have I heard them described in Lone don, as almost Giants in Size; and certainly there are a great many tall Men of them, in and abou that City: But the Truth is, when a young Fellow of any Spirit happens (as Kite fays) to be bon to be a great Man, he leaves the Country to pu himself into some foreign Service (chiefly in the Army) but the short ones are not commonly seen in other Countries than their own. I have feen hundred of them together come down to the Low lands for Harvest - Work, as the Welfb come to England for the same Purpose; and but few sizable Men among them, and their Women are generally very fmall.

IT has been faid, likewise, that none of them an deformed by Crookedness: 'Tis true I have not see many; for as I observed of the People bordering upon the Highlands, none are spoiled by over Car of their Shapes. But is it to be supposed, that Children who are left to themselves, when hard able to go alone in fuch a rugged Country, are fre from all Accidents? Affertions fo general are rid culous.

THEY are also said to be very healthy, and fre from Distempers, notwithstanding the great Hard Surely an Account of tha Thips they endure. Country from a Native, is not unlike a Gascon's Ac count of himself. I own they are not very sub ject to Maladies, occasioned by Luxury, but ver

abl

ucci

atcl

Æ

da

had on

erat

u I

oule

wit

Hi

Тн ty S

off.

TH

o w W eir N

HA

tter, enin

Jou ne f

arer

gard

one

t is 1

ded.

of lable to Fluxes, Fevers, Agues, Coughs, Rheunatisms, and other Distempers, incident to their car Way of living; especially upon the Approach of the Winter, of which I am a Witness.

By the Way, the poorer Sort are persuaded, that the Wine or strong Malt Drink is a very good Remedy ever ha Fever; and though I never prescribed either s, by them, I have administered both with as good access, as any Medicines prescribed by Dostor. access, as any Medicines prescribed by Doctor Access, as any Medicines prescribed by Doctor atcliffe.

Asculapius, even as a God, could hardly have bout da more solemn Act of Adoration paid him, than had lately from a Highlander; at whose Hut I lay one of my Journies. His Wife was then detended in the Margout behind me to comfort her, if she with Wine and Provisions, and a great Retinue Highlanders with me.

The poor Man fell down on his Knees in this itable ty Street, and eagerly kis'd my Hand; telling erally ein Irish, I had cured his Wife with my good off.

it ver

liable

THIS caused several Jokes from my country of set to were present, upon the poor Fellow's Value for himself did not escape dering Wife; and the Doctor himself did not escape Car air Mirth upon that Occasion.

that HAVING Yesterday proceeded thus far in my hardly tter, in order to have the less Writing this re free ening, I had a Retrospection in the Morning to re rid Journal; and could not but be of Opinion that te few Additions were necessary to give you a Hard gard the Incidents in that Account are confined one short Progress, which could not take in all tis wanting to be known, for the Purpose incry sub ded.

THERE

THERE are few Days that pass without som Rain or Snow in the Hills, and it seems necessary should be so (if we may suppose Nature ever intended the worst Parts as Habitations for human Creatures) for the Soil is so shallow and stony, and i Summer the Respection of the Sun's Heat from the Sides of the Rocks is so strong, by Reason of the Narrowness of the Vales, to which may be added the violent Winds; that otherwise the little Conthey have would be entirely dry'd, and burnt u for want of proper Moisture.

THE Clouds in their Passage often sweep along beneath the Tops of the high Mountains, at when they happen to be above them, they are draw as they pass along, by Attraction, to the Summi in plain and visible Streams or Streaks; where the are broke, and fall in vast Quantities of Wate Nay, it is pretty common in the high Country so the Clouds, or some very dense Exhalation, to draw along the Part, which is there called the Foot of the Hills, though very high above the Level of the Sea; and I have seen, more than once, a vestair Rainbow described, at not above thirty or for Yards distance from me, and seeming of much the same Diameter, having each Foot of the Sea circle upon the Ground.

An English Gentleman, one Day, as we stopt consider this Phænomenon, proposed to ride in the Rainbow, and though I told him the fruit Consequence, since it was only a Vision made his Eye, being at that Distance; having the Sun rectly behind, and before him, the thick Vapo that was passing along, at the Foot of the Hill. I (the Place being smooth) he set up a Gallop, a found his Mistake, to my great Diversion with afterwards, upon his Consession that he had so entirely loft it.

ucl

Wa

Tor

fter

pot r G

hade

T

lespe

re va

urfac

ea;

r the

e wit

ence

be 1

IT 1

Hea

e Ri

lounta

ge.

I HAVE often heard it told by Travellers, as a Proof of the Height of Teneriff, that the Clouds formetimes hide Part of that Mountain, and at the same Time the Top of it is seen above 'em; nothing is more ordinary than this in the Highlands. But I would not therefore be thought to infinuate, that these are as high as that; but they may, you ee, be brought under the same Description.

om

ryi

end

Crea

nd i n th

f th

adde

Con

nt u

alon

, an

draw

nmit

re the

Wate

ry f

o dri

oft

of the

a ve

or for uch t

Sen

(topt ide in fruit

made

e Sun

Vapo

Iill. Y

lop, a

with h

had fo

IHA

Thus you find the immediate Source of the Rivers and Lakes in the Mountains, is the Clouds, and not as our Rivers, which have their Original from subterraneous Aqueducts, that rise in Springs below; but among the Hills the Waters fall in great Cascades, and vast Cataracts, and pass with prodicious Rapidity through large rocky Channels, with inch a Noise as almost deasens the Traveller, whose Way lies along by their Sides. And when these sorrents rush through Glens or wider Straths, they sten plough up, and sweep away with them, large pots of the Soil, leaving nothing behind but Rock of Gravel, so that the Land is never to be recoverd. And for this, a proportionable Abatement is take in the Tenant's Rent.

THE Lakes are very differently situated, with espect to high and low. There be those which revast Cavities silled up with Water, whereof the urface is but little higher than the Level of the ea; but of a surprizing Depth. As Lake Ness, of the Purpose which has been ignorantly held, to ewithout a Bottom; but was sounded by an expended Seaman, when I was present, and appeared be 130 Fathom, or 260 Yards deep.

Ir feems to be supplied by two small Rivers at Head; but the great Increase of Water is from Rivers, Burnes, and Cascades from the high sountains, by which it is bounded at the Water's

ige. And it has no other visible Issue, but by the River Ness, which is not large, nor has the Lake any perceptible Current; being so spacious as more than a Mile in Breadth, and twenty one in Length At a Place called Foyers, there is a steep Hill close to it, of about a Quarter of a Mile to the Top, from whence a River pours into the Lake, by three successive wild Cataracts, over romantick Rocks; whereon at each Fall it dashes with such Violence, that in windy Weather the Side of the Hill is hid from Sight for a good Way together, by the Sprey that looks like a thick Body of Smoke. This Fall of Water has been compared with the Cataracts of the Tyber, by those who have seen them both.

There are other Lakes in large Hollows, on the Tops of exceeding high Hills; I mean, they feem to any one below, who has only heard of them, to be on the utmost Height. But this is a Deception for there are other Hills behind unseen, from whence they are supplied with the great Quantit of Water they contain. And it is impossible that the Rain, which falls within the Compass of on of those Cavities, should not only be the Cause of such a profound Depth of Water, but also supply the Drainings that descend from it; and issue out Springs from the Sides of the Hills.

THERE be smaller Lakes, which are also seated high above the Plain, and are stored with Trout though it seems impossible, by the vast Steepness the Burnes on every visible Side, that those Fill should have got up thither from Rivers or Lake below. This has often moved the Question, How came they there? But they may have ascended by small Waters, in long Windings out of Sight be hind, and none steep enough to cause a Wonder for I never found there was any Notion of their be ing brought thither for Breed.

Bu

t

a

fo

H

tl

V

Si

gi

fu

fe

try

W

CO

ver

por

its pee

zle

rec

I

Iha

dan

four

toir

I re

toge

But I had like to have forgot, that some will have them to have sprung from the Fry, carried from other Waters; and dropt in those small Lakes, by Water-Fowl.

ake

ore

gth.

fe to

rom

fuc-

cks:

Vio-

Hill

the

This

Cata-

them

n the

feem

n, to

otion

fron

antit

e tha

of on use o

fuppl

outi

feate

Frout

ness

e Fil

Lake

, Ho

ded b ght be onder neir be

Bu

In a Part of the Highlands, called Strath-glass, there is a Lake too high by its Situation, to be much affected by the Reflection of Warmth from the Plain, and too low between the Mountains, which almost join together, to admit the Rays of the Sun; for the only Opening to it is on the North Side. Here the Ice continues all the Year round; and though it yields a little on the Surface, to the Warmth of the circumambient Air by Day, in Summer-Time, yet at the Return of Night it begins to freeze as hard as ever. This I have been affured of, not only by the Proprietor himself, but by several others, in and near that Part of the Country.

I HAVE seen in a rainy Day, from a Conflux of Waters above, on a distant high Hill, the Side of it covered over with Water by an Overslowing; for a very great Spaw, as you may have seen the Water pour over the Brim of a Cistern, or rather, like its being covered over with a Sheet, and upon the peeping out of the Sun the reslected Rays have dazzled my Eyes to such a Degree, as if they were directed to them by the Focus of a burning Glass.

So much for Lakes.

In one Expedition where I was well attended, as I have faid before, there was a River in my Way so dangerous, that I was set upon the Shoulders of four Highlanders; my Horse not being to be trusted to in such Roughness, Depth, and Rapidity. And I really thought sometimes, we should all have gone together.

L 2

IN

In the fame Journey the Shoulders of some of -them were employed to ease the Horses, down from Rock to Rock; and all that long Day I could make out but nine Miles. This also was called a Road.

TOWARD the End of another Progress in my Return to this Town, after feveral Hazards from increasing Waters, I was at Length stopped by a fmall River, that was become impassable. There happened luckily for me, to be a publick Hut in this Place, for there was no going back again; but there was nothing to drink, except the Water of the River.

THIS I regretted the more, as I had refused at one of the Barracks to accept of a Bottle of Old Hock, on Account of the Carriage, and believing I should reach hither before Night. In about three Hours after my Arrival at this Hut, there appeared on the other Side of the Water a Parcel of Merchants, with little Horses loaded with Rundlets of Ufky.

WITHIN Sight of the Ford was a Bridge (as they call'd it) made for the Convenience of this Place. It was composed of two small Fir-Trees not squared at all, laid one beside the other, across a narrow Part of the River, from Rock to Rock. were Gaps and Intervals between those Trees, and beneath a most tumultuous Fall of Water.

Some of my Merchants bestriding the Bridge, edged forwards, and moved the Ufky Veffels before them; but the others afterwards, to my Surprize, walked over this dangerous Passage, and dragged their Garrons through the Torrent, while the poor little Horses were almost drown'd with the Surge.

I HAPPEN'D to have a few Lemons left, and with them I fo far qualified the ill Taste of the Spirit, as to make it tolerable; but Eatables there were

tl

of

ve

th

ve

ma

mu

fer

Pea

Ma

Ebo

attr

Tre

it m feen

ofter

the I

IN

from

of or

Torr

Plain

with

ts Pa

lema

y to t

as di

Horse

TI

were none except Eggs, and poor starved Fowls as nfual.

THE Ulky Men were my Companions, whom it was expected I should treat according to Custom; there being no Partition to separate them from me. And thus I pass'd a Part of the Day, and great Part of the Night in the Smoke, and dreading the Bed.

But my personal Hazards, Wants, and Inconveniencies among the Hills, have been fo many, that I shall trouble you with no more of 'em; or very sparingly, if I do at all.

Some of the Bogs are of large Extent, and many People have been lost in 'em; especially after much Rain in Time of Snow, as well as in the leffer Mosses, as they call 'em, where, in digging of Peat, there have been found Fir-Trees of a good Magnitude, buried deep, and almost as hard as Ebony.

THIS, like the Situation of the Mountains, is attributed to Noah's Flood; for they conclude the Trees have lain there ever fince that Time, tho' it may be easily otherwise accounted for. But what feems extraordinary to Strangers, is, that there are often deep Bogs on the Declivities of Hills; and the higher you go, the more you are bogged.

In a Part called Glengary, in my Return hither from the West Highlands, I found a Bog, or a Part of one, had been washed down by some violent Torrent, from the Top of a high Hill into the lain; and the steep Sloap was almost covered over with the muddy Substance, that had rested there in ts Passage downwards.

This made a pretty deep Bog below, as a Genleman who was with me, found from his Curiofiy to try it, being deceived by the Surface, which as dry'd by the Sun and Wind; for he forced his. forse into it, and sunk, which surprized my Companion,

and the

of

m ke

my

om

7 a

ere

in

but

of

at

blC

ing

ree

red

ler-

s of

(as ace.

ared

row

nere

and

dge,

fore

ize,

gged

poot

ge.

here

were

panion, who I thought should have known better.

being of Ireland.

I HAVE heretofore hinted the Danger of being shut in by Waters, and thereby debarr'd from all Necessaries of Life, but have not yet mentioned the Extent of the Hills, that intervene between one Place of Shelter and another; and indeed it is impossible to do fo in general. But those are sometimes nine or ten Scots Miles over, and one of them in particular, that I have passed, is Eighteen, wherein you frequently meet with Rivers and deep rugged Channels in the Sides of the Mountains, which you must pass, and these last are often the most dangerous of the two; and both, if continued Rains should fall, become impassable before you can attain the End; for which a great deal of Time is required by the Stonyness, and other Difficulties of the Way.

THERE is indeed one Alleviation: That as these Rivers may, from being shallow, become impracticable for the tallest Horse in two or three Hour Time, yet will they again be passable, from the Velocity, almost as soon, if the Rain entirely cease. When the Highlanders speak of these Spaces, they call 'em Monts, without either Houses Hall; and never attempt to pass them, if the Tops of the Mountains presage bad Weather. Yet in that, they are sometimes deceived by a sudder Change of Wind.

ALL this Way you may go without feeing a Tree or coming within two Miles of a Shrub; and wher you come at last to a small Spot of arable Land where the rocky Feet of the Hills serve for Enclosure, what Work do they make about the Beautie of the Place, as tho' one had never seen a Field of Oats before.

to

ul

ot

he

fe

ar

lic

far

pa

tu

ha

By

He

it a

tw

ten

you

Eft

pol

Me

it b

at 1

you

Ifh

har

Sur

Squ

fqu:

tor

I

You know, that a polite Behaviour is common to the Army; but as it is impossible it should be universal, considering the different Tempers, and other Accidents that attend Mankind, so we have here a certain Captain, who is almost illiterate, perfectly rude, and thinks his Courage and Strength are sufficient Supports to his Incivilities.

This Officer finding a Laird at one of the publick Huts in the Highlands, and both going the fame Way, they agreed to bear one another Company the rest of the Journey.

AFTER they had rid about four Miles, the Laird turned to him, and faid — Now all the Ground we have hitherto gone over, is my own Property—By G—, fays the other, I have an Apple-Tree in Herefordshire, that I would not swop with you for it all.

But to give you a better Idea of the Distance between one inhabited Spot, and another in a vast Extent of Country (Main and Island) I shall acquaint you with what a Chief was saying of his Quondam Estate.

ter,

eing

all

oned

one

im-

me-

hem

een,

deep

ains,

n the

tinu-

vou

Time

ulties

thefe

prac-

loup

their

tirel

thele

useon

Tops

et in udder

Tree

wher

Land

Inclo

autie

ield o

You

He told me, that if he was re-instated, and disposed to sell it, I should have it for the Purchase-

Money of Three-pence an Acre.

I did not then take much Notice of what he faid, it being at a Tavern in Edinburgh, and pretty late at Night; but upon this Occasion of writing to you, I have made some Calculation of it, and find I should have been in Danger to have had a very hard Bargain. It is said to have been reduced by a Survey to a rectangle Parallelogram, or oblong square of fixty Miles by forty; which is 2400 square Miles, and 1,951,867 square Acres.

IT is called 1500 l. a Year Rent; but the Collector faid, he never received 900 %.

L 4

Now

224 LETTER XIX.

Now the aforegoing Number of Acres at 3 d. an Acre, amounts to 24,398 l. 6s. 9 d. — and 900 per Annum, at 25 Years Purchase, is but 22,500 l. The Difference is 1896 l. 6s. 9 d.

Id

(1

fo

pa

in

N

of

an as Lo

to Tl lan

Ne

be

tle

cer

dir is t

his

W

to and

in

wh

nio

THERE are other Observations that might not be improper; but I shall now defer them, and continue my Account of the People, which has likewise been deferred in this Letter.

LETTER XIX.

THE Highlanders are divided into Tribes, or Clans under Chiefs, or Chieftains, as they are called in the Laws of Scotland; and each Clan again divided into Branches, from the main Stock, who have Chieftains over them. These are subdivided into smaller Branches of fifty or sixty Men, who deduce their Original from their particular Chieftains; and rely upon them as their more immediate Protectors and Defenders.

But for better Diffinction, I shall use the Word Chief for the Head of a whole Clan; and the Principal of a Tribe derived from him, I shall call a Chieftain.

THE ordinary Highlanders esteem it the most fublime Degree of Virtue to love their Chief, and pay him a blind Obedience, altho' it be in Opposition to the Government, the Laws of the Kingdom, dom, or even to the Law of God. He is their Idol, and as they profess to know no King but him, (I was going farther) so will they say, they ought to do whatever he commands, without Enquiry.

NEXT to this Love of their Chief, is that of the particular Branch from whence they fprung, and in a third Degree, to those of the whole Clan or Name, whom they will assist, right or wrong, against those of any other Tribe, with which they are at Variance; to whom their Enmity, like that of exasperated Brothers, is most outrageous.

THEY likewise owe good Will to such Clans as they esteem to be their particular Well-wishers; and lastly, they have an Adherence one to another as Highlanders, in Opposition to the People of the Low Country, whom they despise as inserior to them in Courage, and believe they have a Right to plunder them, whenever it is in their Power. This last arises from a Tradition, that the Lowlands in old Times were the Possession of their Ancestors.

If the Truth of this Opinion of theirs stood in Need of any Evidence, it might in good Measure be confirmed, by what I had from a Highland Gentleman of my Acquaintance. He told me, that a certain Chief of a considerable Clan, in rummaging lately an old Charter Chest, found a Letter directed by another Chief to his Grandsather, who is therein assured of the immediate Restitution of his Listed, that is, stolen Cows; for that he (the Writer of the Letter) had thought they belonged to the Lowland Lairds of Murray, whose Goods and Effects ought to be a Prey to them all.

WHEN I mentioned this Tradition, I had only in View the middling and ordinary Highlanders, who are very tenacious of old Customs and Opinions; and by the Example I have given of a Fact,

L

that:

ibes, they

d. an

900

100/

t not

and

has

Clan tock, fub-Men, cular Vord Prinall a most and ppoinglom, that happened almost a Century ago, I would be understood, that it is very probable such a Notion was formerly entertained by some, at least among those of the highest Rank.

THE Chief exercises an arbitrary Authority over his Vassals, determines all Differences and Disputes that happen among them, and levies Taxes upon extraordinary Occasions; such as the Marriage of a Daughter, building a House, or some Pretence for his Support, and the Honour of the Name. And if any one should refuse to contribute to the best of his Ability, he is sure of severe Treatment; and if he persisted in his Obstinacy, he would be cast out of the Tribe by general Consent. But Instances of this Kind have very rarely happened.

1

2

t

to

h

th

fa

W

H

of

hi

an

Se

wl

bu

at

W

Wi

Co

bei

fro

Yε

Co

200 wh

Was

This Power of the Chiefs is not supported by Interest, as they are Landlords, but as lineally descended from the old Patriarchs, or Fathers of the Families; for they hold the same Authority, when they have lost their Estates, as may appear from several, and particularly one, who commands in his Clan, tho' at the same Time they maintain him, having nothing left of his own.

On the other Hand, the Chief, even against the Laws, is to protect his Followers, as they are sometimes called; be they never so criminal.

HE is their Leader in Clan-Quarrels, must free the Necessitous from their Arrears of Rent; and maintain such, who by Accidents are fallen to total Decay.

Ir by Increase of the Tribe any small Farms are wanting for the Support of such Addition, he split others into lesser Portions; because all must be somehow provided for. And as the meanest among 'em pretend to be his Relations by Consanguinity the they infift upon the Privilege of taking him by the Hand, wherever they meet him.

Concerning this last, I once faw a Number of very discontented Countenances, when a certain Lord, one of the Chiefs, endeavoured to evade this Ceremony.

be

tion

ong

revo

Dif-

axes

far-

ome

the bute

reat-

, he

fent.

hap-

ed by

y de-

f the

when

from

ds in ntain

gainf

ey are

t free

and

tota

ns are

fplit

uft be

mong

ninity

they

IT was in Presence of an English Gentleman in high Station, from whom he would willingly have concealed the Knowledge of fuch feeming Familiarity with Slaves of fo wretched Appearance; and thinking it, I suppose, as a Kind of Contradiction. to what he had often boasted at other Times, viz. his despotick Power in his Clan.

THE unlimited Love and Obedience of the Highlanders to their Chiefs, are not confined to the lower Order of their Followers; but are the same with those who are near them in Rank.

As for Instance: As I was travelling in a very wild Part of the Country, and approaching the House of one of those Gentlemen who had Notice of my coming, he met me at some Distance from his Dwelling; with his Arcadian Offering of Milk and Cream, as usual, carried before him by his Servants. He afterwards invited me to his Hut. which was built like the others, only very long, but without any Partition; where the Family was at one End, and some Cattle at the other. By the Way, altho' the Weather was not warm, he was without Shoes, Stockings, or Breeches, in a short Coat, with a Shirt not much longer, which hung between his Thighs; and just hid his Nakedness: from two Daughters about seventeen or eighteen Years old, who fat over against him. After some Compliments on either Side, and his wishing me good Weather, we entered into Conversation, in which he feemed to be a Man of good Senfe, as he was well proportioned. In speaking of the Country, he told me he knew I wondered how any Body would undergo the Inconveniences of a Highland Life.

You may be fure I was not wanting in an agreeable Contradiction, by faying, I doubted not they had their Satisfactions and Pleasures to countervail any Inconveniences they might fustain; tho' perhaps those Advantages could not be well known to fuch as are en passant. But he very modestly interrupted me as I was going on, and faid, he knew that what I faid, was the Effect of Complaifance, and could not be the real Sentiment of one who knew a good deal of the Country; but, fays he, the Truth is, we are infenfibly inured to it by Degrees. For, when very young, we know no better; being grown up, we are inclined, or perfuaded by our near Relations to marry, thence come Children, and Fondness for them. But above all, fays he, is the Love of our Chief, fo strongly is it inculcated to us in our Infancy. And if it were not for that, I think the Highlands would be much thinner of People than they now are. By this and many other Instances, I am fully perfuaded, that the Highlanders are, at least, as fond of the Race of their Chiefs, as a Frenchman is of the House of Bourbon.

SEVERAL Reasons have just now offered themfelves to me, in Persuasion to conceal one Circumstance of this Visit; but your Interest with me has prevailed against them all.

THE two young Ladies, in my faluting them at parting, did me a Favour, which, with you, would be thought the utmost Invitation; but it is purely innocent with them, and a Mark of the highest Esteem for their Guest.

This was no great Surprize to me, having received the fame Compliment feveral Times before

in

li

h

h

ar

an

fo

tar

tw

the gre

the

Ch Dea

fom

grea Hea

whe

othe

whe

Deg

the (

Stone

have

Moor

were latter

in the Highlands, and even from married Women, whom I may be fure had no further Defign in it; and like the two abovementioned young Women, could never expect to see me again.

But I am not fingular; for feveral Officers in the Army have told me they had received the fame

Courtefy from other Females in the Hills.

any

gh-

an

not

un-

in;

well

rery

and

t of

nent try;

ibly

ing,

are

s to

for our

In-

the

than

ices,

, at

as a

em-

Cir-

me

m at

rould

arely

ghest

g re-

efore

Some of the Chiefs have not only personal Dislikes and Enmity to each other, but there are also hereditary Feuds between Clan and Clan; which have been handed down from one Generation to another, for several Ages.

THESE Quarrels descend to the meanest Vassal; and thus, sometimes, an innocent Person suffers for Crimes committed by his Tribe at a vast Distance of Time, before his Being began.

WHEN a Quarrel begins in Words, between two Highlanders of different Clans, it is esteemed the very Height of Malice and Rancour; and the greatest of all Provocations to reproach one another with the Vices or personal Desects of their Chief, which for the most Part ends in Wounds or Death.

OFTEN the Monuments of a Clan Battle, or fome particular Murder, are the Incitements to great Mischiefs. The first mentioned are small Heaps of Stones thrown together on the Place, where every particular Man fell in Battle; the other is from such a Heap first cast upon the Spot where the Fact was committed, and afterwards by Degrees increased to a high Pyramid, by those of the Clan that was wronged, in still throwing more Stones upon it as they pass by. The former I have seen overgrown with Moss, upon wide Moors, which shewed the Number of Men that were killed in the Action. And several of the latter I have observed in my Journeys, that could not

P

h

01

Plo

ot

de

P

fe

la

L

0 aff

m

be

of

rel

the

Cu

ma

of

Ex

the poi

kej

ing Fir

am

En

har

not be less than fourteen or fifteen Feet high, with a Base proportionable.

Thus, if feveral Men of Clans at Variance happen to meet in View of one of these Memorials, 'tis odds but one Party reproaches the other with all the aggravating Circumstances that Tradition (which is mostly a Liar, either in the whole or a Part) has added to the original Truth; and then some great Mischief ensues.

But if a fingle Highlander of the Clan that offended, should be met by two or three more of the others, he is sure to be insulted, and receive some cruel Treatment from them.

Thus these Heaps of Stones, as I have heard an old Highlander complain, continue to occasion the Revival of Animosities, that had their Beginning perhaps hundreds of Years before any of the Parties accused were born; and therefore I think they ought, by Authority, to be scattered, and effectually defaced. But some of these Monuments have been raised, in Memory of such as have lost their Lives in a Journey by Snow, Rivers, or other Accidents; as was the Practice of the eastern Nations.

By an old Scottish Law, the Chief was made accountable for any Depredations, or other Violences committed by his Clan upon the Borders of the Lowlands; and in extraordinary Cases he was obliged to give up his Son, or some other nearest Relation as a Hostage, for the peaceable Behaviour of his Followers in that Respect.

By this Law (for I never faw the Act) he must furely have had an entire Command over them; a least, tacitly, or by Inference understood. For how unreasonable, not to say, unjust, must such a Restriction have been to him, if by Sanction of the same Law he had not had a coercive and judi-

with ance

rials,

with ition

or a

then

at off the

fome

heard

afion

egin-

of the

think

and

Ionu-

ch as ivers.

f the

made

Vio-

ers of

e was earel

vious

mul

n; a

For

fuch

on o judi-

CIZ

cial Authority over those, in whose Choice and Power it always lay to bring Punishment upon him? And if he had such an absolute Command over them, was it not to make of every Chief a petty Prince in his own Territory, and his Followers a People distinct and separate from all others?

For atrocious Crimes, such as Rebellion, Murder, Rapes, or opposing the Execution of the Laws, which is also called Rebellion, when by Process the Chief or Laird was condemned in Absence, and intercommuned, as they call it, or outlaw'd, the Civil Power, by Law and Custom gave Letters of Fire and Sword against him; and the Officer of Justice might call for military Force, to affist in the Execution.

But it is certain, some few of the Chiefs in former Times were, upon Occasions, too powerful to be brought to Account by the Government.

I HAVE heard many Instances of the Faithfulness of particular Highlanders to their Masters, but shall relate only one; which is to me very well known.

At the Battle of Glenshiels, in the Rebellion of the Year 1719, a Gentleman, (George Munro of Culcairne) for whom I have a great Esteem, commanded a Company of Highland Men, raised out of his Father's Clan; and entertained at his own Expence. There he was dangerously wounded in the Thigh from a Party of the Rebel Highlanders, posted upon the Declivity of a Mountain; who kept on firing at him, after he was down, according to their Want of Discipline, in spending much Fire upon one single Officer, which distributed among the Body, might thin the Ranks of their Enemy.

WHEN, after he fell, and found by their Behaviour, they were refolved to dispatch him outright, right, he bid his Servant, who was by, get out of the Danger, for he might lose his Life, but could ay be of no Manner of Succour or Service to him; and only desired him, that when he returned Home, he would let his Father and his Family know that he had not misbehaved.

HEREUPON the Highlander burst out into Tears, and asking him how he thought he could leave him his in that Condition, and what they would think of him at Home, set himself down on his Hands and the Knees over his Master, and received several Wounds, to shield him from further Hurt; 'till som one of the Clan, who acted as a Serjeant, with a ser small Party dislodged the Enemy, after having taken an Oath upon his Dirk, that he would do it.

For my own Part, I do not see how this Act ow of Fidelity is any Way inferior to the so celebrated one of Philocratus, Slave to Caius Gracchus; who sold likewise covered his Master with his Body, when the was found by his Enemies in a Wood, in such his Manner, that Caius could not be killed by them. HEREUPON the Highlander burst out into Tears, Manner, that Caius could not be killed by them, ratio 'till they had first dispatched his Domestick.

This Man has often waited at Table, when his uef Master and I dined together; but otherwise is set treated more like a Friend, than a Servant.

The Highlanders, in order to persuade a Belief Fart of their Hardiness, have several Rodomontados on try, that Head; for, as the French Proverb says, Tour less Gascons, ne sont pas en France: There are vain less a Boasters in other Countries, besides Gascony. 'Tis et is true, they are liable to great Hardships, and they cloud often suffer by 'em in their Health and Limbs, as I have often observed in a former Letter.

One of these Gasconades is, that the Laird of iels Keppoch, Chiestain of a Branch of the Mac Denalds, in a Winter Campaign against a neighbour nating Laird, with whom he was at War about a Position, session, and they compare the same session and they are session.

feffion.

I

out of selfion, gave Orders for rowling a Snow-ball to could ay under his Head in the Night; whereupon his followers murmur'd, faying, Now we despair of the one, Victory, since our Leader is become so effeminate, be that san't sleep without a Pillow.

This, and many other like Stories are romanically and there is one Thing that, at first Thought, him might seem very extraordinary, of which I have been credibly assured, that when the Highlanders are constrained to lie among the Hills, in cold dry weral windy Weather, they sometimes soak the Plaid in ome River or Burne; and then holding up a Corrich a per of it a little above their Heads, they turn hemselves round and round, 'till they are inveloped to it. By the whole Mantle. Then they lay themselves and the warmth of their who sodies make a Steam, like that of a boiling Kettle. The wet, they say, keeps 'em warm by thicken-such stuff, and keeping the Wind from pene-shem, rating. hem, rating.

I MUST confess I should myself have been apt to en his uestion this Fact, had I not frequently seen them life is yet from Morning to Night; and even at the Belief Per From Morning to Night; and even at the Beginning of the Rain, not so much as stir a few Belief Pards to shelter, but continue in it without Necesson ity, 'till they were, as we say, wet through and From brough. And that is soon effected by the Loose-vain ess and Spunginess of the Plaiding; but the Bon'Tis let is frequently taken off, and wrung like a Dishthey Clout, and then put on again.

They have been accustomed from their Infancy to be often wet, and to take the Water-like Spard of liels; and this is become a second Nature, and can the bourhat I used to say, they seemed to be of the Duck and Post lind, and to love the Water as well. Tho' I never fion.

Post and to love the Water as well. Tho' I never faw this Preparation for Sleep in windy Weather yet fetting out early in a Morning from one of the Huts, I have feen the Marks of their Lodging where the Ground has been free from Rime of Snow, which remained all round the Spots where they had lain.

THE different Sur-names of the Highlander in general are but few, in regard they are divided into large Families, and hardly any Male Strangers have intermarried with, or fettled among 'em; and with respect to particular Tribes, they commonly make that Alliance among themselves who are all of one Name, except some few who may have affected to annex themselves to the Clanand those for the most Part assume the Name.

Thus the Sur-names being useless, for Diftinction of Persons are suppressed, and there re main only the Christian Names; of which there are every where a great Number of Duncans, Donalds, Alexanders, Patricks, &c. who therefor must be some otherways distinguished one from another.

This is done by fome additional Names and Descriptions taken from their Forefathers; so when their own Christian Name, with their Father's Name and Description (which is for the most Part the Colour of the Hair) is not sufficient they add the Grandfather's, and so upwards, till they are perfectly distinguished from all others the same Clan-Name.

As for Example; A Man whose Name is Donald Grant, has for Patronimick (as they call it) the Name following, viz.

Donald Bane, i. e. White hair'd Donald.

Mac oil Vane, Vic oil roi,
Vic ean,
Grandson of red hair'd Donald.
Great Grandson of John.

THUS

De

fuc.

wh

fro

ďov

unj

lazy

Ex

tair

Nu

the

ver

the

W

from

but

of

pro

Thus, you fee the Name of Grant is not used, ecause all of that Clan are either so called, or assume hat Name.

ANOTHER Thing is; that if this Man had decended in a direct Line, as eldest, from John, the remotest Ancestor, and John had been a Chief; he would only be called Mac Ean, leaving out all he intermediate Successions by way of Eminence.

THESE patronimical Names, at length, are made ne of, chiefly, in Writings, Receipts, Rentals, &c. and in ordinary Matters the Highlanders have, fometimes, other Distinctions, which also to some re pretty long.

eather

of the

dging

me of

where

ander livideo

Stran

mong

, they

felves

who

Clan

Dif

re re

ther

, Do

refor

fron

s and

; for

r Fa

r the

cient

s, til

ers o onall

) the

ald.

HUS

WHEN Numbers of them, composed from different Tribes, have been jointly employed in a Work, they have had arbitrary and temporary Denominations added to their Christian Names by their Overseers for the more ready Distinction; such as, the Place they came from; the Person who recommended them, some particular Vice, or from something remarkable in their Persons, &c. by which sictitious Names they have also been set down in the Books of their Employers.

It is a received Notion (but nothing can be more unjust) that the ordinary Highlanders are an indolent lazy People; I know the contrary by troublesome Experience; I say troublesome, because, in a certain Affair wherein I had Occasion to employ great Numbers of them, and gave them good Wages, the Solicitations of others for Employment were very earnest, and would hardly admit of a Denial; they are as willing as other People to mend their Way of Living, and when they have gained Strength from substantial Food, they work as well as others; but why should a People be branded with the Name of Idle in a Country, where there is generally no profitable Business for them to do?

HENCE

HENCE I have concluded, That if any Expedien could be found for their Employment, to their rea fonable Advantage, there would be little else wan ing to reform the Minds of the most savage among For my own Part, I do affure you, that never had the least Reason to complain of the Be haviour towards me of any of the ordinary High landers, or the Irish; but it wants a great deal that . I could truly fay as much of the Englishmen an lowland Scots that were employed in the fam Bufiness.

ONE of the Chiefs, at his own House, complain ed to me (but in a friendly Manner) as though I had seduced some of his Subjects from their Al legiance. He had Occasion for three or four of those of his Clan (whom I employed) about a Piece of Work at home, which they only could do, and when he was about to pay them for their Labour he offered them Six-pence a Day each (being great Wages, even if they had not been his Vassals) it Confideration he had taken them from other Employment; upon which they remonstrated, and faid he injured them in calling them from Sixteen-pence a Day to Six-pence; and I very well remember, he then told me, that if any of those People had, for merly, faid as much to their Chief, they would have been carried to the next Rock and precipitated.

THE Highlanders walk nimbly and upright, for that you will never fee among the meanest of them, in the most remote Parts, the clumfy stooping Gai of the French Paisans, or our own Country Fellows but on the contrary, a kind of Stateliness in the Midst of their Poverty; and this I think may be accounted for without much Difficulty.

THEY have a Pride in their Family, as almost every one is a Genealogist; they wear light Brogues, or Pumps, and are accustomed to skip over Rocks

nd I

onti

and

ime

eir

me

ner

d D

nov

arc

nder

ivat

es a

eat

ouni

Ic

at n

rvai

arcl

Bu

mp

er, s Sh

TH

ndr

ndre

TH

don

aid

ere

d to

T<sub>H</sub>

er ·

d I

r rea

want

ong

that

e Be

High

1 tha

an an

fam

plain

ougl

r Al

ur c

Piec

grea als) in Em-

faid

pence er, he

for-

nt, fo hem, Gail OWS:

n the

e ac-

moft

gues, Rocks and

d.

d Bogs; whereas, our Country-Labourers have fuch Pride, wear heavy clouted Shoes, and are ntinually dragging their Feet out of ploughed and or Clays; but those very Men, in a short ime after they are inlifted into the Army, erect eir Bodies, change their clownish Gait, and beme fmart Fellows; and indeed, the Soldiers in neral, after being a little accustomed to the Toils d Difficulties of the Country can, and do, to my nowledge, acquit themselves in their Winterarches, and other Hardships, as well as the Highnders; on the other hand it is observed, that the ivate Men of the independent Highland Compas are become less hardy than others from their eat Pay (as it is to them,) the best Lodging the untry affords, and warm Clothing.

I CANNOT forbear to tell you before I conclude, at many of those private Gentlemen have Gillys, or arch to carry their Provisions and Firelocks.

Bur as I have happened to touch upon thofe mpanies, it may not be amiss to go a little farer, for I think I have just room enough for it in s Sheet.

THERE are fix of them, viz. three of one ndred Men, and three of fixty each, in all four ndred and eighty Men.

THESE are, chiefly, Tenants to the Captains; done of the Centurions or Captains of and and and to strip his other Tenants of their best Plaids and to strip his Soldiers against a Review, to commit many other Abuses of his Trust.

THESE Captains are all of them vying with each er whose Company shall best perform the ma-Exercise; so that four hundred and eighty n, besides the Changes made among them, are

he (

ave

udd

his

Ί

ivil

hie

ver

ecre

f th

re b Cour he S

or the Built in v

T

rov

ly t

Cake

hort

IT

ike t inue

ull o vant

his fl

h all

f the fufficient to teach that Part of the military Dife pline throughout the whole Highlands.

I AM not a Prophet, nor the Son of a Prophet or even fecond fighted; yet I foresee that a Tim may come when the Institution of these Corps may be thought not to have been the best of Policy. am not unawares, it may be said they were raise in order to facilitate the Disarming, and they are useful to prevent the Stealing of Cattle; but bot those Reasons are not sufficient to alter my Opinio of their Continuance.

LETTER XX.

People, but the Commonality much other wise; one would hardly think, by their Faces, the were of the same Species, at least, of the same Country, which plainly proceeds from their be Food, Smoak at home, and Sun, Wind and Ramabroad, because the young Children have as go Features as any I have seen in other Parts of the Island.

I HAVE mentioned the Sun in this northern C mate as partly the Cause of their Disguise, forth (as I said before) in Summer the Heat, by Rese tion from the Rocks, is excessive; at the same in phe

ndfor

e fan s of t

Diff he Cold on the Tops of the Hills is so vast an Exreme as cannot be conceived by any but those who reme as cannot be conceived by any but those who wave felt the Difference, and know the Danger of so limited a Transition from one to the other; and his likewise has its Effect upon them.

The ordinary Natives are, for the most part, raise livil when they are kindly used, but most missivil when they are kindly used, but most missivil when much offended, and will hardly her forgive a Provocation, but seek some open or living the latter of the two.

A HIGHEAN AND Town as before mentioned in A HIGHLAND Town, as before mentioned, is omposed of a few Huts for Dwellings, with Barns nd Stables, and both the latter are of a more dilaced, fome one way, fome another, and at any Distance look like so many Heaps of Dirt; these rebuilt in Glens and Straths, which are the Corn Countries, near Rivers and Rivulets, and also on he Sides of Lakes where there is some arable Land or the Support of the Inhabitants.

But I am now to speak of the Manner in which in with the Spring of the Year. helower Order of Highlanders live; and shall beothe rovision of Oatmeal begins to fail, and for a Suply they bleed their Cattle and boil the Blood into lakes, which, together with a little Milk and a eir b nort Allowance of Oatmeal, is their Food. d Ra

IT is true, there are fmall Trouts, or fomething as go ke them, in some of the little Rivers, which connue in Holes among the Rocks, which are always rn C and of Water when the Stream is quite ceased for ant of Rain; these might be a Help to them in his starving Season, but I have had so little Notion hall my Journeys that they made those Fish a Part of their Diet, that I never once thought of them, as fuch, till this very Moment. It is likely the can't catch them for want of proper Tackle, bu I am fure they cannot be without them for want of Leifure. What may feem strange is; that they do not introduce Roots among them (as Potatoes, for the Purpose) but the Land they occupy is so very little, they think they cannot spare any Part of i from their Corn, and the Landlord's Demand of Rent in Kind is another Objection. You will perceive I am speaking only of the poor People in the interior Parts of the Mountains, for near the Coast, all round them, there are few confined to such diminutive Farms, and the most necessitous of all may share, upon Occasion, the Benefit of various Kinds of Shell-fish, only for seeking and fetching.

THEIR Cattle are much weakened by want of fufficient Food in the preceding Winter, and this immoderate Bleeding reduces them to so low a Plight, that in a Morning they cannot rise from the Ground, and several of the Inhabitants join to gether to help up each others Cows, &c.

In Summer the People remove to the Hills and dwell in much worse Huts than those they leave below; these are near the Spots of Grazing, and are called Shealings, scattered from one another as Occasion requires. Every one has his particular Space of Pasture, for which, if it be not a Part of his Farm, he pays, as I shall mention hereafter.

HERE they make their Butter and Cheese; by the way, I have seen some of the former with bluish Veins made, as I thought, by the Mixture of Smoke, not much unlike to Castile Soap, but some have said it was a Mixture of Sheep's Milk which gave a Part of it that Tincture of Blue.

When the Grazing fails the Highlanders return to their former Habitations, and the Cattle to pick

pie

be wi

the

fo

are

wit

har

of t

Sep.

by fwe

g00

in t ther

Lov

and,

prop

Ow

s in

I

Nun

ains

was

Wie

he I

er,

hey rge id

bout

nd t eak

y tl

1

the

bu

it o

y do

for

very

of i

d o

per

the

oaft.

h di

may

ind

nt o

this

W a

from

n to-

s and

cular

Part

here-

; by

with ire of fome

which

return

ttle to

pick

pick up their Sustenance among the Heath, as before.

AT other Times the Children share the Milk with the Calves, Lambs and Kids, for they Milk the Dams of them all, which keeps their Young b lean, that when fold in the low Country they are chiefly used, as they tell me, to make Soups withal; and when a Side of any one of these Kinds hangs up in our Market, the least disagreeable Part of the Sight is the Transparency of the Ribs.

ABOUT the latter End of August, or Beginning of September, the Cattle are brought into good Order by their Summer Feed, and the Beef is extremely fweet, and fucculent, which I suppose is owing, in good part, to their being reduced to fuch Poverty in the Spring, and made up again with new Flesh.

Now the Drovers collect their Herds and drive hem to Fairs and Markets on the Borders of the Lowlands, and fometimes to the North of England, and, in their Passage, they pay a certain Tribute, proportionable to the Number of Cattle, to the Owner of the Territory they pass through, which leave sin lieu of all Reckonings for Grazing.

I HAVE feveral times feen them driving great ner as Numbers of Cattle along the Sides of the Mounains at a great Distance, but never, except once, was near them. This was in a Time of Rain, by wide River where there was a Boat to ferry over he Drovers. The Cows were about fifty in Numer, and took the Water like Spaniels, and when bey were in, their Drivers made a hideous Cry to ge them forwards; this, they told me, they d to keep the Foremost of them from turning bout; for in that Case the rest would do the like, nd then they would be in Danger, especially the takest of them, to be driven away, and drowned the Torrent.

M

I THOUGHT

I THOUGHT it a very odd Sight to see so many Noses and Eyes just above Water, and nothing of them more to be seen; for they had no Horns, and upon the Land they appeared, in Size and Shape, like so many large Lincolnshire Calves.

t

1

p

th

th

ta

fo

th

fol

cal

ly,

paf

lyin

He

Me

the

the

of S

Wa

gins

its F

open

them

Dwe

preff

Hand

break

proce

fome

fame

in thu

IF

I SHALL speak of the Highland Harvest, that is, the Autumn, when I come to the Article of their Husbandry. But nothing is more deplorable, than the State of these People in Time of Winter.

THEY are in that Season often confined to their Glens, by swolen Rivers, Snow, or Ice, on the Paths, in the Sides of the Hills, which is accumulated by Drippings from the Springs above, and so by little and little formed into Knobs, like a Stick of Sugar-candy; only the Parts are not angular like those, but so uneven and slippery, no Foot can pass.

THEY have no Diversions to amuse them, but fit brooding in the Smoke, over the Fire, 'till them Legs and Thighs are scorched to an extraordinary Degree; and many have fore Eyes, and some are quite blind.

This long Continuance in the Smoke make them almost as black as Chimney-Sweepers; and when the Huts are not Water-tight, which is of ten the Case, the Rain that comes through the Roof, and mixes with the Sootiness of the Inside where all the Sticks look like Charcoal, falls in Drops like Ink. But, in this Circumstance, the Highlanders are not very solicitous about their outward Appearance.

To supply the want of Candles, when the have Occasion for more Light than is given by the Fire, they provide themselves with a Quantity of Sticks of Fir, the most resinous that can be procured; some of these are lighted and laid upon Stone, and, as the Light decays, they revive with fresh Fewel. But when they happen to be destitute of Fire, and none is to be got in the Neighbourhood, they produce it by rubbing Sticks together; but I don't recollect what Kind of Wood is fittest for that Purpose.

ny

of

ns,

ind

hat

of

ble,

er.

heir

the

ccu-

ove.

like

not

pery,

, bu

their

inary

e are

make

; and is of

h the

infide

alls if

e, the ir out

n the

by th itity 0

re pro

upon

vive

wit

If a Drift of Snow from the Mountains happens, and the same should be of any Continuance, they are thereby rendered compleatly Prisoners. In this Case the Snow being whirled from the Mountains and Hills, lodges in the Plains below, 'till sometimes it increases to a Height almost equal with the Tops of their Huts; but then it is soon dissolved for a little Space round them, which is caused by the Warmth of the Fire, Smoke, Family, and Cattle within.

Thus are they confined to a very narrow Compass, and, in the mean Time, if they have any outlying Cattle in the Hills, they are leaving the Heights, and returning Home; for by the same Means that the Snow is accumulated in the Glen, the Hills are cleared of the Incumbrance: But the Cattle are sometimes intercepted by the Depth of Snow, in the Plain or deep Hollows in their Way. In such Case, when the Wind's Drift begins to cease from the Wind's having a little spent its Fury, the People take the following Method to open a Communication.

If the Huts are at any Distance asunder, one of them begins at the Edge of the Snow next to his Dwelling, and waving his Body from Side to Side, presses forward, and squeezes it from him on either Hand; and if it be higher than his Head, he breaks down that Part with his Hands. Thus he proceeds, 'till he comes to another Hut, and when some of them are got together, they go on in the same Manner to open a Way for the Cattle; and in thus doing they relieve one another, when too wet and weary to proceed further, 'till the whole is compleated. Yet, notwithstanding all their En-

M 2

1

tl

tl

tl

bo

al

th

by

w

m

an

ap

at

per

Beg

but

En

thir

orig

the

they ling

thod

high

brou

Plair

Scen

I

I

deavours, their Cattle are sometimes lost.

As this may feem to you a little too extraordinary, and you will believe I never faw it, I shall assure you I had it from a Gentleman, who being nearly related to a Chief, has therefore a considerable Farm in the inner Highlands, and would not deceive me in a Fact, that does not recommend his Country; of which he is as jealous as any one I have known on this Side the Tweed.

A DRIFT of Snow, like that above described, was said to have been the Ruin of the Swedish Army, in the last Expedition of Charles the Twelsth.

Before I proceed to their Husbandry, I shall give you some Account of an Animal necessary to it; that is, their Horses, or rather (as they are called) Garrons.

THESE Horses, in Miniature, run wild among the Mountains; some of them, 'till they are eight or ten Years old, which renders them exceedingly restive and stubborn.

THERE be various Ways of catching them, according to the Nature of the Spot of Country, where they chiefly keep their Haunts. Sometimes they are hunted by Numbers of Highland Men into a Bog, in other Places they are driven up a steep Hill, where the nearest of the Pursuers endeavours to catch them by the hind Leg; and I have been told, that sometimes both Horse and Man have come tumbling down together.

In another Place they have been hunted from one to another, among the Heath and Rocks, 'till they have laid themselves down through Weariness and want of Breath.

THEY are so small, that a middle-fized Man must keep his Legs almost in Lines parallel to their Sides. Sides, when carried over the stony Ways; and it is almost incredible to those who have not seen it, how nimbly they skip with a heavy Rider among the Rocks, and large Moor-Stones, turning Zic Zac to such Places as are passable.

I THINK verily they all follow one another in the fame irregular Steps, because in those Ways there appears some little Smoothness, worn by their naked Hoofs, which is not any where else to be feen.

le

1-

li-

ll

ng

le

e-

is

I

d,

T-

١.

all

to

re

ng

ht

ly

m, ry,

les

en

0 2

en-

dI

nd

mc

till

ri-

lan

eir

es,

When I have been riding (or rather creeping) along at the Foot of a Mountain, I have discovered them by their Colour, which is mostly white, and by their Motion, which readily catches the Eye; when at the same Time they were so high above me, they seemed to be no bigger than a Lap-dog, and almost hanging over my Head. But what has appeared to me very extraordinary, is, that when, at other Times, I have passed near to 'em, I have perceived 'em to be (like some of our common Beggars in London) in ragged and tattered Coats, but full in Flesh; and that, even toward the latter End of Winter, when I think they could have nothing to feed upon, but Heath and rotten Leaves of Trees, if any of the latter were to be found.

THE Highlanders have a Tradition they came originally from Spain, by Breeders left there by the Spaniards in former Times; and they fay, they have been a great Number of Years in dwindling to their present diminutive Size.

I was one Day greatly diverted with the Method of taming these wild Hobbies.

In passing along a narrow Path on the Side of a high Hill among the Mountains, at length it brought me to a Part looking down into a little Plain; there I was at once presented with the Scene of a Highland Man beating one of these M 3 Garrons Garrons most unmercifully with a great Stick, and upon a stricter View I perceived the Man had tied a Rope, or something like it, about one of his hind Legs, as you may have seen a single Hog driven in England; and indeed in my Situation he did not seem so big. At the same Time the Horse was kicking and violently struggling, and sometimes the Garron was down, and sometimes the Highlander, and not seldom both of them together, but still the Man kept his Hold.

AFTER waiting a considerable Time to see the Event, tho' not so well pleased with the Precipice I stood upon, I found the Garron gave it up; and being persectly conquered for that Time, patiently suffered himself to be driven to a Hut not far from the Field of Battle.

I was defirous to ask the Highlander a Question or two, by the Help of my Guide, but there was no Means for me to get down but by falling; and when I came to a Part of the Hill, where I could descend to the Glen, I had but little Inclination to go back again, for I never by Choice made one Retrograde Step, when I was leaving the Mountains. But what is pretty strange, tho very true (by what Charm I know not) I have been well enough pleased to see them again, at my first Entrance to them in my Returns from England. And this has made my Wonder cease, that a Native should be so fond of such a Country.

THE Soil of the Corn Lands is in some Places fo shallow with rocky Ground beneath it, that a Plough is of no Manner of Use. This they dig up with a wooden Spade; for almost all their Implements for Husbandry, which in other Countries are made of Iron, or partly of that Metal, are in some Parts of the Highlands entirely made of

Wood;

W

H

ma

COI

Di

the

be Di

Hi lyi

Ćo

a

it (

for thi

Sp

der

to tov

thr

the

the

it:

of :

hor

Wa

Par

afk

elfe

Wood; fuch as the Spade, Plough-share, Harrow, Harness, and Bolts, and even Locks for Doors are made of Wood. By the Way, these Locks are contrived so artfully, by Notches made at unequal Distances withinside, that it is impossible to open them with any Thing but the wooden Keys that belong to them. But there would be no great Difficulty in opening the Wall of the Hut, as the Highlander did by the Portmanteau that he saw lying upon a Table; and nobody near it but his Companion.

Out! fays he; what Fool was this that put a Lock upon Leather; and immediately ripped it open with his Dirk.

and

tied

his

ven

did

orfe

me-

the her,

the

pice

and

ntly

rom

uef-

here

ing;

ere I

oice

ving tho'

nave

, at

rom eafe,

oun-

aces

at a

dig

Im-

tries e in

e of

od;

WHERE the Soil is deeper, they plough with four of their little Horses abreast; the Manner this:

Being thus ranked, they are divided by a small. Space into Pairs, and the Driver, or rather Leader of the Plough, having placed himself before them, holding the two innermost by their Heads, to keep the Couples asunder; he with his Face toward the Plough, goes backward, observing, through the Space between the Horses, the Way of the Plough-share.

WHEN I first saw this aukward Method, as I then thought it, I rid up to the Person who guided the Machine, to ask him some Questions concerning it: He spoke pretty good English, which made me conclude he was a Gentleman; and yet in Quality of a Proprietor and Conductor might, without Dif-honour, employ himself in such a Work.

My first Question was, whether that Method was common to the Highlands, or peculiar to that Part of the Country; and by Way of Answer, he asked me, if they ploughed otherwise any where else. Upon my further Enquiry, why the Man M 4 went backwards, he stopped, and very civilly informed me, that there were several small Rocks, were which I did not see, that had a little Part of them the just peeping on the Surface, and therefore it was more necessary his Servant should see and avoid em, by is, to guiding the Horses accordingly; or otherwise his have Plough might be spoiled by the Shock.

The Answer was satisfactory and convincing; they and I must here take Notice, that many other of Part their Methods are too well suited to their own Cir. than cumstances, and those of the Country, to be easily seed amended by such as undertake to deride them.

In the Western Highlands they still retain that his barbarous Custom (which I have not seen any where else) of drawing the Harrow by the Horse's hat Dock, without any Manner of Harnes's whatever, he l And when the Tail becomes too short for the Pur- he I pose, they lengthen it out with twisted Sticks ploy This unnatural Practice was formerly forbidden in with Ireland by Act of Parliament, as my Memory informs me, from Accounts I have formerly read of that Country; for being almost without Books, I would can have little other Help wherefrom to make her

WHEN a Burden is to be carried on Horseback, WHEN a Burden is to be carried on Horseback, ecay they use two Baskets, called Creels, one on each more Side of the Horfe; and if the Load be such as can't old in be divided, they put it into one of them, and counterbalance it with Stones in the other, so that one had half of the Horse's Burden is — I can't say unlass. necessary, becuse I don't see how they could well do onte otherwise in the Mountains.

THEIR Harvest is late in the Year, and there fore seldom got in dry, as the great Rains usually on-income on about the latter End of August, nor is the Disparate of the state Hovels they call Barns, which are mostly not fit

1

A

A

er,

ient

in- to keep out the bad Weather from above; and cks, were it not for the high Winds that pass through the Openings of the Sides in dry Weather, it was would, of Necessity, be quite spoiled. But as it by is, the Grain is often grown in the Sheaves, as I his have observed in a former Letter.

To the Lightness of the Oats, one might think ng; they contributed themselves, for if there be one of Part of their Ground that produces worse Grain Cir. than another, they reserve that, or Part of it, for asset, believing it will produce again as well in Quantity and Quality as the best, but whether in that his they are right or wrong, I can't determine. any ANOTHER Thing, besides the bad Weather ANOTHER Thing, besides the bad Weather ries hat retards their Harvest, is; they make it chiefly were he Work of the Women of the Family. Near he Lowlands I have known a Field of Corn to employ a Woman and a Girl for a Fortnight; which, in in with proper Help, might have been done in two days. And altho' the Owner might not well afford to employ many Hands, yet his own Labour would have prevented half the Risque of bad Weahake her at that uncertain Season.

An English Lady, who found herself, something

An English Lady, who found herself something ack, ecaying in her Health, and was advised to go mong the Hills, and drink Goat's Milk or Whey, can't old me lately, that seeing a Highlander basking at he Foot of a Hill in his full Dress, while his Wise and her Mother were hard at work in reaping the ontented to see her Daughter labour in that Maner, while her, Husband was only an idle Spector? And to this the Woman answered, that her on-in-Law was a Gentleman, and it would be as the bisparagement to him to do any such Work; and table at both she and her Daughter too were sufficiently honoured by the Alliance.

This An English Lady, who found herfelf fomething

M 5

to

THIS

THIS Instance I own has something particular in it, as such, but the Thing is very common, a la Palatine, among the middling Sort of People.

Not long ago, a French Officer, who was coming hither the Hill Way, to raife fome Recruits for the Dutch Service, met a Highland Man with a good Pair of Brogues on his Feet; and his Wife marching bare-foot after him.

This Indignity to the Sex raised the Frenchman's Anger to such a Degree, that he leaped from his Horse, and obliged the Fellow to take off the Shoes, and the Woman to put them on.

By this last Instance (not to trouble you with others) you may see it is not in their Harvest-work alone; they are something in the Palatine Way, with Respect to their Women.

THE Highlanders have a Notion that the Moon, in a clear Night, ripens their Corn much more than a Sun-shiny Day; for this they plead Experience, yet they can't say by what Rule they make the Comparison. But by this Opinion of theirs, I think they have little Knowledge of the Nature of those two Planets.

In larger Farms, belonging to Gentlemen of the Clan, where there are any Number of Women employed in Harvest-Work, they all keep Time together, by several barbarous Tones of the Voice; and stoop and rise together, as regularly as a Rank of Soldiers, when they ground their Arms. Sometimes they are incited to their Work by the Sound of a Bagpipe; and by either of these, they proceed with great Alacrity, it being disgraceful for any one to be out of Time with the Sickle. They use the same Tone, or a Piper, when they thicken the new woven Plaiding, instead of a Fulling-Mill.

THIS

up

tw

the

na

ing

Ni

rec

ing

Pi

ke

the

Hi

be

wh

int

Wa

Hi

and

the

no

COL

An

the

aln Hi

mu

Ca

or

hav

mi

Ki

ex

as .

This is done by fix or eight Women fitting upon the Ground, near some River or Rivulet, in two opposite Ranks, with the wet Cloth between them; their Coats are tucked up, and with their naked Feet they strike one against another's, keeping exact Time as abovementioned. And among Numbers of Men, employed in any Work that requires Strength and joint Labour, as the launching a large Boat, or the like, they must have the Piper to regulate their Time, as well as Usky, to keep up their Spirits in the Performance; for Pay they often have little, or none at all.

ular

n, a

. 0.1

was Re-

Man

d his enchfrom

f the

with

work Vay, loon.

more

xpe-

make rs,

re of

n of men

Time

oice:

Rank

ome-

ound

ceed

any

y use

ling

THIS

Nothing is more common than to hear the Highlanders boast how much their Country might be improved, and that it would produce double what it does at present, if better Husbandry were introduced among them. For my own Part, it was always the only Amusement I had among the Hills, to observe every minute Thing in my Way; and I do affure you, I don't remember to have feen the least Spot that would bear Corn uncultivated, not even upon the Sides of the Hills, where it could be no otherwise broke up, than with a Spade. And as for Manure to supply the Salts, and enrich: the Ground, they have hardly any. In Summer their Cattle are dispersed about the Sheelings, and almost all the rest of the Year in other Parts of the. Hills; and therefore all the Dung they can have, must be from the trifling Quantity made by the Cattle, while they are in the House. I never knew or heard of any Limestone, Chalk, or Marl they have in the Country; and if some of their Rocks might ferve for Lime-Stone in that Cafe, their Kilns, Carriage, and Fewel would render it fo expensive, it would be the same Thing to them, as if there was none. Their great Dependence is

(

fe H

fi

iı

tı

tł

b

R

pi

fp C

ex

tir

clo

or,

to

ou

WO

his oth

Hi

inc

Na

Fee

wh:

be I

the

tert

hav

the

fay,

upon the Nitre of the Snow; and they lament the Disappointment, if it does not fall early in the Seafon. Yet I have known, in some, a great Inclination to Improvement, and shall only instance in a very small Matter, which perhaps may be thought too inconfiderable to mention.

Nor far from Fort William, I have feen Women with a little Horfe-Dung brought upon their Backs, in Creels or Baskets, from that Garrison; and on their Knees spreading it with their Hands upon the Land, and even breaking the Balls, that every Part of the little Spot might have its due Proportion.

THESE Women have several Times brought me Hay to the Fort, which was made from Grass cut with a Knife, by the Way-side; and from one I have bought two or three Pen'noth; from another, the Purchase has been a Groat; but Sixpen'noth was a most considerable Bargain.

At their Return from the Hay-market they carried away the Dung of my Stable (which was one End of a dwelling Hut) in Manner abovementioned.

SPEAKING of Grass and Hay, it comes to my Remembrance, that in passing through a Space between the Mountains, not far from Keppoch in Lochabar, I observed, in the Hollow (though too narrow to admit much of the Sun) a greater Quantity of Grass than I remembered to have seen in any such Spot in the inner Parts of the Highlands. It was in the Month of August when it was grown rank and slagged pretty much, and therefore I was induced to ask why the Owner did not cut it? To this I was answered, it never had been mowed, but was left every Year as natural Hay for the Cattle in Winter, that is, to lie upon the Ground

Sea-

ncli

e in

be

Wo-

heir

fon:

ands

that

Pro-

me

cut

ne I

ano-

Six-

car-

one

enti-

my pace

poch

ough

feen

ligh-

was nere-

not been

Hay

n the

Ground like Litter, and (according to their Defcription) the Cows routed for it in the Snow, like Hogs in a Dunghill: But the People have no Barns fit to contain a Quantity of Hay, and it would be impossible to secure it in Mows from the tempestuous eddy Winds, which would soon carry it over the Mountains: Besides, it could not well be made, by reason of Rains and want of Sun, and therefore they think it best to let it lie, as it does, with the Roots in the Ground.

THE Advantage of Enclosures is a mighty Topick with the Highlanders, though they cannot spare for Grass one Inch of Land that will bear Corn, or if they could, it would be a much more expensive Way of grazing their Cattle, than letting them run, as they do, in the Hills; but Enclosures, fimply as such, do not better the Soil, or, if they might be supposed to be an Advantage to it, where is the Highland Tenant that can lay out ten Shillings for that Purpose? And what would he be gainer by it in the End, but to have his Rent raised, or his Farm divided with some other? Or, lastly, where are the Number of Highlanders that would patiently fuffer fuch an inconvenient Innovation. For my Part, I think Nature has fufficiently enclosed their Lands by the Feet of the furrounding Mountains. Now, after what has been faid, where can this Improvement

Bur it seems, they had rather you should think them ignorant, lazy, or any thing else, than entertain a bad Opinion of their Country. But I have dwelt too long upon this Head.

THEIR Rent is chiefly paid in Kind, that is to fay, great Part of it in several Species arising from the Product of the Farm; such as Barley, Oatmeal.

meal, and what they call Customs, as Sheep, Lambs, Poultry, Butter, &c. and the Remainder, if any, is paid in Money, or an Addition of some one of the aforementioned Species, if Money be wanting.

The Gentlemen, who are near Relations of the Chief, hold pretty large Farms, if the Estate will allow it, perhaps twenty or thirty Pounds a Year, and they again, generally, parcel them out to under Tenants in small Portions. Hence it comes, that by such a Division of an old Farm (Part of an upper Tenant's Holding) suppose, among eight Persons, each of them pays an eighth Part of every Thing, even to the Fraction of a Capon, which cannot, in the Nature of it be paid in Kind, but the Value of it is cast in with the rest of the Rent, and, notwithstanding the abovementioned Customs are placed in an upper Tenant's Rental, yet they properly belong to the Chief for the Maintenance of the Family in Provisions.

EVERY Year, after the Harvest, the Sheriff of the County, or his Deputy, together with a Jury of landed Men, sets a Rate upon Corn Provisions, and the Custom of the Country regulates the rest.

THE Sheriff's Regulation for the Year is called the Feers-price, and ferves for a Standard whereby to determine every thing relating to Rents and Bargains; so that if the Tenant is not provided with all the Species he is to pay, then, that which is wanting may be converted into Money, or something else with Certainty.

Before I conclude this Letter, I shall take Notice of one thing, which, at first, I thought pretty extraordinary, and that is: If any landed Man refuses or fails to pay the King's Tax; then, by a Warrant from the Civil Magistrate, a propor-

tionable

ti

hi

CC

th

ra

lo

wi

Q

to tain

per Pen

very lefs,

V

Hig

genu

P, er,

ne

be

of

ate

s a

out

it rm ofe, hth

nt's for

f of Jury ons, of.

lled

reby

and ided

hich

me-

take

ught

hen, portionable Number of Soldiers are quartered upon him, with, fometimes, a Commission-Officer to command them; all whom he must maintain till the Cess is fully discharged: This is a Penalty for his Default, even though he had not the Means to raise Money in all that time, and let it be ever so long, the Tax, in the End, is still the same. You will not doubt that the Men, thus living upon free Quarters, use the best Interest with their Officers to be sent on such Parties.

LETTER XXI.

YOU will, it is likely, think it strange, that many of the Highland Tenants are to maintain a Family upon a Farm of twelve Merks, Scots, per Annum, which is thirteen Shillings and four Pence sterling, with, perhaps, a Cow or two, or a very few Sheep or Goats; but often the Rent is less, and the Cattle are wanting.

WHAT follows is a Specimen taken out of a Highland Rent-roll, and I do affure you it is genuine, and not the least by many.

Englifb. Stones. 1b. oz. Bolls. B. P. Lip Oatmeal. Butter. Donald mac Oil vic ille Challum Murdoch mae illi Cheist -- Duncan mae illi Phadrick

I SHALL here give you a Computation of the first Article, besides which there are seven more of the same Farm and Rent, as you may perceive by the Fraction of a Sheep in

12 5/61	A and	I and
¥ 1	7,010
~~	40.	=
9	0 4 9 and 0 0 4 and	. 0
The Butter, three Pounds two Ounces,	Oatmeal, 2. Bushels, 1. Peck, 3. Lippys and 1/4 at 6 d. per Peck — Sheep, one Eighth and one Sixteenth, at 2.5.	The yearly Rent of the Farm is

In

Coordinate the semimetric to the semimetri

In some Rentals you may see seven or eight Columns of various Species of Rent, or more, wiz. Money, Barley, Oatmeal, Sheep, Lambs, Butter, Cheese, Capons, & But every Tenant shees not pay all these Kinds, though many of them the greatest Part.

THE Landlord has, by Law, an Hypothick, or Right of Pledge, with respect to the Corn, for so much as the current Year's Rent, and may, and often does, by himself or his Baily, see it reaped to his own Use; or if that is not done, he may seize it in the Market or any where else; but this last Privilege of the Landlord does not extend to the Crop or Rent of any former Year.

THE Poverty of the Tenants has rendered it unformary for the Chief, or Laird, to free some of hem every Year from all Arrears of Rent; this is impossed, upon an Average, to be about one Year n five of the whole Estate.

Ir the Tenant is to hire his Grazing in the Hills, to takes it by Soumes. A Soume is as much Grass is will maintain four Sheep; eight Sheep are equal to a Cow and a half, or forty Goats, but I do not emember how much is paid for every Soume. The Reason of this Disproportion between the Goats and Sheep is, that after the Sheep have eat the Pasture bare, the Herbs, as Thyme, &c. that re left behind, are of little or no Value, except or the Brouzing of Goats.

THE Laird's Income is computed by Chalders of listual, as they are called: A Chalder is fixteen salls of Corn, each Boll containing about fix of our suffiels, and therefore, when any one speaks of the yearly Value of such a Laird's Estate, he tells out it is so many Chalders; but the Measure varies mething in different Parts of the Country.

there generally arises a Contention among the felt Vassals, which of them shall have the following WHEN a Son is born to the Chief of a Family Vassals, which of them shall have the fostering of the Child, when it is taken from the Nurse; and by this Means, fuch Differences are sometime fomented, as are hardly ever after thoroughly re this conciled.

Bo

hen

ect

M

nak

tter

owi

T

Ba

B

G

G

G

Gi

TI

Ti

lin,

lum ular

fthe

IN

rofo

noug

Bu

THE happy Man, who fucceeds in his Suit, ever after call'd the Foster-father; and his Chil dren the Foster-brothers and Sisters of the youn Laird.

This they reckon not only endears them their Chief, and greatly strengthens their Interes with him, but gives them a great deal of Confi deration among their Fellow-Vasfals; and the Foster-brother having the same Education as the young Chief, may, besides that, in Time, becom his Hanchman, or perhaps be promoted to the Office under the old Patriarch himself, if a Vacano should happen. Or otherwise, by their Interest obtain Orders and a Benefice.

THIS Officer is a Sort of Secretary, and is to b ready, upon all Occasions, to venture his Life i Defence of his Master; and at Drinking-bouts h stands behind his Seat, at his Haunch, from whend his Title is derived, and watches the Conversation to fee if any one offends his Patron.

An English Officer being in Company with certain Chieftain, and several other Highland Ger tlemen, near Killichumen, had an Argument wit the Great Man; and both being well warm'd wit Usky, at last the Dispute grew very hot.

A Youth who was Hanchman, not understand ing one Word of English, imagined his Chief w infulted, and thereupon drew his Piftol from h Side, and fnap'd it at the Officer's Head; but the Pistol miss'd Fire, otherwise it is more than prote C babl mily able he might have suffered Death from the Hand that little Vermin.

Ingo But it is very disagreeable to an Englishman over and Bottle, with the Highlanders, to see every one of time hem have his Gilly; that is, his Servant standing yer shind him all the while, let what will be the Sub-ect of Conversation.

WHEN a Chief goes a Journey in the Hills, or Chil nakes a formal Visit to an Equal, he is said to be youn stended by all; or most Part of the Officers folwing, viz.

The Hanchman. Bard. Bladier. Gilli-more. Gilli-casflue, Gilly-comstraine, Gilly-trushanarnish,

iit,

m t tere

Conf

d th

as th

ecom

tha

canc

teref

to b ife i uts h hend

fation

with

Gen

wit

d wit

m h

out th

babl

The Piper, And laftly, The Piper's Gilly, before described. His Poet. Spokefman. Carries his Broad-Sword. Carries him, when on Foot, over the Fords. Leads his Horse in rough and dangerous Ways. The Baggage-Man. Who being a Gentleman, I should have named him fooner.

Who carries the Bag-pipe.

THERE are, likewise, some Gentlemen, near of in, who bear him Company; and besides, a lumber of the common Sort, who have no partiular Employment, but follow him only to partake the Cheer.

I MUST own that all these Attendants, and the rstand rofound Respect they pay, must be flattering ef wa lough; though the Equipage has none of the best ppearance.

Bur this State may appear to footh the Pride of n prote Chief to a vast Degree, if the Declaration of one of them was fincere; who at Dinner, before good deal of Company, English as well as So myself being one of the Number, affirm'd, that his Estate was free from Incumbrances, and none of his own, and he was then put to chuseh tween that and the Estate of the Duke of Newcast supposing it to be thirty thousand Pounds a Yes (as fomebody faid it was) he would make Choice the former, with the following belonging to before the other without it. Now his Estate mig be about five hundred Pounds a Year.

But this Pride is pretty costly; for as his Frie is to feed all thefe Attendants, so it comes to own Turn to be at a like, or perhaps greate Expence, when the Visit is repaid. For they a generally attended in Proportion to the Strength the Clan; and by this Intercourse they very mu hurt one another in their Circumstances.

By what has been faid, you may know, in Par how necessary the Rent call'd Customs is to the Family of a Highland Chief.

HERE I must ask a Space for those two Sons

Apollo; the Bard and the Piper.

THE Bard is skill'd in the Genealogy of all the Highland Families, fometimes Preceptor to the young Laird; celebrates in Irifb Verse the Origin of the Tribe, the famous warlike Actions of the fuccessive Heads, and fings his own Lyricks as a Opiate to the Chief, when indifposed for Sleep but Poets are not equally efteem'd and honour'd all Countries. I happen'd to be a Witness of the Dishonour done to the Muse, at the House of or of the Chiefs; where two of these Bards were at a good Distance, at the lower End of a lor Table, with a Parcel of Highlanders of no extrao dinary Appearance, over a Cop of Ale. Por Inspiration! Check Bogsbigs a have not be

THE

TH

our

ed

ion

AF

the

dil

ine

e o

edec

th

oun

t it

his

on 1

bing

dhi

y e I н

Pi

N :

lks 1

w nost

T i

a P

, in

tick

Att

ntio

His

mei

nful

y th

; 2

at

THEY were not ask'd to drink a Glass of Wine our Table, though the whole Company at it coned only of the Great Man, one of his near Reions, and myself.

efore

Sco

that

d w afe b vcaft

Yes

oice

to mig

Frie

to l reate

ey a gth

mu

Par

to the

ons

all th

to th

rigin

of th

as a

Sleep

ur'd i

of th

of or ere f

a lon

ctra01

Poo

THE

AFTER some little Time, the Chief order'd one them to sing me a Highland Song. The Bard dily obey'd, and with a hoarse Voice, and in a me of sew various Notes, began, as I was told, to of his own Lyricks; and when he had proded to the sourth or sisth Stanza, I perceived, the Names of several Persons, Glens, and ountains, which I had known or heard of before, it it was an Account of some Clan Battle. But his going on, the Chief, (who piques himself on his School-Learning) at some particular Pase, bid him cease, and cry'd out to me, There's bing like that in Virgil or Homer. I bow'd, and thim I believed so. This you may believe was yedifying and delightful.

HAVE had Occasion before to say something of Piper, but not as an Officer of the Houshold. In a Morning, while the Chief is dressing, he ks backward and forward, close under the Win-without Doors; playing on his Bag-Pipe, with soft upright Attitude and majestick Stride.

It is a Proverb in Scotland, viz. The stately Step a Piper. When required, he plays at Meals, in an Evening, is to divert the Guests with his stick, when the Chief has Company with him; Attendance in a Journey, or at a Visit, I have ntioned before.

dis Gilly holds the Pipe, 'till he begins, and the ment he has done with the Instrument, he diffully throws it down upon the Ground, as being the passive Means of conveying his Skill to the and not a proper Weight for him to carry or at other Times. But for a contrary Reason,

his

Thi Voi

as l

he he

V

Ente

re:

nd Land

tter

vas . T

it, a

hree he I

ies 1

noth

lofer

hem

ally

ntire

IF

pon

reac

aten

orwa

very

rien

Guns

orce

hen

his Gilly fnatches it up, which is, that the Pip may not fuffer Indignity from his Neglect.

THE Captain of one of the Highland Companie entertain'd me fome Time ago at Sterling, with a Account of a Dispute that happen'd in his Cor about Precedency. This Officer among the religionship that received Orders to add a Drum to his Bagpip that as a more military Instrument; for the Pipe was be retain'd, because the Highland Men could hard be brought to march without it. Now the Conta between the Drummer and the Piper arose about the Post of Honour, and at length the Contention grew exceeding hot, which the Captain havin Notice of, he call'd them both before him, and, the End, decided the Matter in Favour of the Drum; whereupon the Piper remonstrated ve warmly. Ads Wunds, Sir, fays he, and shall little Rascal that beats upon a Sheep-skin, tak the rig Haund of me, that am a Musician?

There are in the Mountains both red Deer at Roes, but neither of them in any great Number that ever I could find. The red Deer are larg and keep their Haunts in the highest Mountain bem but the Roe is less than our fallow Deer, and page own takes, in some Measure, of the Nature of t Hare; having no Fat about the Flesh, and hidi in the Clefts of Rocks, and other Hollows, fro the Sight of Pursuers. These keep chiefly in t

Woods.

A PACK of Hounds, like that of Action, int fame metaphorical Sense, would soon devour the Master. But, supposing they could easily be mai tain'd, they would be of no Use, it being imp fible for them to hunt over fuch Rocks and n ged steep Declivities; or if they could do th their Cry in those open Hills would foon frig all the Deer out of that Part of the Count

This was the Effect of one fingle Hound, whose Voice I have often heard in the Dead of the Night

Voice I have often heard in the Dead of the Night as I lay in Bed) ecchoing among the Mountains; the was kept by an English Gentleman, at one of the Barracks, and it was loudly complain'd of by ome of the Lairds, as being prejudicial to their officers.

When a folemn Hunting is refolved on, for the Intertainment of Relations and Friends, the Haunt onto the Deer being known, a Number of the Vassals re summon'd, who readily obey by Inclination; and are besides obliged by the Tenure of their lands, of which one Article is, that they shall then the Master at his Huntings. This, I think, as Part of the ancient Vassalage in England.

The Chief convenes what Numbers he thinks thall the trip of the Strength of his Clan; perhaps the right of the Strength of his Clan; perhaps the right of the Sight of them, first of one Side, then of the strength of one Side, then of the strength of the Sight of them, first of one Side, then of he Hill, and as they advance upwards, the Deer let at les the Sight of them, first of one Side, then of mother; and they still, as they mount, get into large loser Order, 'till in the End he is enclosed by main hem in a small Circle, and there they hack him and part own with their broad Swords. And they generally do it so dexterously, as to preserve the Hide hidinatire.

If the Chace be in a Wood, which is mostly in the Declivity of a rocky Hill, the Tenants of the themselves as much as they can in a Rank of the sight of themselves as much as they can in a Rank of themselves as much as they can in a Rank of themselves as much as they can in a Rank of themselves as much as they can in a Rank of themselves as much as they can in a Rank of themselves as much as they can in a Rank of themselves as much as they can in a Rank of the side of themselves as much as they can in a Rank of the side of the read themselves as much as they can, in a Rank in t atending upwards; and march, or rather crawler the property of the proper

Counti Th

to and

gre I

Size

of i

beca

0 ' fyo

Bird

t wi

uspe

hey or t

bou

T

vithi

Clan

noo

Crue

e, wo f

T

Henb

me

Vadl

ne A

efuse

ack

TH

nem

times turn back upon the Huntsmen, and are taken

WHAT I have been faying on this Head, is only to give you some Taste of the Highland Hunting for the Hills, as they are various in their Form pose the Pack. The first of the two Paragraph Colonext above, relates only to such a Little require different Dispositions of the Men that comthing in the Figure of a Cone; and the other you fee, is the Side of a Hill, which is cloathed with Wood, and this last is more particularly the Shell ter of the Roe. A further Detail I think would be to become tedious.

WHEN the Chief would have a Deer only for his Houshold, the Game-Keeper, and one of two more, are fent into the Hills, with Guns and Oatmeal for their Provision; where they often li Night after Night, to wait an Opportunity of pro viding Venison for the Family. This has been done feveral Times for me, but always without Effect.

THE Foxes and wild Cats (or Catamountain are both very large in their Kind, and always ap pear to have fed plentifully. They do the High landers much more Hurt in their Poultry, & than they yield them Profit by their Furs; and the Eagles do them more Mischief, than both the other together. It was one of their chief Complaints when they were difarmed in the Year 1725, tha they were deprived of the Means to destroy those noxious Animals; and that a great Increase them must necessarily follow the Want of the Fire-Arms.

Or the eatable Part of the feathered Kind pecu liar to the Mountains, is, First, the Cobberkely which is fometimes called a wild Turky, but no like it, otherwise than in Size. This is very seldon to be met with (being an Inhabitant of very high and unfrequented Hills) and is therefore esteemed a great Rarity for the Table.

ker

only

nd the other

laints

, tha

afe o

their

pecu

erkely

ut no

feldon

NEXT is the black Cock, which resembles, in Size and Shape, a Pheasant, but is black and shineing like a Raven; but the Hen is not, in Shape or colour, much unlike to a Hen-Pheasant.

And lastly, the Tormican is near about the Size of the Moor-Fowl (or Groust) but of a lighter this colour; which turns almost white in Winter. These I am told feed chiefly upon the tender Tops of the Fir-Branches, which I am apt to believe; because the Taste of them has something tending Turpentine, tho' not disagreeable. It is said, fyou throw a Stone, so as to fall beyond it, the Bird is thereby so much amused or daunted, that twill not rise 'till you are very near; but I have is proposed this to be a Sort of Conundrum, signifying beer hey are too shy to suffer an Approach near enough or that Purpose, like what they tell the Children bout the Salt and the Bird.

THE Tribes will not fuffer Strangers to fettle within their Precinct, or even those of another Clan to enjoy any Possession among them; but will bon constrain them to quit their Pretensions, by cruelty to their Persons. ruelty to their Persons, or Mischief to their Cate, or other Property. Of this there happened wo flagrant Instances, within a few Years pass'd.

THE first was as follows: Gordon, Laird of lenbucket, had been invested by the D. of G. in me Lands in Badenoch, by Virtue, I think, of a ladset or Mortgage. These Lands lay among ne Macphersons, but the Tenants of that Name efused to pay the Rent to the new Landlord, or acknowledge him as fuch.

THIS Refusal put him upon the Means to eject em by Law; whereupon the Tenants came to a Resolution

a Resolution to put an End to his Suit and new Set-

1 q

th

en

R

be ag

WO

ma

De

rati afte

.

Foo

goes

like

well ting

it is

read

ter,

I

the 1

make

Ican

is ori Diffe

from Princ

tlement, in the Manner following.

FIVE or fix of them, young Fellows, the Sons of Gentlemen, entered the Door of his Hut; and in fawning Words told him, they were forry and Dispute had happened. That they were then re folved to acknowledge him as their immediate Landlord, and would regularly pay him their Rent. At the same Time they begged he would withdraw his Process, and they hoped they should be agreeable to him for the future. All this while they were almost imperceptibly drawing neare and nearer to his Bed-side, on which he was sit ting, in order to prevent his defending himse (as they knew him to be a Man of distinguished Courage) and then fell fuddenly on him; fom cutting him with their Dirks, and others plunging them into his Body. This was perpetrated within Sight of the Banack of Rutbven.

I CAN'T forbear to tell you how this Butcher ended, with Respect both to him and those tread erous Villains.

HE, with a Multitude of Wounds upon him made a Shift, in the Bustle, to reach down he broad Sword from the Tester of his Bed, which was very low; and with it he drove all the Assault before him. And afterwards from the Duke Abhorrence of so vile a Fact, and with the Assault ane of the Troops, they were driven out of the Country, and forced to fly to foreign Parts.

By the Way, the Duke claims the Right Chief to the Macphersons; as he is, in Fact, the Gordons.

THE other Example is of a Minister, who have being a small Farm assigned him, and, upon his Entran Know to it, some of the Clan, in the Dead of the Night generated five Balls through his Hut, which all lodg in his in his Bed; but he happening to be absent that Night, escaped their Barbarity, but was forced to quit the Country. Of this, he made to me an affecting Complaint.

THIS Kind of Cruelty, I think, arises from their Dread of Innovations, and the Notion they entertain, that they have a Kind of hereditary Right to their Farms; and that none of them are to be dispossessed, unless for some great Transgression against their Chief, in which Case every Individual would confent to their Expulsion.

HAVING lately mentioned the Dirk, I think it may not be unfeafonable here, to give you a short Description of that dangerous Weapon; and the rather, as I may have Occasion to speak of it hereafter.

Set-

Sons

and

any

re

diate thei

roul

noul while eare

s fit

mfe

ifha

fom

ngin

vithi

cher

reach

hin

vn h

Maffin

of the

ght

et,

THE Blade is straight, and generally above a Foot long, the Back near an Inch thick, the Point goes off like a Tuck, and the Handle is fomething like that of a Sickle. They pretend they can't well do without it, as being useful to them in cutting Wood, and upon many other Occasions; but it is a concealed Mischief hid under the Plaid, ready for fecret stabbing, and, in a close Encounwhic ter, there is no Defence against it.

I AM far from thinking there is any Thing in Duke the Nature of a Highlander, as such, that should Assis make him cruel and remorfeless; on the contrary, Icannot but be of Opinion, that Nature in general is originally the same in all Mankind, and that the Difference between Country and Country arifes from Education and Example. And from this Principle I conclude, that even a Hottentot Child hoh being brought into England, before he had any knowledge, might, by a virtuous Education, and Night generous Example, become as much an Englishman lodg in his Heart, as any Native whatever.

N 2

Bur

Bur that the Highlanders, for the most Part are cruel, is beyond Difpute; tho' all Clans are not alike mercilefs. In general they have no Generofity enough to give Quarter to an Enemy that falls in their Power; or do they feem to have any Remorfe at shedding Blood without Neces fity.

This appeared a few Years ago, with Respect to a Party of Soldiers, confifting of a Serjeant and twelve Men, who were fent into Lochaber after fome Cows, that were faid to be stolen.

THE Soldiers, with their Arms flung, were carelesly marching along by the Side of a Lake where only one Man could pass in Front; and in this Circumstance fell into an Ambuscade of great Number of Highland Men, Vassals of a attainted Chief, who was in Exile, when his Clar was accused of the Theft.

THESE were lodged in a Hollow on the Side of a rocky Hill; and tho' they were themselves ou of all Danger, or might have descended and dif armed fo small a Party, yet they chose rather with their Fire-Arms, as it were, wantonly to pick them off, almost one by one, 'till they had destroyed them all, except two, who took to their Heels, and waded a small River into the Territor of another Chief, where they were fafe from fur being ther Pursuit. For the Chiefs (like Princes upor plain the Continent, whose Dominions lie contiguous riage do not invade each others Boundaries, while the are in Peace and Friendship with one another, but In demand Redress of Wrongs; and whosoever should being do otherwise, would commit an Offence, in which flurd every Tribe is interested, besides the lasting Few Litte it might create between the two neighbouring After Clans.

than

of t

Cov

nn

biel

nec A

of A

Men

ome

had t heir ven

Part.

s are

not

nemy

have

lecef

fped

were ake

nd in of a of an

Clan

ide o

ly to

y had

their

P. S. One of these Soldiers, who in his Flight had fixed his Bayonet, turned about at the Edge of the Water, upon the Highland Man; who, for greater Speed, had no other Arms than his broad Sword, and at the same Time, as 'tis said, the Soldier at once fent his Bayonet and a Ball through his Body.

LETTER XXII.

DUT the Rancour of some of those People in another Case was yet more extraordinary han the Instance in my last Letter, as the Objects of their Malice could not feem, even to the utmost course course course of Condition to diffunnoy them. This was after the Battle of Glenbiels, in the Rebellion of 1719, before mentiather ned.

As the Troops were marching, from the Field their of Action to a Place of Encampment, some of the Men, who were dangerously wounded, after their being carried some little Way on Horseback, company blained they could no longer bear that uneasy Carriage, and begged they might be left behind 'till some more gentle Conveyance could be provided.

In about three or sour Hours (the little Army being incamped) Parties were sent to them with Hurdles that had been made to serve as a Kind of Feur Hours, but when they arrived they sound to their suring Monishment, that those poor miserable Creatures and been stabbed with Dirks in twenty Places of of Action to a Place of Encampment, some of the ad been stabbed with Dirks in twenty Places of heir Legs and Arms as well as their Bodies, and wen those that were dead had been used in the

fame

fame favage Manner. This I have been affured of by several Officers who were in the Battle, Scott as well as English.

I MAKE no manner of Doubt you will take what is to follow to be an odd Transition, i. e. from the Cruelty of the ordinary Highlanders to Dialect and Orthography, although you have met with some others not more consistent, but then you will recollect what I said in my first Epistle; that I should not confine myself to Method, but give you my Account just as the several Parts of the Subject should occur from my Memorandums and Memory.

STRANGE Encomiums I have heard from the Natives upon the Language of their Country, although it be but a Corruption of the Irish Tongue, and if you could believe some of them, it is so expressive that it wants only to be better known to become universal. But as for myself, who can only judge of it by the Ear, it seems to me to be very harsh in Sound, like the Welsh, and altogether as guttural, which last, you know, is a Quality, long since banished all the polite Languages in Europe.

IT likewise seems to me, as if the Natives affected to call it Erst, as though it were a Language peculiar to their Country; but an Irish Gentleman who never before was in Scotland, and made, with me, a highland Tour, was perfectly understood, even by the common People; and several of the Lairds took me aside to ask me who he was, for that they never heard their Language spoken in such Purity before. This Gentleman told me, that he found the Dialect to vary as much in different Parts of the Country as in any two Counties of England.

THERE are very few who can write the Character, of which the Alphabet is as follows.

m

n

ľ

S

u

1 of C

Spe

Au

the

cial

kno

1 ters

Lea

fpe

an

Scots

what the alect with will nat I you Suband the al-

excan e to altois a

ives

an-

rib

and

aly

fe-

who

age

man

as

any rac-

3

Larin Derivation And	Pronounced
a lan e laget a nal s	a Ailim.
b ill siegi vituoriav c	Beith.
c parto C lo all'ac	cold Coll.
a thort see a Web	and without a Bern, Inches, 13 ort Stock 1	e Eadha.
f m mod il C alculi inc they have to en and	Gort.
a in president of a	b Uath.
wear I of Trouse di	AND THE PERSON NAMED IN COLUMN TWO Luis.
m Ži	m Muin.
Markey Shot multi-53	Nuin.
	chequano Tarin or o'lai to fair profit and to a	Deithbor
D .	Ruïs.
	Suil.
an mak to tonsity	of the city of Tinne Forestill but whom the Contract Con	The state of the s

In writing English they seem to have no Rule of Orthography, and they profess they think good Spelling of no great use, but if they read English Authors, I wonder their Memory does not retain the Figures, or Forms of common Words, especially Monosyllables; but it may, for aught I know, be Affectation.

isavel on soon, and bare out Attendants to

I HAVE frequently received Letters from Ministers and lay Gentlemen, both esteemed for their Learning in dead Languages, that have been so ill spelt, I thought I might have expected better from an ordinary Woman in England. As for one single

N 4

Example;

Example; for Heirs (of Latin Derivation) Aire repeated feveral times in the same Letter; and further, one Word was often variously spelt in the

THE Highland Dress consists of a Bonnet made of Thrum without a Brim, a short Coat, a Waish coat longer by five or fix Inches, fhort Stocking and Brogues or Pumps without Heels. By the way they cut Holes in their Brogues, though new made, to let out the Water when they have far to go and Rivers to pass; this they do to preserve their Feet from galling.

FEW besides Gentlemen wear the Trowze, that is, the Breeches and Stockings all of one Piece and drawn on together; over this Habit they wear a Plaid, which is usually three Yards long and two Breadths wide, and the whole Garb is made of chequered Tartin or Plaiding; This, with the Sword and Piftol, is called a full Drefs, and to a well proportioned Man with any tolerable Air, it part makes an agreeable Figure; but this you have feen a wi makes an agreeable Figure; but this you have feen a win London, and it is chiefly their Mode of dreffing when they are in the Lowlands, or when they make a neighbouring Visit, or go any where on Horseback; but when those among them who travel on Foot, and have not Attendants to carry erio them over the Waters, they vary it into the Quelt, which is a Manner I am about to describe.

THE common Habit of the ordinary Highlands is far from being acceptable to the Eye; with them a small Part of the Plaid, which is not so large as the former, is fet in Folds and girt round the Waste to make of it a short Petticoat that reaches half Way down the Thigh, and the rest is brought he cover the Shoulders, and then fastened before, being low the Neck, often with a Fork, and fometimes with a Bodkin, or sharpened Piece of Stick, fo that they make pretty near the Appearance of the ary

poor

po

G

Ra for oft kin

the

the

rou

Qu

but the

Th Th

whi

tanı infe

is ve 7

A

mer cipio

of a

Plac

eadi

erri

void

are I

erf

ilthy

Airs

fur-

the nade

aift-

ing

Way

ade.

and

Feet

that

and

ar a two

to a

poor

poor Women in London when they bring their Gowns over their Heads to shelter them from the Rain. In this way of wearing the Plaid, they have fometimes nothing elfe to cover them, and are often barefoot; but some I have feen shod with a kind of Pumps made out of a raw Cow-hide with the Hair turned outward, which being ill made, the Wearer's Feet looked something like those of a rough-footed Hen or Pigeon: These are called Quarrants, and are not only offensive to the Sight but intolerable to the Smell of those who are near them. The Stocking rifes no higher than the Thick of the Calf, and from the Middle of the Thigh to the Middle of the Leg is a naked Space. which being exposed to all Weathers, becomes tanned and freckled, and the Joint being mostly infected with the Country Distemper, the whole e of the s very difagreeable to the Eye.

THIS Dress is called the Quelt, and for the most to a This Dreis is called the Quell, and for the molt in, it part they wear the Petticoat so very short, that in seen a windy Day, going up a Hill, or stooping, the Infing decency of it is plainly discovered.

A HIGHLAND Gentleman told me, one Day merrily, as we were speaking of a dangerous Prewho tipice we had passed over together; that a Lady sarry of a noble Family had complained to him very sould, eriously; That as she was going over the same place with a Gilly, who was upon an upper Path lead ending her Horse with a long String the was so

Place with a Gilly, who was upon an upper Path lands eading her Horse with a long String, she was so them errified with the Sight of the Abys, that, to ge as woid it, she was forced to look up towards the are Highlander all the Way long. I HAVE observed before, that the Plaid serves he he ordinary People for a Cloak by Day, and Bedines Perpiration, that no one Day can free it from the constant of the sary Appearance, when the Plaid salls from the f the ary Appearance, when the Plaid falls from the

N 5

Shoulder, or otherwife requires to be readjusted, while you are talking with them, toss it over again, as some People do the Knots of their Wigs, which conveys the Offence in Whisfs that are intolerable, of this they seem not to be sensible, for it is often done only to give themselves Airs.

VARIOUS Reasons are given both for and against the Highland Drefs. It is urged against it, that it distinguishes the Natives as a Body of People diftinct and separate from the rest of the Subjects of Great Britain, and, thereby, is one Cause of their narrow Adherence among themselves to the Exclufion of all the rest of the Kingdom; but the Part of the Habit chiefly objected to is the Plaid for Mantle) which, they fay, is calculated for the Encouragement of an idle Life in lying about upon the Heath in the Day-time, instead of following fome lawful Employment; that it ferves to cover them in the Night when they lie in wait among the Mountains to commit their Robberies and De predations, and is composed of such Colours as a together in the Mass so nearly resemble the Heat on which they lie, that it is hardly to be diffin guished from it until one is so near them as t be within their Power, if they have any evil la tention.

THAT it renders them ready at a Moment's Warning to join in any Rebellion, as they carr continually their Tents about them.

AND, lastly, it was thought necessary in Ireland to suppress that Habit by Act of Parliament for the above Reasons, and no Complaint, for the wan of it, now remains among the Mountaineers of that Country.

On the other hand it is alledged; the Dressi most convenient to those who, with no ill Design are obliged to travel from one Part to another upo their lawful Occasions, viz.

THAT

R

ß

th

to

ev

W

ger

Pa

the

the

the

con

or .

que

whi

Cov

7 reac

Gro

spar

Dre

babl

chaf

or S mate

leave

is the

the ]

what

grina

man,

B

T

I

A

THAT they would not be so free to skip over the Rocks and Bogs with Breeches, as they are in the hort Petticoat.

ed,

in,

ich

ble,

ten

inft

at it

dif-

ts of

heir

clu-

Part

(or

En

upon

wing

cover

nong

De

is al

Ieath

iftin

as t

l In

nent'

carr

relan

or th wan

ers o

resi

efign

upo

THA

THAT it would be greatly incommodious, to those who are frequently to wade through Waters, to wear Breeches, which must be taken off upon every such Occurrence, or would not only gall the Wearer, but render it very unhealthful and dangerous to their Limbs to be constantly wet in that Part of the Body, especially in Winter-time when they might be frozen.

AND with respect to the Plaid, in particular, the Distance between one Place of Shelter and another are often too great to be reached before Night comes on, and being intercepted by sudden Floods, or hindered by other Impediments, they are frequently obliged to lie all night in the Hills, in which Case they must perish were it not for the Covering they carry with them.

THAT even if they should be so fortunate as to reach some hospitable Hut, they must lie upon the Ground uncovered, there being nothing to be spared from the Family for that Purpose.

And to conclude, a few Shillings will buy this Dress for an ordinary Highlander, who very probably might hardly ever be in Condition to purchase a Lowland Suit, though of the coarsest Cloth or Stuff, fit to keep him warm in that cold Climate.

I SHALL determine nothing in this Dispute, but leave you to judge which of these two Reasonings is the most cogent.

THE whole People are fond and tenacious of the Highland Cloathing, as you may believe by what is here to follow.

Being, in a wet Season, upon one of my Peregrinations, accompanied by a Highland Gentleman, who was one of the Clan through which I

was

was passing; I observed the Women to be in great Anger with him about something that I did not understand; at length, I asked him wherein he had offended them? Upon this Question he laughed, and told me his great Coat was the Cause of their Wrath, and that their Reproach was, that he could not be contented with the Garb of his Ancestors, but was degenerated into a Lowlander, and condescended to follow their unmanly Fashions.

THE wretched Appearance of the poor Highland Women that come to this Town has been mentioned; and here I shall step out of the way to give you a notable Instance of Frugality in one

1

1

1

a

t

h

h

(

to

P

k

to

m

th

th

of a higher Rank.

THERE is a Laird's Lady, about a Mile from one of the Highland Garrisons, who is often seen from the Ramparts on Sunday Mornings coming barefoot to the Kirk with her Maid carrying the Stockings and Shoes after her. She stops at the Foot of a certain Rock, that serves her for a Seat not far from the Hovel they call a Church, and there she puts them on, and in her Return to the same Place, she prepares to go home barefoot as she came, thus reversing the old Mosaick Precept What English Squire was ever blessed with such a Housewise!

But this Instance, though true to my Knowledge, I have thought something extraordinary, because the Highlanders are shy of exposing their Condition to Strangers, especially the English and more particularly to a Number of Officers to whom they are generally desirous to make their best Appearance. But in my Journies, when they did not expect to be observed by any but their own Country People, I have twice surprized the Laire and his Lady without Shoes or Stockings, a good Way from Home, in cold Weather. The Kirk, abovementioned, brings to my Memory a Curiosity of the same kind.

Ar a Place in Badenoch, called Ilan Dou, as I passed by a Hut of Turf something larger than ordinary, but taking little Notice of it, I was called upon by one of the Company to stop and observe its Figure, which proved to be the Form of a Cross: This occasioned several Jokes from a Libertine and a Presbyterian upon the Highland Cathedral, and the Nonjurors, in all which, they perfectly agreed.

THE ordinary Girls wear nothing upon their Heads until they are married or have a Child, except sometimes, a Fillet of red or blue coarse Cloth, of which they are very proud; but often their Hair hangs down over the Forehead like that of a wild

Colt.

great

ot une had

ghed.

their

at he

Incef

, and

High

been

e Way

n one

from n feer

ming

g the

at the

Seat

, and

to the

as the

ecept

nch :

now-

inary,

their

iglifb.

ers to their

n they

r own

Laire

g000

Kirk,

Curio-

ns.

Is they wear Stockings, which is very rare, they lay them in Plaits one above another from the Ancle up to the Calf, to make their Legs appear, as near as they can, in the Form of a Cylinder; but I think I have feen fomething like this among the poor German Refugee Women, and the Moorifb Men in London. By the way, these Girls, if they have no Pretensions to Family (as many of them have, though in Rags) they are vain of being with Child by a Gentleman, and when he makes Love to one of them, she will plead her Excuse, in saying, he undervalues himself, and, that she is a poor Girl not worth his Trouble, or something to that purpose.

This easy Compliance proceeds chiefly from a kind of Ambition established by Opinion and Custom; for, as Gentility is of all things esteemed the most valuable in the Notion of those People, so this kind of Commerce renders the poor plebeian Girl, in some measure, superior to her former Equals.

FROM thenceforward she becomes proud, and they grow envious of her being singled out from among

M

W

L

m

Su

be

th

m

W

B

T

fic

ne

B

I

W

of

m

of

In

ar

u

u

at fr

ir

le

n

9 th

tl

among them, to receive the Honour of a Gentleman's particular Notice; but otherwise they are generally far from being immodest, and as Modesty is the Capital feminine Virtue, in that, they may be a Reproach to some in higher Circumstances, who have lost that decent and indearing Quality.

You know I should not venture to talk in this manner at where Modesty would be decry'd as unpolite and troublesome, and I and my slender Party ridiculed, and borne down by a vast Majority. I shall here give you a Sample of the Wretchedness of some of them.

In one of my northern Journies, where I travelled in a good deal of Company, there was among the rest a Scots Baronet, who is a Captain in the Army, and does not seem (at least to me) to affect Concealment of his Country's Disadvantage. This Gentleman, at our Inn, when none but he and I were together, examined the Maid Servant about her Way of living, and she told him (as he interpreted it to me) that she never was in a Bed in her Life, or ever took off her Cloaths while they would hang together; but in this last, I think, she was too general, for I am pretty sure she was forced to pull them off now and then for her own Quiet. But I must go a little further.

ONE Half of the Hut, by Partition, was taken up with the Field-bed of the principal Person among us, and therefore the Man and his Wise very courteously offered to sit up and leave their Bed to the Baronet and me (for the rest of the Company were dispersed about in Barns,) but we could not resolve to accept the Favour for certain Reasons, but chose rather to lie upon the Benches with our Saddles for Pillows.

Being in a high Part of the Country, the Night was excessive cold with some Snow upon the Mountains, Mountains, though in August, and the next Day was the hotest that, I think, I ever felt in my Life.

THE violent Heat of the Sun among the Rocks made my new Companions (Natives of the Hovel) such voracious Canibals that I was obliged to lag behind, and fet my Servant to take Vengeance on them for the plentiful Repast they were making at my Expence, and without my Confent, and by which I was told they were become as red as Blood. But I should have let you know, that when the Table, over Night, was spread with such Provifions as were carried with us, our chief Man would needs have the Lady of the House to grace the Board, and it fell to my Lot to fit next to her till I had loaded her Plate, and bid her go and fup with her Husband, for I foresaw the Consequence of our Conjunction.

itle-

are

efty

may

ces,

this

de-

my

vaft

the

tra-

Was

ap-

to ad-

nen

the

the

ver

ner

in

am

nd

tle

en

on ife

115

he

ve

in

es

ne

ne

THE young Children of the ordinary Highlanders are miserable Objects indeed, and are mostly over-run with that Distemper, which some of the old Men are hardly ever freed of from their Infancy. I have often feen them come out from the Huts early in a cold Morning, flark naked, and fquat themselves down (if I might decently use the Comparison) like Dogs on a Dunghill, upon a certain Occasion after Confinement. And at other times they have but little to defend them from the Inclemencies of the Weather in so cold a Climate; nor are the Children of some Gentlemen in much better Condition, being strangely neglected 'till they are fix or feven Years old; this one might know by a Saying I have often heard, viz. That a Gentleman's Bearns are to be distinguished by their speaking English.

I was invited one Day to dine with a Laird, not very far within the Hills, and observing, about the House, an English Soldier, whom I had often

feen

feen before, in this Town, I took an Opportunity to ask him feveral Questions. This Man was a Bird-catcher, and employ'd by the Laird to provide him with small Birds for the Exercise of his Hawks.

AMONG other things, he told me, that for three or four Days after his first coming, he had observed in the Kitchen (an Out-house Hovel) a Parcel of dirty Children half naked, whom he took to belong to some poor Tenant, 'till, at last, he found they were a Part of the Family; but although these were so little regarded, the young Laird, about the Age of sourteen, was going to the University, and the eldest Daughter, about sixteen, sat with us at Table, clean, and genteelly dressed.

But perhaps it may seem, that in this and other Observations of the like kind, whenever I have met with one particular Fact, I would make it thought to be general. I do assure you it is not so; but when I have known any thing to be common, I have endeavoured to illustrate it by some particular Example. Indeed, there is hardly any thing of this sort, that I have mentioned, can be so general as to be free from all Exception, it is Justification enough to me if the Matter be generally known to answer my Description, or what I have related of it. But I think an Apology of this Nature to you is needless.

It is impossible for me, from my own Know-ledge, to give you an Account of the ordinary way of Living of those Gentlemen, because, when any of us (the English) are invited to their Houses there is always an Appearance of Plenty to Excess, and it has been often said, they will ransack all their Tenants rather than we should think meanly of their Housekeeping; but I have heard it from many whom they have employ'd, and perhaps

and

hac

Per

Di

Sta

fev

and

fon

hav

the

in A

tict

in

Bu

am

Me

in

Pai

get agr

the

it v

two

Sta

fe&

For

not

Ge

eve

vex

Ge

Di

lan

inf

diti

cor

ity

1

0-

his

for

ad

) a

he

ſŧ,

al-

ng

to

ut

lly

er

ve

it

0;

n,

u-

ng

e-

a-

vn

ed

to

Way

ny

re

nd

ir

ly

m ps

ad

had little regard to their Observations as inferior People; that, although they have been attended at Dinner by five or six Servants, yet, with all that State, they have often dined upon Oatmeal varied several ways, pickled Herrings, or other such cheap and indifferent Diet; but though I could not personally know their ordinary Bill of Fare, yet I have had Occasion to observe they do not live in the cleanest manner, though some of them, when in England, affect the utmost Nicety in that Particular.

A FRIEND of mine told me some time ago, that, in his Journey hither, he stopped to bait at the Bull Inn at Stamford, which, I think, is one among the best in England. He soon received a Message, by the Landlord, from two Gentlemen in the next Room, who were going from these Parts to London, proposing they might all dine together; this he readily consented to, as being more agreeable to him than dining alone.

As they fat at Table waiting for Dinner, one of them found fault with the Table-cloth, and faid, it was not clean; there was, it feems, a Spot or two upon it, which he told them was only the Stain of Claret, that could not, at once, be perfeelly washed out; then they wiped their Knives, forks and Plates with the Napkins, and, in short, nothing was clean enough for them, and this to a Gentleman, who is, himself, extremely nice in every thing of that Nature; at last, says my Friend, vexed at the impertinent Farce, as he called it, Gentlemen, fays he, I am vastly pleased at your Diflikes, as I am now upon my Journey to Scotland, where I have never yet been, because I must infer I shall there find these Things in better Condition. Troth (fays one of them) ye canno want it.

I AM forry for fuch Instances whereby a Fop, conscious of the Fallacy, exposes his Country, and brings brings a Ridicule upon other Gentlemen of Modelly and good Sense, to serve a momentary Vanity, if not to give Affronts by fuch gross Impositions.

I know very well what my Friend thinks of Dw them now, and perhaps, by their Means, of many

- fail i motoral

others who do not deferve it.

THERE is one Gasconade of the People here-Hig abouts which is extraordinary; they are often of boasting of the great Hospitality of the Highlanders Lin to Strangers; for my own Part, I do not remember to have received one Invitation from them, but Lin when it was with an apparent View to their own ders Interest; on the contrary, I have several times been unasked to eat, though there was nothing to be purchased within many Miles of the Place.

Bur one particular Instance was most inhospitable.

Being benighted; foon after it was dark, I made up to the House of one to whom I was well known, and though I had five or fix Miles to travel over a dangerous rugged Way, wherein there was no other Shelter to be expected; yet, upon the Trampling of my Horses before the House, the Lights went out in the Twinkling of an Eye, and Deafness, at once, seized the whole Family.

THE latter Part of what I have writ of this Letter relates, chiefly, to Gentlemen who inhabit the Hills not far from the Borders of the Lowlands, or not very far from the Sea, or Communication with it by Lakes, as indeed most Part of the Houses of the Chiefs of Clans are in one or other of these Situa-

THESE are sometimes built with Stone and Lime, and though not large, except some few, are pretty commodious, at least, with Comparison to those that are built in the manner of the Huts, of which, if any one has a Room above, it is, by way of Eminence, called a lofted House; but in the inner

Par

that go 2

I

the

cafi

ord

hon

Pro

I

Hig

Ì

tion

Lal

wir

tair

fon

twe

cal

hav

per

. ]

ry fre

def

desty Part of the Mountains there are no Stone Buildings y, if that I know of, except the Barracks; and one may many I HAVE, indeed, heard of one that was intended to be built with Stone in a remote Part of the here- Highlands, from whence the Laird fent a Number often of Highlanders with Horses to setch a Quantity of Inders Lime from the Borders; but in their way Home there happened to fall a good deal of Rain, and the Lime began to crackle and smoke: The Highlanown ders not thinking, of all Things, Water would occasion Fire, threw it all into a shallow Rivulet in order to quench it, before they proceeded further homeward; and this, they fay, put an End to the Project.

Bur I take this to be a Lowland Sneer upon the Highlanders, though not improbable.

imes

ng to

ofpi-

k, I

well

tra-

here

the

the

and

Let-

t the s, or

with

fthe

tua-

me,

etty

hofe ich.

ner Part

I HAVE mentioned, above, among other Situations of Stone-built Houses, some that are near to Lakes, which have a Communication with the Sea.

THERE are, in feveral Parts of the Highlands, winding Hollows between the Feet of the Mountains whereinto the Sea flows, of which Hollows ome are navigable for Ships of Burden for ten or twenty Miles together, inland: Those the Natives calls Loughs or Lakes, although they are falt, and have a Flux and Reflux, and therefore, more properly should be called Arms of the Sea.

I could not but think this Explanation necessary to distinguish those Waters from the standing fresh water Lakes, which I have endeavoured to Room, if the owner of he a Woman, the Wi-describe in a former Letter.

CHANGE CHANG

Do

mer The

boo

Irela 7

and,

Dru

chie

that felve

I

for

part

Mid

Plou

Mod

was

Neg

oft

Heap

blace

mov

heir

oufly

Hoof

COI

prefe

real

The

oreg

ton

LETTER XXIII.

HEN a young Couple are married, for the first Night, the Company keep Possession of the Dwelling-house or Hut, and send the Bride-groom and Bride to a Barn or Out-house, giving them Straw, Heath, or Fearn for a Bed, with Blankets for their Covering; and then they make merry, and dance to the Piper all the Night long.

SOON after the Wedding-day, the new-married Woman fets herfelf about spinning her winding Sheet, and a Husband that should fell or pawn it, is esteem'd, among all Men, one of the most profigate.

Ar ayoung Highlander's first setting up for himfelf, if he be of any Consideration, he goes about among his near Relations and Friends, and from one he begs a Cow, from another a Sheep; a Third gives him Seed to sow his Land, and so on, 'till he has procured for himself a tolerable Stock for a Beginner. This they call Thigging.

AFTER the Death of any one, not in the lowest Circumstances, the Friends and Acquaintance of the Deceased assemble to keep the near Relations Company the first Night; and they dance, as if it were at a Wedding, 'till the next Morring, tho'all the Time the Corps lies before them in the same Room. If the deceased be a Woman, the Widower leads up the first Dance; if a Man, the Widow. But this Highland Custom I knew, to my Disturbance, within less than a Quarter of a Mile of Edinburgh, before I had been among the Mountains. It was upon the Death of a Smith, next Door to my Lodgings, who was a Highlander.

THE upper Class hire Women to moan and lament at the Funeral of their nearest Relations. These Women cover their Heads with a small Piece of Cloth, mostly Green, and every now and then break out into a hideous Howl and Ho-bo-bo-boboo; as I have often heard is done in some Parts of Ireland.

THIS Part of the Ceremony is called a Coronoch, the and, generally speaking, is the Cause of much Drunkenness attended with its Concomitants, mischievous Rencounters, and bloody Broils; for all make that have Arms in their Possession, accountre themfelves with them upon those Occasions.

offer-

giv-

with

ng.

rofli-

west

e of

ions

if it

all

ame

Wi-

Wi-

my Mile

ounains

I HAVE made mention of their Funeral Piles in ding former Letter; but I had once Occasion to take articular Notice of a Heap of Stones, near the Middle of a small Piece of arable Land. The Plough was carefully guided as near to it as possible, him and the Pile, being like others I had feen upon the Moors, I asked, by an Interpreter, whether there was a Rock beneath it, but being answered in the from ; a Negative, I further enquired the Reasons why they oft fo much Ground, and did not remove the on, of the much Ground, and did not remove the leap? To this I had for Answer, it was a Burialplace, and they deemed it a Kind of Sacrilege to remove one fingle Stone, and that the Children, from heir Infancy, were taught the same Veneration for t. Thus a Parcel of loofe Stones are more religipully preferved among them, than, with us, the offly Monuments in Westminster-Abby; and thence could not but conclude, that the Inclination to referve the Remains and Memory of the Dead, is reater with those People, than it is among us. The Highlanders, even here in this Town, cannot prego the Practice of the Hills, in raising Heaps of ones over fuch as have lost their Lives by some Misfortune; hor:

Misfortune; for in Oliver's Fort, no fooner was the Body of an Officer removed from the Place when he fell in a Duel, than they fet about the raifing fuch a Heap of Stones upon the Spot where he had lain. So much for Mountain Monuments.

THOSE who are faid to have the second Sight deal chiefly in Deaths, and it is often faid to be Gift peculiar to some Families; that is, the Chea has, with some, been handed down from Father to Son. Yet I must confess they seldom fail to be right when they reveal their Predictions; for they take the surest Method to prophetise, which is to divulg the Oracle after the Fact. Of this I had once at Opportunity to convince a Highland Gentleman from whom, I thought, might have been expected more Reason, and less Prejudice, than to be gull' by fuch Impostors.

THE Matter was this: A poor Highlander wa drown'd in wading a Ford, and his Body afterward put into a small Barn. Not many Days after, the Laird endeavouring to pass the same Water, which was hard by his own House, his Horse gave Way and he was likewise drown'd, and carried into the fame Hut. Soon after, a Story began to pass for current, that fuch-a-one the fecond-fighted, fore told, when the Body of the poor Man lay expose to View, that it would not be long before a greate Man than he should lie in the same Place. This was all that was pretended, and that too was after wards found to be an Invention arising from the Circumstance of two Persons, at a little Distance Time, being drown'd in the same Ford, and bot their Bodies carried to one Hovel; which indee stood fingly, near the Place where they were bot stopp'd by the Rocks.

mon among the Highlanders, and they have few ral old Prophecies, handed down to them by Trad

tion

tio

tha

of .

at

bro

did

like

har

eat

Suc

H

vera

2 N

of 1

the

to b mar

his

laug

thei

ther

and to fu

taph

whi

grat

dies

or A

they

Vell

cide

who thin

in fo

care

1

the fine there shall come, when they shall measure out the Cloth ifing of London with a long Pole.

had

ight

be

Chea

er te

ight

tak

vulg

ce ar

man ecte

gull'

Wa

ward th

vhic Way

o th

s fo

fore

pofe

reate

Thi

after

a th

ice o

bot

ndee

bot

com feve

Fradi

tion

As the little Manufacture they had was Cloth, so at the Time, when this pretended Prophecy was broach'd, they esteem'd that the only Riches, and did not know of the Treasure of Lombard-street, like the Country Boy, that sed poorly, and work'd hard; who said, if he were a Gentleman, he would eat fat Bacon, and swing all Day long upon Gaffer Such-a-one's Yate.

A CERTAIN Laird, whom I have mentioned feveral Times before, tho' not by Name, is frequenty heard to affirm, that, at the Instant he was born, a Number of Swords that hung up in the Hall of the Mansion-house, leap'd of themselves out of the Scabbards, in Token, I suppose, that he was to be a mighty Man in Arms, and this vain Romance feems to be believed by the lower Order of his Followers; and I believe there are many that laugh at it in Secret, who dare not publickly declare their Disbelief. But because the Miracle has hitherto only portended the Command of his Clan and an independent Company, he has endeavour'd to supply the Defeat of the Presage by his own Epitaph, altogether as romantick, in his own Kirk; which he still lives to read, whenever he pleases to gratify his Vanity with the Sight of it.

THEY have an odd Notion relating to dead Bodies that are to be transported over Rivers, Lakes, or Arms of the Sea. Before they are put on Board, they appraise and ascertain the Value of the Boat or Vessel, believing, if that be neglected, some Accident will happen, to endanger the Lives of those who are embarked in it; but, upon Recollection, I think some of our Seamen entertain this idle Fancy in some Measure. For I have heard, they don't care for a Voyage with a Corps on Board, as tho' it would be the Occasion of tempestuous Weather, the AND lastly; for I shall not trouble you longer with Things of this Kind, which are without Number. The Highlanders are of Opinion, that it is in enverthe Power of certain Enchantresses to prevent the state A& of Procreation; but I am rather inclined to be selved lieve it was originally a Male Artistice among them and to serve as an Excuse, in case of Imbecility.

to serve as an Excuse, in case of Imbecility.

The Marriages of the Chiefs and Chieftains ime are, for the most Part, confin'd to the Circuit of the teep Highlands; and they generally endeavour to B strengthen their Clan, by what they call powerful and Alliances. But I must not be understood to include Cou any of the prime Nobility of Scotland, of whom you there are some Chiefs of Clans. Their Dignits are there are some Chiefs of Clans. Their Dignity on places them quite out of the Reach of any Thing out have said, or have to say, in relation to the Heads of Highland Families, who reside constantly with them, and govern them in Person. As to the lower ach Class of Gentry, and the ordinary People, they generally marry in the Clan, whereto they appear the tain.

ALL this may be political enough, i. e. the Chief heir to have Regard to the Highlands in general, and his Brollowers, to their own particular Tribe or Familiated ly, in order to preserve themselves a distinct People but this continues them in a narrow Way of think aveing, with Respect to the rest of Mankind, and also the prevents that Addition to the Circumstances of the whole, or a Part of the Highlands, which might be made by Marriages of Women of Fortune in the Lowlands. This, in Time, might have a good rib Effect, by producing an Union instead of that Coldness, to say no more, which subsists at present between the Natives of those two Parts of Scotlands as if they bore no relation one to another; considered as Men and Subjects of the same Kingdom, and even the same Part of it. Yet I must here (and by the

the

den

her the by) take Notice of one thing, wherein they here the by) take Notice of one thing, wherein they agree perfectly agree, which Experience has taught me to union mow perfectly well; and that is, to grudge and is in my those of the South Part of the Island any protective itable Employment among them, altho' they themobe elves are well received, and equally encouraged them and employed with the Natives in that Part of the Kingdom. And I think further, they have sometains mes more than their Share, if they must needs if the eep up such a partial and invidious Distinction.

To But to return to the Marriages of the Higherful anders: Perhaps, after what has been said of the clude Country, it may be asked, what Lowland Woman would care to lead a Life attended with so many Inspection of the lead of the sum of the House, but, in their Opinion, an ill the sum of the House, but, in their Opinion, an ill the sum of the House, but, in their Opinion, an ill the sum of the House, but, in their Opinion, an ill the sum of the House, but, in their Opinion, an ill the sum of the House, but, in their Opinion, an ill the sum of the House, but, in their Opinion, an ill the sum of the House, but, in their Opinion, an ill the sum of the House, but, in their Opinion, and sum of the House, but, in their Opinion, and sum of the Sum of the Lowland Smith? making no Diffinction between an Edinburgh Goldsmith and a Highland Blacksmith.

THEY thought it was a Disgrace, of which every one partook, that he should match himself with a Tradefman's Daughter; a Lowland Woman, and no Way derived from the Tribe.

THIS proved in the End to be a fatal Marriage; but as it is uncertain, and therefore would be unjust for me to determine, in a Matter whereof I have not a perfect Knowledge, I can't conclude which of the two, the Husband or the Wife, was the Occasion of the sad Catastrophe. I shall only say what I know; viz. That an old rough Highlander, of fixty at leaft, was imprisoned at one of the Barracks. while I was there, for accepting Favours from the She was to be fent to Edinburgh to answer the Accusation, and while she was preparing to go, and the Messenger waiting without Doors, to conduct her thither, she died.

THE Clan whereto the above-mentioned Tribe belongs, is the only one I have heard of, which is without a Chief; that is, being divided into Family lies, under feveral Chieftains, without any particular Patriarch of the whole Name. And this is a great Reproach, as may appear from an Affair tha fell out at my Table in the Highlands, between one of that Name and a Cameron. The Provocation given by the Latter, was-Name your Chief .- The Return to it, at once, was, -You are a Fool. They went out the next Morning, but having early No tice of it, I fent a small Party of Soldiers after them; which in all Probability prevented some bar barous Mischief that might have ensued. For the Chiefless Highlander, who is himself a petty Chief tain, was going to the Place appointed, with a fmal Sword and Pistol; whereas the Cameron (an old Man) took with him only his Broad-Sword, ac cording to Agreement.

WHEN

nd

hey

crib

V

e is

roa

D

arry

rom

rm

T

ave

houg

To

ut o

om

fput

his

oot,

rms

ert,

So

evio

iend

irks,

em;

is M

pro

ch a

ness

ots a nan WHEN all was over, and I had, at least, seemh. In a large which I feemed to think but flightly, were to one of the lat Clan, the greatest of all Provocations.

In a Bargain between two Highlanders, each of the latest and the latest and the latest and la hem wets the Ball of his Thumb with his Mouth, and then joining them together, it is esteemed a very binding Act; but in more solemn Engagements have hey take an Oath in a Manner, which I shall dehich tribe in some succeeding Letter.

When any one of them is armed at all Points, what is loaded with a Target, a Fire-lock, a heavy soad Sword, a Pistol Stock, and Lock of Iron, acks.

Dirks and besides all these some of them

Dirk; and besides all these, some of them arry a Sort of Knife, which they call a Skeen-ocles, fiwer on its being concealed in the Sleeve near the om its being concealed in the Sleeve near the m-pit.

This last is more peculiar to the Robbers, who acks,

o go, con-

ribe ch is n one

after

e bar

or the

Chief

in old

d, ac

VHEN

ave done Mischief with it; when they were bought to have been effectually disarmed.

To see a Highlander thus furnished out, might amigut one in mind of Merry Andrew, when he comes ticus om behind the Curtain in a warlike Manner, to find the Doctor's Right to his Stage. He is then that his own individual Person a whole Company of the stage. oot, being loaded with one of every Species of the rms and Trophies of a Regiment; viz. a Pike, Hal-The Sometimes, when a Company of them have and agreed to be peaceably and rt, Firelock, Sword, Bayonet, Colours and Drum. lendly over their U/ky, they have drawn their irks, and struck them all into the Table before em; as who should fay, nothing but Peace at fmal is Meeting, no private Stabbing to Night. promiscuous Companies, at great Assemblies, ch as Fairs, Burials, &c. where much Drunkness prevails, there scarcely ever fails to be great ots and much Mischief done among them.

To shoot at a Mark, they lay themselves all along behind some Stone or Hillock, on which they rest their Piece, and are a long while taking their Aim; by which Means they can destroy any one unfeen, on whom they would wreak their Malice or Revenge.

WHEN in Sight of the Enemy, they endeavour to possess themselves of the Higher Ground, as knowing they give their Fire more effectually by their Situation one above another, being without Discipline; and also, that they afterwards descend on the Enemy with greater Force, having in fome Measure put it out of their Power to recede in the first Onset.

AFTER their first Fire (I need not have faid their first, for they rarely stand a second) they throw away their Fire-Arms and Plaids which incumbe them, and make their Attack with their Swords but if repuls'd, they feldom or never rally, but re turn to their Habitations.

If they happen to engage in a Plain, when the expect the Enemy's Fire, they throw themselve down on the Ground. They had ever a Dread of the Cavalry, and did not care to engage them, the but few in Number.

I CHANCED to be in Company one Time with a old Highlander, as I pass'd over the Plain of Killi cranky, where the Battle was fought between Kin William's Troops, commanded by General Mackey and the Rebel Highlanders, under the Earl of Dun

WHEN we came to the great Stone that is rais about the Middle of the Flat, upon the Spot when Dundee fell, we stopp'd, and there he describ'd me, in his Manner, the Order and End of the Ba tle, of which I shall now give you the Substance only; for he was long in telling his Story.

HE told me that Mackay extended his Line

whic

W

P

H

of

and

the fee

the

ma

efca

tha

he

the

who afte

tire

goo

badl

of t

which

the ( Clan

him.

they

ther

he fe

of R any ]

Meff

lo on

near,

pair t

Oat-1

U

C

F

which was only two deep, the whole Length of the Plain; defigning, as he supposed, to surround the Highlanders, if they should descend from the Side of an opposite Hill, where they were posted.

all

hey

heir

une or

our

y by hou

cend

ome

1 the

their

TOW

nber

ords

it re

the

felve

ad o

, tho

itha

Killi

Kin

ackay

Dun

rais

when

b'd t

e Bat

ftano

Line

which

THAT after the first Firing, the Rebels came down fix or feven deep, to attack the King's Troops, and their Rear pushing on their Front, they, by their Weight, charged through and through those feeble Files, and having broke them, made with their Broad Swords a most cruel Carnage; and many others who expected no Quarter, in order to escape the Highland Fury, threw themselves into that rapid River (the Tay) and were drown'd. But Corry he faid there was an English Regiment, who kept themselves entire (the only one that was there) whom the Highlanders did not care to attack; and after the Slaughter was over, and the Enemy retired, that fingle Corps march'd from the Field in good Order.

He further told me, there were some few Horse badly mounted; who, by the Strength and Weight of the Highland Files, were push'd into the River, which was close in their Rear.

On any fudden Alarm and Danger of Diffress to the Chief, he gives Notice of it throughout his own Clan; and to such others as are in Alliance with him. This is done by fending a Signal, which they call the Fiery Cross, being two Sticks tied together transversly, and burnt at the Ends; with this, he fends Directions in Writing, to fignify the Place of Rendezvous. And when the principal Person of any Place has received this Token, he dismisses the Messenger, and sends it forward to another; and on, 'till all have received the Intelligence.

UPON the Receipt of this Signal, all that are near, immediately leave their Habitations, and repair to the Place appointed, with their Arms; and Oat-meal for their Provision. This they mingle with the Water of the next River or Burne the come to, when Hunger calls for a Supply; and of ten, for Want of a proper Vessel, sup the raw Mixture out of the Palms of their Hands.

with

They have been used, to impose a Tax upon the Inhabitants of the Low Country, near the Borden of the Highlands, called black Mail (or Rent) and levy it upon them by Force; and sometimes upon the weaker Clans among themselves. But as it was made equally criminal, by several Acts of Parliament, to comply with this Exaction, and to extor it, the People, to avoid the Penalty, came to Agreement with the Robbers, or some of their Correspondents in the Lowlands, to protect their House and Cattle. And as long as this Payment was puno tually made, the Depredations ceased, or otherwise the Collector of this Imposition was by Contras obliged to make good the Loss, which he seldon fail'd to do.

THESE Collectors gave regular Receipts, as so Safe-guard Money; and those who resused to pay it were sure to be plunder'd, except they kept a continual Guard of their own, well arm'd, which would have been a yet more expensive Way of so curing their Property.

AND notwithstanding the Guard of the independent Highland Companies, which were rais'd chiefly to prevent Thests and Impositions of this Nature yet I have been certainly informed, that this black Mail, or evasive Safe-guard Money, has been very lately paid in a disarmed Part of the northern Highlands. And, I make no Doubt, in other Places besides, tho' it has not yet come to my Knowledge.

THE gathering in of Rents is called uplifting them, and the stealing of Cows they call Lifting, a soft'ning Word for Thest; as if it were only collecting their Dues. This I have often heard; but it has

has

Sb

to

the

for thi

go

vei

the

dat

car

the

dit

Lo

Ni

the

har

are

No

Con

the

wh

we

Ga Ti

cio

Hi

the

tur

agr

anc

ries

Re

the

has as often occur'd to me, that we have the Word Shop-lifting, in the Sense of stealing, which I take to be an old English compound Word. But as to the Etymology of it, I leave that to those who are fond of such unprofitable Disquisitions, tho' I think this is pretty evident.

When a Design is form'd for this Purpose, they go out in Parties from ten to thirty Men, and traverse large Tracts of Mountains, 'till they arrive at the Place where they intend to commit their Depredations; and that they chuse to do as distant as they can from their own Dwellings.

they d of raw

n the

rden

) and

upon

t was xtor

gree

orres

oule

ounc

rwife

itrad Idon

as for

ay it

con-

vhich

e pen-

black

been

hem

other

my

fting ig, a

out if

has

THE principal Time for this wicked Practice is, the Michaelmas Moon, when the Cattle are in Condition fit for Markets held on the Borders of the Lowlands. They drive the stolen Cows in the Night-time, and by Day, they lie conceal'd with them in By-Places among the Mountains, where hardly any others come; or in Woods, if any such are to be found in their Way.

I must here ask Leave to digress a little, and take Notice, that I have several Times used the Word Cows for a Drove of Cattle. This is according to the Highland Stile; for they say, a Drove of Cows, when there are Bulls and Oxen among them, as we say a Flock of Geese, tho' there be in it many Ganders. And having just now mentioned the Time of Listing, it revived in my Memory a malicious Saying of the Lowlanders, viz. That the Highland Lairds tell out their Daughters Tockers by the Light of the Michaelmas Moon. But to return:

Sometimes one Band of these Robbers has agreed with another to exchange the stolen Cattle; and in this Case, they used to commit their Robberies nearer Home, and by appointing a Place of Rendezvous, those that listed in the North-East (for the Purpose) have exchanged with others toward the West, and each have fold them not many Miles from Home; which was commonly at a very great Distance from the Place where they were stolen. Nay further, as I have been well informed, in making this Contract of Exchange, they have by Correspondence, long before they went out, defcribed to each other the Colour and Marks of the

he

tw

the

of

bu

Ex

wo

Ca

fro

bel

tair

to

Tr

of

Con

fufe

terr

bee

pofi

duc

I

this

of th

fma

wou

with it le

fing

amo

I

of th

Kno

lem

B

Hon

enc

Cows destined to be stolen and exchanged.

I REMEMBER a Story concerning a Highland Woman, who, begging a Charity of a Lowland Laird's Lady, was asked several Questions; and among the rest, how many Husbands she had had? To which she answer'd Three. And being further questioned, if her Husbands had been kind to her, the faid the two first were honest Men, and very careful of their Family; for they both died for the Law: That is, were hang'd for Theft. Well, but as to the last? Hout! fays she, a fultby Peast! He dy'd at Hame, lik an auld Dug, on a Puckle o' Strae.

THOSE that have lost their Cattle, fometimes pursue them by the Track, and recover them from the Thieves. Or if, in the Pursuit, they are bounded (as they phrase it) into the Bounds of any other Chief, whose Followers were not concerned in the Robbery, and the Track is there loft, he is obliged by Law to trace them out of his Territory, or make them good to the Owner.

By the Way, the Heath or Heather, being press'd by the Foot, retains the Impression; or, at least, some remains of it for a long while, before it rifes again effectually; and befides, you know, there are other visible Marks left behind by the Cattle. But even a fingle Highlander has been found by the Track of his Foot, when he took to Hills out of the common Ways, for his greater Safety in his Flight; as thinking he could not fo well be difcovered from Hill to Hill every now and then, as he often might be, in the Road (as they call it) between the Mountains.

If the Pursuers overtake the Robbers, and find them inferior in Number, and happen to feize any of them, they are feldom profecuted, there being but few who are in Circumstances fit to support the Expence of a Profecution; or if they were, they would be liable to have their Houses burnt, their Cattle hock'd, and their Lives put in Danger, from some of the Clan, to which the Banditti belonged.

Bur with the richer Sort, the Chief or Chieftain generally makes a Composition, when it comes to be well known the Thieves belonged to his Tribe, which he willingly pays, to fave the Lives of some of his Clan; and this is repaid him by a Contribution among the Robbers, who never refuse to do their utmost to save those of their Fraternity. But it has been faid this Payment has been fometimes made in Cows stolen from the opposite Side of the Country, or paid out of the Produce of them, when fold at the Market.

IT is certain some of the Highlanders think of this Kind of Depredation, as our Deer-Stealers do of their Park and Forest Enterprizes; that is, to be a small Crime, or none at all. And as the latter would think it a scandalous Reproach to be charged with robbing a Hen-Rooft, fo the Highlander thinks it less shameful to steal a hundred Cows, than one ingle Sheep; for a Sheep-stealer is infamous even among them.

If I am mistaken in that Part of my Account of the Lifting of Cattle, which is beyond my own Knowledge, you may lay the Blame to those Gendemen who gave me the Information.

Bur there is no more Wonder that Men of Honesty and Probity should disclose, with Abhorence; the evil Practices of the vile Part of their

0.5

Countrymen,

in by de-

iles

eat

en.

the and

and and ad?

her her, very

the Tell,

aft! ckle

mes rom undther

the iged 10 ,

eing , at

efore now, Cat-

ound Hills ety in e difn, as he Countrymen, than that I should confess to them, we have among us a Number of Villains that cannot plead the least Shadow of an Excuse for their Thievings and Highway-Robberies; unless they could make a Pretence of their Idleness and Luxury.

f

(

h

I

N

B

01

01 fu

th

fo

or

no

no Hi

2 0

the

ing

tol Me

the val

at l

1

que

land

new

WHEN I first came into these Parts, a Highland Gentleman, in order to give me a Notion of the Ignorance of some of the ordinary Highlanders, and their Contempt of the Lowland Laws (as they call them) gave me an Account, as we were walking together, of the Behaviour of a common Highland Man at his Trial, before the Lords of Justiciary in the Low Country. By the Way, the Appearance of those Gentlemen upon the Bench is not unlike that of our Judges in England.

I SHALL repeat the Fellow's Words as near as I can, by writing, in the fame broken Accent, as my Highland Friend used in mimicking the Criminal.

This Man was accused of stealing, with other his Accomplices, a good Number of Cattle. And while his Indictment was in reading, setting forth that he as a common Thief, had lain in wait, the Highlander lost all Patience; and interrupting cry'd out, Common Tief, Common Tief! Steal and Cow, twa Cow dat be Common Tief: Lift bundred Cow, dat be Shentilmans Trovers. After the Cour was again silent, and some little Progress had been made in the Particulars of the Accusation, he again cry'd out, Ah! Hone! Dat such fine Shentilmans should sit dere wid der sine Cowns on, te mak a Parsshel o' Lees on a peur bonest Mon.

But in Conclusion, when he was told what wa to be his Fate, he roared out most outrageously and fiercely pointing at the Judges, he cry'd out Ab for a proad Sword an a Tirk, to rid de Hoose tose foul Peastes.

PERSONAL Robberies are feldom heard of among them. For my own Part, I have several Times, with a single Servant, passed the Mountain Way from hence to Edinburgh, with four or sive hundred Guineas in my Portmanteau, without any Apprehension of Robbers by the Way, or Danger in my Lodgings by Night; tho' in my Sleep any one, with Ease, might have thrust a Sword from the Outside, through the Wall of the Hut and my Body together. I wish we could say as much of our own Country, civilized as it is said to be, tho' one can't be safe in going from London to Highgate.

INDEED in trifling Matters, as a Knife, or some such Thing, which they have Occasion for, and think it will cause no very strict Enquiry, they are, some of them, apt to pilfer; while a silver Spoon, or Watch, might lie in Safety, because they have no Means to dispose of either, and to make Use of them would soon discover their Thest. But I cannot approve the Lowland Saying, viz. Shew me a Highlander, and I will shew you a Thief.

YET after all, I can't forbear doing Justice upon a certain Laird, whose Lady keeps a Change far in the Highlands, West of this Town.

This Gentleman, one Day, Opportunity tempting, took a Fancy to the Lock of an Officer's Piftol; another Time he fell in Love (like many other Men) with a fair, but deceitful Outside, in taking the Boss of a Bridle silver'd over, to be all of that valuable Metal. 'Tis true, I never lost any Thing at his Hut; but the Proverb made me watchful—I need not repeat it.

But let this Account of him be of no Confequence; for I do assure you I never knew any one of his Rank do any Thing like it in all the Highlands.

em.

can-

heir

hey

ury.

land

the

lers.

they alk-

igh-

ufti-

the

ch is

ar as

t, as

thers

And

orth

80 ting

1 ani

ndred

Cour

been

again

man

Par

t wa

oufly oofe a

mon

them

And for my own Part, I do not remember that ever I lost any thing among them, but a Pair of new Doe-skin Gloves; and at another Time a Horse-Cloth it was purely Revenge.

I THOUGHT I had done with this Part of my Subject; but there is just now come to my Remembrance a Passage between an ordinary Highland Man and an Officer in Half-pay, who lives in this Town, and is himself of Highland Extraction.

f

I

W

Pe

of

to wl

as tin

an tut

to

Int

Pa

the

to i

anc

the

He told me a long white ago that, on a certain Time, he was going on Foot, and unattended, upon a Visit to a Laird, about seven or eight Miles among the Hills; and being clad in a new glossy Summer Suit (instead of his Highland Dress, which he usually wore upon such Occasions) there overtook him in his Way, an ordinary Fellow, who forced himself upon him as a Companion.

When they had gone together about a Mile, his new Fellow-Traveller said to him, — Troth, ye ba getten bra Clais — of which the Officer took little Notice; but some Time after, the Fellow began to look sour, and to snort (as they do when they are angry) Ab! 'tis pouny Geer; what an I shou'd tak'em frae ye noo? Upon this, the Officer drew a Pistol from his Breast, and said, — What do you think of this?

But at Sight of the Pistol, the Fellow fell on his Knees, and squalled out — Ab bone! Ab bone! She was but shoking.

It's true, this Dialogue passed in Irish; but this is the Language, in which I was told the Story.

BUT I have known feveral Instances of common Highlanders, who finding themselves like to be worsted. worsted, have crouched and howled like a beaten Spaniel; so suddenly has their Insolence been turned into fawning. But, you know, we have both of us seen in our own Country, a Change in higher Life, not less unmanly.

You may fee by this additional Article, that I can conceal nothing from you; even tho' it may feem, in some Measure, to call in Question what

I had been faying before.

en

3

it

ay

of

to ny

mind his

erndght

es, ere ow,

ile,

ye

ook

hen

in I

icer t do

on

ne!

but

the

non be

ted,

LETTER XXIV.

DESIDES tracking the Cows, as mentioned D in my last Letter, there was another Means whereby to recover them; which was by fending Persons into the Country suspected, and by them offering a Reward (which they call Tascal Money) to any who should discover the Cattle, and those who stole them. This, you may be fure, was done as fecretly as possible. The Temptation sometimes, tho' feldom, proved too strong to be refisted; and the Cattle being thereby discovered, a Restitution, or other Satisfaction, was obtained. But to put a Stop to a Practice fo detrimental to their Interest, and dangerous to their Persons, the thievish Part of the Camerons and others, afterwards by their Example, bound themselves by Oath never to receive any fuch Reward, or inform one against another.

This Oath they take upon a drawn Dirk, which they kifs in a folemn Manner; confenting, if ever they they prove perjured, to be stabbed with the same

Weapon, or any other of the like Sort.

HENCE they think no Wickedness so great as the Breach of this Oath, since they hope for Impunity in committing almost every other Crime, and are so certainly and severely punished for this Transgreffion.

An Instance of their Severity in this Point happened, in December, 1723, when one of the said Camerons, suspected of having taken Tascal Money, was, in the Dead of the Night, called out of his Hut, from his Wife and Children; and under Pretence of some new Enterprize, allured to some Distance out of hearing, and there murdered. And another for the same Crime (as they call it) was either thrown down some Precipice, or otherwise made away with; for he was never heard of afterwards.

Having mentioned, above, the Manner of taking their Oath relating to Tascal Money, I shall here give you a Specimen of a Highland Oath upon other Occasions. In taking whereof they do not kiss the Book, as in England; but hold up their right Hand, saying thus, or to this Purpose:

" By God himself, and as I shall answer to "God at the great Day, I shall speak the Truth. "If I do not, may I never thrive while I live;

" may I go to Hell and be damned when I die.
" May my Land neither hear Grafs or Corn

"May my Land neither bear Grass or Corn, may my Wife and Bairns never prosper, may

" my Cows, Calves, Sheep and Lambs all perish, " &c."

I say to this Purpose; for I never heard they had any established Form of an Oath among them. Besides, you perceive it must necessarily be varied according to the Circumstances of the Person who swears, at the Discretion of him who administers the Oath.

WHEN

h

(

n

n

d

C

ti

P fp

fe

th

ar

ta

G

he

WHEN the Chief was an Encourager of this Kind of Theft, which I have the Charity to believe was uncommon, and the Robbers succeeded in their Attempt, he received two Thirds of the Spoil, or the Produce of it; and the remaining third Part was divided among the Thieves.

ne

he

ity

are nf-

ip-

aid

ey,

his der

me

ed.

it)

er-

of

of nall

oon

not

eir

to ith.

ve;

die.

rn,

nay

hey

em.

vho

ters

EN

THE Clans that had among them the most of Villains addicted to these Robberies, are said, by the People bordering on the Highlands, to be the Camerons, Mackenzies, the Broadalbin-men, the M' Gregors, and the M' Donalds of Keppoch and Glenco. The Chiestain of these last is said, by his near Neighbours, to have little besides those Depredations for his Support; and the Chief of the first, whose Clan has been particularly stigmatized for those Violences, has, as I am very well informed, strictly forbid any such vile Practices, which has not at all recommended him to some of his Followers.

BESIDES these ill-minded People among the Clans, there are fome Stragglers in the Hills, who, like our Gypsies, have no certain Habitation; only they do not stroll about in Numbers like them. These go fingly, and tho' perfectly unknown, do not beg at the Door, but, without Invitation or formal Leave, go into a Hut, and fit themselves down by the Fire; expecting to be supplied with Oatmeal for their present Food. When Bedtime comes, they wrap themselves up in their Plaids, or beg the Use of a Blanket, if any to be fpared, for their Covering; and then lay themfelves down upon the Ground, in some Corner of the Hut. Thus the Man and his Wife are often deprived of the Freedom of their own Habitation, and cannot be alone together. But the Inhabitants are in little Danger of being pilfered by these Guests; nor, indeed, do they feem to be apprehenfive of it. For not only there is generally little to be stolen, but if they took some small Matter, it would be of no Use to the Thief for want of a Receiver; and besides, they would be pursued and easily taken. The People say themselves, if it were not for this Connivance of theirs, by a Kind of customary Hospitality, these Wanderers would foon be starved, having no Money wherewith to purchase Sustenance.

BUT I have heard great Complaint of this Cuftom from a Highland Farmer, of more than ordinary Substance, at whose Dwelling I happened to fee an Instance of this Intrusion; it being very near to the Place where I refided for a Time. And he told me he should think himself happy, if he was taxed at any Kind of reasonable Rate, to be freed from this great Inconvenience.

ABOVE, I have given you a Sketch of the Highland Oath; and here I shall observe to you, how flightly a certain Highlander thought of the Low-land Form.

THIS Man was brought as a Witness against another, in a supposed criminal Case. The Magistrate tendered him the Low Country Oath, and feeing the Fellow addressing himself confidently to take it, tho' he greatly suspected by several Circumstances the Man was suborned, changed his Method, and offered him the Highland Oath. -No, fays the Highlander, I cannot do that; for I will not for swear myself to please any Body.

THIS fingle Example might be fufficient to fhew how necessary it is to swear the common People, in the Method of their own Country; yet, by Way of Chat, I shall give you another, tho' it be less different in the Fact than the Expression.

AT Carlifle Affizes a Highland Man, who had meditated the Ruin of another, profecuted him for Horse-stealing; and swore positively to the Fact.

THIS being done, the supposed Criminal defired

his

h

M

C

tl

do

th

th

B

L

ce

up

Y

of

G

ex

ov

wi

Po

mi

on

to hir

tor

lity

fta

cla

if ]

the

hac

lau

cit

fib

his Profecutor might be fworn in the Highland Manner; and the Oath being tendered him accordingly, he refused it, saying, --- Thar is a Hantle o' Difference betwixt blawing on a Buke and dam'ing one's Saul.

But I have heard of feveral other Examples of the same Kind, notwithstanding the Oath taken in the Low Country, has the same Introduction, viz. By God, and as I shall answer, &c. but then the Land, Wife, Children, and Cattle are not concerned; for there is no Imprecation in it, either upon them, or him that takes the Oath.

t-

of

ed

it

bc

ld

to 15 li-

to

гу

nd

he

be

h-

W

Wnft

la-

nd

to ir-

his

r I

ew

le,

by

be ad

for

ed his As most People, when they begin to grow in Years, are unwilling to think themselves incapable of their former Pleasures, so some of the Highland Gentlemen seem to imagine they still retain that exorbitant Power which they formerly exercised over the Lives of their Vassals or Followers; even without legal Trial and Examination. Of this Power I have heard several of them vaunt, but it might be Ostentation. However, I shall mention one in particular.

I HAPPENED to be at the House of a certain Chief, when the Chieftain of a Tribe, belonging to another Clan, came to make a Vifit.

AFTER talking of indifferent Matters, I told him I thought some of his People had not behaved toward me, in a particular Affair, with that Civility I might have expected from the Clan. He started; and immediately with an Air of Fierceness, clapped his Hand to his broad Sword, and told me, if I required it, he would send me two or three of their Heads.

But I, really thinking he had been in Jest, and had acted it well (as jesting is not their Talent) laughed out, by Way of Approbation of his Capacity for a Joke; upon which he assumed, if possible, a yet more serious Look, and told me peremptorily.

remptorily, be was a Man of bis Word, and the Chief, who fat by, made no Manner of Objection to what he had faid.

THE heretable Power of Pit and Gallows, as they call it, which still is exercised by some within their proper Districts, is, I think, too much for any particular Subject to be intrusted withal. But, it is said, that any Partiality or Revenge of the Chief, in his own Cause, is obviated by the Law; which does not allow himself to sit judicially; but obliges him to appoint a Substitute as Judge in his Courts, who is called the Baily of Regality.

I FEAR this is but a Shadow of Safety to the accused, if it may not appear to increase the Danger of Injustice and Oppression. For to the Orders and Instructions of the Chief may be added the private Resentment of the Baily, which may make up a double Weight against the supposed Criminal.

I HAVE not, I must own, been accustomed to hear Trials in these Courts, but have been often told that one of those Bailies, in particular, seldom examines any, but with raging Words and Rancour: And if the Answers made are not to his Mind, he contradicts them by Blows; and one Time, even to the knocking down of the poor Wretch who was examined. Nay, further, I have heard say of him, by a very credible Person, that a Highlander of a neighbouring Clan, with whom his own has been long at Variance, being to be brought before him, he declared upon the Accusation, before he had seen the Party accused, That the very Name should bang bim.

I HAVE not mentioned this violent and arbitrary Proceeding, as tho' I knew or thought it usual in those Courts, but to shew how little Mankind in general are to be trusted with a lawless Power, to which there is no other Check or Comptrol, but good Sense and Humanity, which are not common enough

f

U

b

n

h

n F

in

I

R

(t) ho

re

Pr Cl

of

th

tio

he

atr

hu

Co

for thi

anc

ate

as f

tha

was enough to restrain every one who is invested with such Power, as appears by this Example.

THE Baily of Regality, in many Cases, takes upon him the same State as the Chief himself would do: As for one fingle Instance:

the

ion

as hin

for

But,

the

w;

but

his

ac-

ders

the

ake

d to dom lan-

his

one

1000 nave

that nom

be ufa-

That

rary

l in

, to

but

mon ough WHEN he travels in Time of Snow, the Inhabitants of one Village must walk before him, to make a Path to the next; and so on to the End of his Progress. And in a dark Night they light him from one inhabited Place to another, which are mostly far distant, by carrying blazing Sticks of Fir.

FORMERLY the Power assumed by the Chief, in remote Parts, was perfectly despotick, of which I shall only mention what was told me by a near Relation of a certain attainted Lord, whose Estate (that was) lies in the Northern Highlands: But hold --- This Moment, upon Recollection, I have refolved to add to it an Example of the arbitrary Proceeding of one much less powerful than the Chief, who nevertheless thought he might dispose of the Lives of Foreigners at his Pleasure. As to the first: The Father of the late Earl abovementioned having a great Defire to get a Fellow apprehended, who was faid to have been guilty of many atrocious Crimes, fet a Price upon his Head of one hundred and twenty Crowns (a Species of Scots Coin in those Days) I suppose about Fivepence or Sixpence; and of his own Authority gave Orders for taking him alive or dead. That the Pursuers thinking it dangerous to themselves to attempt the fecuring him alive, shot him, and brought his Head and one of his Hands to the Chief, and immediately received the promised Reward. The other is as follows:

I REMEMBER to have heard, a good while ago, that, in the time when Prince George of Denmark was Lord High Admiral of England, fome Scots Gentlemen Gentlemen represented to him, that Scotland could furnish the Navy with as good Timber for Masts and other Uses as either Sweden or Norway could do, and at a much more reasonable Rate.

This fucceeded fo far, that two Surveyors were fent to examine into the Allegations of their Memorial.

THOSE Gentlemen came first to Edinburgh, where they stayed some time to concert the rest of their Journey, and to learn from the Inhabitants their Opinion concerning the Execution of their Commission, among whom there was one Gentleman that had some Acquaintance with a certain Chiestain in a very remote Part of the Highlands, and he gave them a Letter to him.

THEY arrived at the Laird's House, declared the Cause of their coming, and produced their Credentials, which were a Warrant and Instructions from the Prince; but the Chiestain, after perusing them, told 'em he knew nothing of any such Person; they then told him he was Husband to Queen Anne; and he answered, he knew nothing of either of them; but, says he, there came hither, some time ago, such as you from Ireland, as Spies upon the Country, and, we hear, they have made their Jests upon us among the Irish.

Now, fays he, you shall have one Hour, and if, in that time, you can give me no better Account of yourselves than you have hitherto done, I'll hang you both upon that Tree. Upon which his Attendants shewed great Readiness to execute his Orders; and in this Perplexity he abruptly lest them, without seeing the Edinburgh Letter, for of that they made but little Account, since the Authority of the Prince, and even the Queen, were to him of no Consequence: But afterwards, as they were walking backwards and forwards in the Garden, counting the Minutes, one of them resolved

to

to

H

fo

ne

to

C

hi

th

If

ha

int

the

ne

gra

Pre

lain

tim

of (

Mu

onl

ver

his

wit

feno

him

Per

Nig

fore

han

his

to try what the Letter might do; this was agreed to by the other, as the last Resort; but in the Hurry and Confusion they were in, it was not for some time to be found, being worked into a Corner of the Bearer's usual Pocket, and so he passed to another, &c.

Now the Hour is expired, and the haughty Chieftain enters the Garden, and one of them gave him the Letter; this he read, and then turning to them, faid, Why did not you produce this at first? If you had not had it, I should most certainly have hanged you both immediately.

ald

ifts ald

ere

Ie-

gb,

of

eir tle-

ain

ids,

the

enom

ing

er-

een

ome

pon

heir

and

Ac-

one,

hich

cute

left

or of tho-

e to

they

Gar-

lved

to

THE Scene being thus changed, he took them into his House, gave them Refreshment, and told them, they might take a Survey of his Woods the next Morning, or when they thought fit.

THERE is one Chief who sticks at nothing to gratify his Avarice or Revenge.

This Oppressor, upon the least Offence or Provocation, makes no Conscience of hiring Villains out of another Clan, as he has done several times, to execute his diabolical Purposes by bocking of Cattle, burning of Houses, and even to commit Murder itself. Out of many Enormities, I shall only mention two.

THE first was, That being offended, though very unreasonably, with a Gentleman, even of his own Name and Clan, he, by horrid Commerce with one who governed another Tribe in the Absence of his Chief, agreed with him for a Parcel of Assassing to murder this his Vassal, and bring him his Head, I suppose, as a Voucher. The Person devoted to Death happened to be absent the Night the Murderers came to his House, and therefore the Villains resolved not to go away empty handed, but to take his Daughter's Head in lieu of his own, which the poor Creature perceiving, was frighted frighted to fuch a Degree, that she has not recovered her Understanding to this Day.

THE Servant Maid they abused with a Dirk in a butcherly Manner too shameful to be described; to be short, the Neighbours, though at some Diftance, hearing the Cries and Shrieks of the Females, took the Alarm, and the inhuman Monfters made their Escape.

THE other Violence related to a Gentleman who lives near this Town, and was appointed Umpire in a litigated Affair by the Chief and the other Party; and because this Laird thought he could not, with any Colour of Justice, decide in Favour of the Chief, his Cattle, that were not far from his House, were some hocked, and the rest of them killed; but the Owner of them, as the other was absent that Night, in all Probability fuspecting (or having some private Intelligence of) his Danger; and when this horrid Butchery was finished, the Ruffians went to his House, and wantonly diverted themselves in telling the Servants they had done their Master a good Piece of Service, for they had faved him the Expence of a Butcher to kill his Cattle; and I have been told, that the next Morning there were feen a Number of Calves fucking at the Dugs of the dead Cows. But two of them were afterwards apprehended and executed.

THESE Men (as is faid of Coleman) were allured to Secrecy while under Condemnation, though fometimes inclined to confess their Employer; and thus they continued to depend upon Promifes till the Knot was tied, and then it was too late, but all manner of Circumstances were too flagrant to admit a Doubt concerning the first Instigator of their Wickedness; yet few of the neighbouring Inhabitants dare to trust one another with their Sentiments of it.

BUT

of

fur

Ch

to b

he had

freq

just

of a

Bufi

befic

men

foon

coul

Part

were

I

Dou

to b

who

as a

putat

Y

Parts

Spani

is it

have

rest.

omi

he S

ourl

HE

nuch

vas r

Ί

Bur here comes the finishing Stroke to the first of these execrable Pieces of Workmanship.

Nor long after the vile Attempt, he who had furnished the Murderers, made a Demand on the Chief of a certain Quantity of Oatmeal, which was to be the Price of the Assassination, but in Answer, he was told, if he would send Money, it might be had of a Merchant with whom he (the Chief) had frequent Dealings, and as for himself he had but just enough for his own Family 'till the next Crop.

THIS shuffling Refusal occasioned the Threats of a Law-suit, but the Demander was told, the Business had not been effectually performed; and besides, as he knew the Consideration he might commence his Process, and declare it in a Court as foon as ever he thought fit.

THIS last Circumstance I did not, or perhaps could not, know 'till lately, when I was in that Part of the Highlands from whence the Villains were hired.

a

1;

f-

6-

f-

an

ed

he

he

in

ar

eft

he

ity

of)

vas

ın-

nts

er-

fa

old,

ber

WS.

ind

red

ıgh

and

till

all

ad-

heir

ha-

nti-

BUT

I MUST again apologize, and fay, I make no Doubt you will take this Account (as it is intended) to be a Piece of historical Justice done upon one who is lawless, and deserves much more; and not as a Sample of a Highland Chief, or the least Imputation on any other of those Gentlemen.

YET Truth obliges me to confess, that, in some Parts, there remains among the Natives a kind of Spanish, or Italian Inclination to revenge themselves, is it were, by Proxy, of those whom they think have injured them, or interfered with their Interest. This I could not but infer soon after my first coming to the western Part of the Highlands, from the Saying of a Youth, Son of a Laird in the Neighbourhood.

He was telling me, his Father's Estate had been nuch embarrassed, but, by a lucky Hit, a Part of it was redeemed. I was desirous to know by what

Means,

Means, and he proceeded to tell me, there were two Wadfets upon it, and both of the Mortgagees had been in Possession, each claiming a Right to about half; but one of them being a Native, and the other a Stranger, that is, not of the Clan, the former had taken the latter aside, and told him, if he did not immediately quit the Country he would hang him upon the next Tree. What! fays a Highlander who was born in the East, and went with me into those Parts; that would be the way to be hanged himself. Out! fays the Youth, you talk as if you did not know your own Country; That would have been done, and no-body know who did it; this he spoke with an Air, as if he had been talking of ordinary Business, and was angry with the other for being ignorant of it, who afterwards owned, that my Presence was the Cause of his Ob-

BESIDES, what I have recounted in this Letter, which might ferve as an Indication that fome, at least, of the ordinary Highlanders are not averse to the Price of Blood; I shall here take notice of a Propofal of that kind, which was made to myfelf.

HAVING given the Preference to a certain Clan in a profitable Bufiness, it brought upon me the Refentment of the Chieftain of a small neighbouring Tribe, Part of a Clan at Enmity with the former.

This Gentleman thought his People had as much Right to my Favour, in that Particular, as the others; the first Instance of his Revenge was a that Robbery committed by one of his Tribe, whom I ordered to be bounded out, and he was taken. This Fellow I resolved to prosecute to the utmost, which brought the Chieftain to sollicit me in his Behalf.

He told me, for Introduction, that it was not usual in the Hills for Gentlemen to carry such Matters to Extremity, but rather to accept of a Composition.

position,

1 F

te li

W la

be

CC

th

to

he

if

eno tio

fior if I

pri

hin

hon

vice

it w tlen

deci

A

Spee

fooli

P

polition, and finding their Custom of compounding had no Weight with me, he offered a Restitution, but I was firmly resolved, in terrorem, to punish the Thief. Seeing this Proposal was likewise ineffectual, he told me the Man's Wife was one of the prettieft young Women in the Highlands, and if I would pardon the Husband, I should bave ber.

I TOLD him, that was an agreeable Bribe, yet it could not prevail over the Reasons I had to refer the Affair to Justice.

ere

ees

to

the

or-

if uld

s a

ent

way

you

ry;

who

een

with ards

Ob-

tter,

, at

verfe

of a

elf.

Clan

e the

our-

for-

ad as

r, as

was a

vhom

This

which alf.

lition,

Some time after, a Highlander came privately to me, and, by my own Interpreter, told me he heard I had a Quarrel with the Laird of ____, and if that was true, he thought be bad lived long enough; but not readily apprehending his Intention, I asked the Meaning of that dubious Expresfion, and was answered, he would kill him for me if I would encourage it. The Proposal really furprized me, but foon recovering myself, I ordered him to be told, that I believed he was a trufty honest Man, and if I had Occasion for such Service, I should employ bim before any other; but it was the Custom in my Country, when two Gentlemen had a Quarrel, to go into the Field and decide it between themselves.

Ar the Interpretation of this last Part of my Speech, he shook his Head, and said; What a feelish Custom is that!

PERHAPS this Narration, as well as some others that have preceded, may be thought to confift of too many Circumstances, and consequently to be of an unnecessary Length, but I hope there are none that do not, by that Means, convey the Knowledge of some Custom or Inclination of the Mat. Seides, I am myself, as you know very well, an Com. Enemy to long Stories.

P

Some of the Highland Gentlemen are immoderate Drinkers of Usky, even three or four Quarts at a Sitting; and in general, the People that can pay the Purchase, drink it without Moderation.

Nor long ago, four English Officers took a Fancy to try their Strength in this Bow of Ulyffes, against a like Number of the Country Champions, but the Enemy came off victorious; and one of the Officers was thrown into a Fit of the Gout, without Hopes; another had a most dangerous Fever, a third loft his Skin and Hair by the Surfeit, and the last confessed to me, that when Drunkenness and Debate ran high, he took feveral Opportunities to sham it.

THEY fay for Excuse, the Country requires a great deal; but I think they mistake a Habit and Custom for Necessity. They likewise pretend it does not intoxicate in the Hills as it would do in the low Country, but this also I doubt by their own Practice; for those among them who have any Confideration will hardly care fo much as to refresh themselves with it, when they pass near the lone Tops of the Mountains; for in that Circumstance, they say, it renders them careless, listless of the Fatigue, and inclined to fit down, which ingline invite to Sleep, and then they would be in Danger to Ly invite to Sleep, and then they been tempted to ey in think this Spirit has in it, by Infusion, the Seeds of Anger, Revenge and Murder, (this I confess is a little too poetical) but those who drink of it to any Degree of Excess behave, for the most Part, like true Barbarians, I think much beyond the Effect of other Liquors. The Collector of the Customs at Stornway in the Isle of Lewis told me, that about 120 Families drink yearly 4000 English Gallons of this Spirit, and Brandy together, although many of them are fo poor they cannot afford to pay for much of either, which you know must en-crease

C

th Y

gl

for

M

the

till

que

Cui

raci Cou

A

hall

hen

orca

n a

.S.

Cool

whi

ferir

and

Toa Inve

&c.

crease the Quantity drank by the rest, and that they frequently give to Children of fix or feven Years old, as much at a time as an ordinary Wineglass will hold.

WHEN they chuse to qualify it for Punch, they sometimes mix it with Water and Honey, or with Milk and Honey; at other times the Mixture is only the Aqua Vitæ, Sugar and Butter, this they burn till the Butter and Sugar are diffolved.

THE Air of the Highlands is pure and confequently Healthy, infomuch that I have known fuch Cures done by it as might be thought next to Miacles, I mean in Distempers of the Lungs, as Coughs, Confumptions, &c.

ts

in a es,

15. of

ut,

ous

ur-

ın-

)pes a

and d it

o in

own

any

re-

Seeds

Gal-

ord to ift encreale

AND as I have mentioned the Honey above, I hall here give that its due Commendation; I think hen, it is in every respect as good as that of Miarea fo much esteemed, and both, I suppose, are, a great Measure, produced from the Bloom of the Heath; for which Reason too our Hampshire the loney is more valued than any from other Parts ance, ear London, because that County is mostly covered the ith Heath.

As the Lowlanders call their Part of the Country night nger le Land of Cakes, so the Natives of the Hills say do to ey inhabit a Land of Milk and Honey.

is is a .S. In the Low-Country the Cakes are called o any Cookies, and the several Species of them, of , like which there are many, though not much dif-effect fering in Quality one from another, are dignified and diffinguished by the Names of the reigning ftoms that Toasts, or the good Housewife, who was the Inventor; as for Example; Lady Cullen's Cookies, hough &c.

LETTER XXV.

IN a former Letter, I ventured to give it you as my Opinion, that Mankind in different Countries are naturally the same. I shall now send you a short Sketch of what I have observed in the Conversation of an English Fox-hunter, and that of a Highland Laird, supposing neither of them to have had a liberal and polite Education, or to have been far out of their own Counties.

THE first of these Characters is, I own, too trite to be given you, but this by Way of Comparison.

THE 'Squire is proud of his Estate, and Assure of Fortune, loud and positive over his October, impatient of Contradiction, or rather will give no Opportunity for it; but Whoops and Hollows at every Interval of his own Talk, as if the Company were to supply the Absence of his Hounds.

THE particular Characters of the Pack, the various Occurrences in a Chace, where Jowler is the eternal Hero, make the constant Topick of his Discourse, tho' perhaps none others are interested in it. And his Favourites the Trencher-Hound if they please, may lie undisturbed upon Chairs and Counterpanes of Silk; and upon the least Cry, the not hurt, his Pity is excited more for them, that if one of his Children had broke a Limb, and that Pity his Anger succeeds to the Terror of the whole Family.

TH

h

to fu

F

ot

Co

the

wl

to

Ex

fan

the

in I

Mai

fatio

Lai

and

the

deri

wou

vage

of th

Islan

 $\mathbf{I}$

THE Laird is national, vain of the Number of his Followers, and his absolute Command over them. In case of contradiction, he is loud and imperious, and even dangerous; being always attended by those who are bound to support his arbitrary Sentiments.

1 25

un-

you

on-

of a

ave

peen

too

om-

Af

000 wil

Hol

f th

hi

ie va

is th

of hi

reste

ound

rs an , the

tha

and I

of th

THE great Antiquity of his Family, and the heroick Actions of his Ancestors, in their Conquests upon Enemy Clans, is the inexhaustible Theme of his Conversation; and, being accustomed to Dominion, he imagines himself, in his U/ky, to be a fovereign Prince. And, as I faid before, fancies he may dispose of Heads at his Pleafure.

THUS, one of them places his Vanity in his Fortune, and his Pleasure in his Hounds. other's Pride is in his Lineage, and his Delight is Command, both arbitrary in their Way; and this the Excess of Liquor discovers in both. So that what little Difference there is between them, feems to arise from the Accident of their Birth; and if the Exchange of Countries had been made in their Infancy, I make no Doubt but each might have had the other's Place, as they fland separately described in this Letter.

On the contrary, in like Manner, as we have many Country Gentlemen, merely fuch, of great Humanity and agreeable, if not general, Converfation; fo in the Highlands I have met with some Lairds, who furprized me with their good Sense and polite Behaviour, being fo far removed from the more civilized Part of the World, and confidering the Wildness of the Country, which one would think was fufficient, of itself, to give a favage Turn to a Mind the most humane.

THE Isles to the North-West, and to the North of the main Land (if I may fo speak of this our Island) may not improperly be called Highlands; for they are mountainous, and the Natives speak the Language, follow the Customs, and wear the Habit of the Highlanders.

TH

In some of the Western Islands (as well as in Part of the Highlands) the People never rub out a greater Quantity of Oats than what is just necessary for Seed, against the following Year; the rest they referve in the Sheaves for their Food. And, as they have Occasion, set Fire to some of them; not only to dry the Oats, which, for the most Part, are wet, but to burn off the Husk. Then, by winnowing they feparate, as well as they can, the footy Part from the Grain; but as this cannot be done effectually, the Bonnack or Cake they make of it, is very black. Thus they deprive themfelves of the Use of Straw, leaving none to thatch their Huts, make their Beds, or feed their Cattle in the Winter Season.

THEY feldom burn and grind a greater Quantity of these Oats, than serves them for a Day, except on a Saturday; when some will prepare a double Portion, that they may have nothing to do on This Oatmeal is called the Sunday following.

Graydon Meal.

For grinding the Oats, they have a Machine they call a Quarn. This is composed of two Stones; the undermost is about a Foot and a Half, or two Feet Diameter. It is round, and five or fix Inches deep in the Hollow, like an earthen Pan. Within this they place another Stone, pretty equal at the Edge to that Hollow. This last is flat, like a wooden Pot-led, about three or four Inches thick, and in the Centre of it is a pretty large round Hole, which goes quite through, whereby to convey the Oats between the Stones; there are also two or three Holes in different Places, near the extreme Part of the Surface, that go about Half-way through the Thickness, which is just Depth enough

te

fi

g. L

S

u

I

fe

al

fe

tl

21

P

th

of

(t

pi

th

pi

qı

bo

fa

be

th

th

th

la

fit

ar

Sa

ag

th

fer

eak

the

in it a

ary

hey

as

not

are

in-

the

be

ake

mtch

ttle

tity

ept

ble

on

lled

ine

wo

alf,

fix

an.

ual

e a ck,

ole,

the

or

me

vav

ugh

to

to keep a Stick in its Place, by which, with the Hand, they turn it round and round, till they have finished the Operation. But in a wild Part of Argyle-shire, there was no Bread of any Kind, till the Discovery of some Lead Mines, which brought Strangers among the Inhabitants; who before sed upon the Milk of their Cows, Goats, and Sheep. In Summer they used to shake their Milk in a Vessel, till it was very frothy, which pussed them up, and satisfied them for the present; and their Cheese served them instead of Bread. The Reason why they had no Bread, was, that there is hardly any arable Land for a great Space, all round about that Part of the Country.

I HAVE been affured, that in some of the Islands, the meaner Sort of People still retain the Custom of boiling their Beef in the Hide; or otherwise (being destitute of Vessels of Metal or Earth) they put Water into a Block of Wood, made hollow by the Help of the Dirk and burning; and then with pretty large Stones heated red-hot, and successively quenched in that Vessel, they keep the Water boiling, till they have dressed their Food. It is said, likewise, that they roast a Fowl in the Embers, with the Guts and Feathers; and when they think it done enough, they strip off the Skin, and then think it fit for the Table.

A GENTLEMAN of my Acquaintance told me, that in coming from Ireland to the Western Highlands, he was reduced, by an Ague, to the Necessity of landing upon the Island Macormach; and arriving at the publick Change, observed three Quarters of a Cow to lie in a shallow Part of the Salt Water, and the other Quarter hanging up against the End of the Hut.

THAT, asking the Reason of it, he was told they had no Salt; and it was their Way of pre-ferving their Beef.

P 4

SOME

Some Time after, the Woman of the Hut (or the guid Wife) took a Side of a Calf that had been taken out of the Cow, and holding it by the Legs, waved it backward and forward over the Fire, till Part of it was roafted, as she thought; and then tore off one of the Limbs, and offered it to him to eat. A tempting Dish! especially for a sick Stomach!

It is often faid, that some of the Lairds of those Islands take upon them the State of Monarchs; and thence their Vassals have a great Opinion of their Power.

AMONG other Stories told of them, there is one pretty well known in the North of Scotland; but whether true, or feigned as a Ridicule upon them, I do not know. For, notwithstanding the Lowland Scots complain of the English for ridiculing other Nations, yet they themselves have a great Number of standing Jokes upon the Highlanders.

THEY say a Spanish Ship being stranded upon the Coast of Barra (a very small Island to the South of Lewes) the Chief (Mc Neil) called a Council out of his Followers (which I think they say were about sifty in Number) in order to determine what was to be done with her. That in the Course of the Confultation one of the Members proposed, "If she was laden with Wine and Brandy, she should be confiscated as an illicit Trader upon the Coast;

" they should plunder her as a Wreck."

Upon this, one of the Council, more cautious than the rest, objected, that the King of Spain might resent such Treatment of his Subjects; but the other replied, We have nothing to do with that. M' Neal and the King of Spain will adjust that Matter between themselves.

" but if the was freighted with other Merchandize,

As this is a cold Country, the People endeavour to avail themselves of the Condition of those who live in a more northern Climate.

THEY

76

n

S.

11

n

t.

ſe

br

ir

ne.

ut

n,

V-

g

at ae

of

of

ut

to

n-

ne

be

t;

e,

us

in

ut

at.

it-

ur

ho

EY

THEY tell you, that some of the Lairds in the Islands of Schetland (which are far North of the Orkneys) hire a Domestick by the half Year, or by the Quarter, just as they can agree, whose Business it is to put an Instrument in Order, when the Laird has an Inclination to play upon it; but if he attempts to play a Tune himself, he is sure to be discarded.

Or this they give you an Instance in a certain Laird, who observing his Servant went farther toward an Air, than he ought to have done by Agreement, (perhaps vainly imagining he could play better than his Master) he had Warning given him to provide himself with another Service, against the next Martinmas, which was then about two Months to come. And altho' the Man was not suspended in the mean Time from the Exercise of his Function, (because he was to be paid for the whole Time) yet in all that Interval, no Manner of Intercession could prevail with the Laird to continue him in his Service beyond that Quarter. No; notwithstanding his own Lady strongly folicited him in Behalf of the poor unhappy Offender; nor could she obtain so much as a Certificate in his Favour.

HERE you will fay, all this must be a Riddle: And, indeed, so it is. But your Friend Sir Alexander, or any other of your Scots Acquaintance, can explain it to you much better over a Bottle, or walking in St. James's Park, than I can do upon Paper. They can likewise give you the Title of the Hireling, which I have forgot; and when all that is done, I dare venture to say, you will conclude, there is no Occasion for any such Officer in any English Family. And for my own Part, I really think there is as little Need of him any where on this Side the Tweed, within the Compass of the Ocean.

P 5

WE had the other Day, in our Coffee-Room an Auction of Books, if such Trash, and so small a Number of them, may go by that Name.

ONE of them I purchased, which I don't remember to have ever heard of before; altho' it was published no longer ago than the Year 1703.

It is a Description of the Western Islands of Scotland, and came extremely à propos, to prevent my saying any Thing surther concerning them.

I HAVE nothing to object against the Author's (Mr. Martin's) Account of those Isles, with Respect to their Situation, Mountains, Lakes, Rivers, Caves, &c. For I confess I never was in any one of them, tho' I have seen several of them from the main Land. But I must observe, that to surnish out his Book with much of the Wonderful (a Quality necessary to all Books of Travels, and it would be happy if History were less tainted with it) he recounts a great Variety of strange Customs used by the Natives (if ever in Use) in Days of yore, with many other Wonders; among all which the second Sight is the superlative.

This, he fays, is a Faculty, Gift, or Misfortune (for he mentions it under those three Predicaments) whereby all those who are possessed of it, or by it, see the perfect Images of absent Objects, either human, brute, vegetable, artificial, &c. And if there be fifty other Persons in the same Place, those Sights are invisible to them all. Nor even are they seen by any one, who has himself at other Times the second Sight, unless the Person who has the Faculty, at that Instant, should touch him with Design to communicate it to him.

him with Defign to communicate it to him.

IT is not peculiar to adult Persons, but is sometimes given to young Children. Women have this supernatural Sight, and even Horses and Cows. 'Tis Pity he does not tell us how those two Kinds of Cattle distinguish between natural and preternatural

ral

.

t

t

V

c fi

0

f

S

a

p

n

N

h

I

C

tı

L

a

F

V

0

CI

ral Appearances, fo as to be fearless of the one, and affrighted at the other; tho' feemingly the same, and how all this came to be known.

Upon this Subject he employs fix and thirty Pages, i. e. a small Part of them, in recounting what Kind of Appearances forebode Death, which of them are Presages of Marriage, &c. as tho' it were a settled System.

THE remaining Leaves are taken up, in Examples of fuch prophetick Apparitions, and the Certainty of their Events.

ll a

re-

s of

vent

or's

Re-

ers,

one

nish

lity

be

re-

vith

cond

forediit,

ets,

 $\mathcal{C}_{c}$ .

Nor

f at

fon

ne-

this ws.

ral

But I shall trouble you no further with so contemptible a Subject, or myself with pointing out the Marks of Imposture, except to add one Remark, which is, that this ridiculous Notion has almost excluded another, altogether as weak and frivolous; for he mentions only two or three slight Suspicions of Witchcraft, but not one Fact of that Nature throughout his whole Book. Yet both this and second Sight are sprung from one and the same Stock, which I suppose to be very ancient, as they are Children of Credulity, who was begotten by Superstition, who was the Offspring of Craft; but you must make out the next Ancestor yourself, for his Name is torn off from the Pedigree, but I believe he was the Founder of the Family.

In looking upwards to what I have been writing, I have paufed a while to confider what it was that could induce me to detain you so long about this trifling Matter; and at last I have resolved it into a Love of Truth, which is naturally communicative, and makes it painful to conceal the Impositions of Falshood. But these Islands are so remote and unfrequented, they are a very proper Subject for Invention; and sew, I think, would have the Curiosity to visit them, in order to disprove any Account of them, however romantick.

I CAN make no other Apology for the Length of this Detail, because I might have gone a much shorter Way, by only mentioning the Book, and hinting its Character; and so leaving it to your Choice, whether to take Notice of it, or reject it.

2

0

T

to

n

tl

N

is aı

it

A

to

fo

Τ

fo

H

F

W

W ſh

to

This Letter will bring you the Conclusion of our Correspondence, so far as it relates to this Part of our Island; yet if any Thing should happen hereaster that may be thought qualified to go upon its Travels five hundred Miles Southward, it will be a Pleasure to me to give it the necessary Dispatch.

I HAVE called it Correspondence from the Remarks I have received from you, upon such Passages in my Letters as gave you the Occasion; and I wish my Subject would have enabled me to give you Opportunities to increase their Number.

WRITERS, you know, for the most Part have not been contented with any thing less than the Characters and Actions of those whom Birth or Fortune had set up to publick View; or the Policy or Weakness of publick Councils. The Order and Event of Battles, Sieges, and such like, in great Measure dressed up in Habits cut out by themselves, but the Genius of a People has been thought beneath their Notice.

This, forfooth, is called supporting the Dignity of History. Now in this Case, who shall condescend to give a Detail of Circumstances, generally esteemed to be low, and therefore of little Consequence, and at the same Time escape the Character of a Trifler?

But I am unwarily fallen into an Apology to you, and not as if I was writing en Confidence to a Friend, but openly to the whole Kingdom.

For my own Part (who have already lived too long to be dazzled with glittering Appearances) I should be as well pleased to see a Shepherd of Arcadia (free from poetical Fiction) in his rustick Behaviour and little Oeconomy; or a Burgher of ancient

ch

nd ur

ur

ur

er

els

ire

rks

ny

ny

-10

the

or-

or

and

eat

es,

be-

ity

deilly ifeter

to o a

too

ca-

Be-

of

ent

ancient Rome in his Shop, as to know the Character of a Conful; for, in either Case, it is the Comparison of pass'd Ages, and foreign Countries opposed to our own, that excites my Curiosity, and gives me Satisfaction.

As we are now about to settle our Accounts to this Time, I shall acknowledge (as every honest Man would do) the Value of an Article, which, it is likely you make little Account of, as the Indians are said to have done of their Gold, when they gave it away for Baubles. And that is, the agreeable Amusement you have furnished me with from Time to Time, concerning such Passages as could not, for good Reasons, be admitted to the publick Papers. This, to one almost excluded the World, may, in some Measure, be said to restore him to his native Home.

UPON the whole, when all the Articles in your Favour are brought to Account, I think the Balance will be on your Side; and yet I make no Doubt you would chearfully go on to increase the Debt, tho' I should become a Bankrupt, and there did not remain to you the least Expectation of Payment from, &c.

LETTER XXVI.

Concerning the new Roads, &c.

I T is now about eight Years fince I fent you the Conclusion of my rambling Account of the Highlands; and perhaps you would not have complained, plained, if, in this long Interval, you had been perfectly free of fo barren a Subject.

Monsieur Fontenelle, I remember, in one of his pastoral Dialogues makes a Shepherd object to another, Quoi! toujours de l' Amour? And I think you may as well ask --- What? always Highlands? But, in my Situation, without them, I should be in the forrowful Condition of an old Woman in her Country Cottage, by a Winter-Fire; and nobody would hearken to her Tales of Witches and Spirits; that is, to have little or nothing to say. But now I am a perfect Volunteer, and cannot plead my former Excuses, and really am without any Apprehensions of being thought officious in giving you some Account of the Roads, which within these sew Weeks have been compleatly finished.

THESE new Roads were begun in the Year 1726, and have continued about eleven Years in the Profecution; yet, long as it may be thought, if you were to pass over the whole Work (for the Borders of it would shew you what it was) I make no Doubt but that Number of Years would diminish in your Imagination to a much shorter Tract of Time, by Comparison with the Difficulties that attended the Execution.

Bur before I proceed to any particular Descriptions of them, I shall inform you how they lie, to the End you may trace them out upon a Map of Scotland. And first I shall take them as they are made, to enter the Mountains, viz.

ONE of them begins from Crief, which is about fourteen Miles from Sterling. Here the Romans left off their Works, of which fome Parts are visible to this Day; particularly the Camp at Ardoch, where the Vestiges of the Fortifications are on a Moor, so barren, that its whole Form has been safe from Culture, or other Alteration besides Weather and Time.

THE

1

t

(

F

n

f

0

(1

fa

tl

B

R

01

th

th

ch

th

D

fo

If

Fo

ab

R

ге

for

So

ha

Cowl

THE other Road enters the Hills at Dimbeld in Atbol, which is about ten Miles from Pertb.

THE first of them, according to my Account, though the last in Execution, proceeds through Glenalmond (which, for its Narrowness, and the Height of the Mountains, I remember to have mentioned formerly) and thence it goes to Aberfaldy. There it crosses the River Tay, by a Bridge of Free-Stone, consisting of five spacious Arches; (by the Way, this military Bridge is the only Passage over that wild and dangerous River) and from thence the Road goes on to Dalnachardoch.

THE other Road from Dunkeld proceeds by the Blair of Athol, to the faid Dalnachardoch.

HERE the two Roads join in one, and as a fingle Road it leads on to Dalwhinny, where it branches out again into two; of which one proceeds toward the North-West, through Garva-Moor, and over the Coriarach Mountain to Fort Augustus, at Killichumen, and the other Branch goes due North to the Barrack of Ruthven in Badenoch, and thence by Delmagary to Inverness. From thence it proceeds something to the Southward of the West across the Island, to the aforesaid Fort Augustus, and so on to Fort-William in Lochaber.

THE Length of all these Roads put together, is about 250 Miles.

en

of

to ls?

in ner

ts;

ow

my re-

ou ese

ear

in ht,

the

ake

ifh

of hat

ip-

to

of

are

out

ans ble cb.

1 3

een ea-

HE

I HAVE so lately mentioned Glenalmond in the Road from Crief Northward, that I cannot forbear a Digression, though at my first setting out, in relation to a Piece of Antiquity, which happened to be discovered in that Vale, not many Hours before I passed through it, in one of my Journies Southward.

A SMALL Part of the Way through this Glen having been marked out by two Rows of Camp-Colours placed at a good Distance one from another, whereby to describe the Line of the intended

Breadth

Breadth and Regularity of the Road, by the Eye, there happened to lie directly in the Way an exceeding large Stone; and as it had been made a Rule from the Beginning to carry on the Roads in streight Lines, as far as the Way would permit, not only to give them a better Air, but to fhorten the Passenger's Journey, it was resolved the Stone should be removed, if possible, though otherwise the Work might have been carried along on either Side of it.

THE Soldiers, by vast Labour, with their Levers and Jacks, or Hand-screws, tumbled it over and over, till they got it quite out of the Way, although it was of fuch an enormous Size, that it might be Matter of great Wonder how it could ever be removed by human Strength and Art; especially to fuch who had never feen an Operation of that And upon their digging a little Way into that Part of the Ground, where the Centre of the Base had stood, there was found a small Cavity about two Feet square, which was guarded from the outward Earth at the Bottom, Top, and Sides, by fquare flat Stones.

THIS Hollow contained fome Ashes, Scraps of Bones, and half-burnt Ends of Stalks of Heath; which last we concluded to be a small Remnant of a Funeral-Pile. Upon the whole, I think there is no Room to doubt, but it was the Urn of fome confiderable Roman Officer, and the best of the Kind that could be provided in their military Circumstance; and that it was fo, feems plainly to appear from its Vicinity to the Roman Camp, the Engines that must have been employed to remove that vast Piece of a Rock, and the Unlikeliness it should, or could have ever been done by the Natives of the Country. But certainly the Defign was, to preferve those Remains from the Injuries of Rains, and melting Snows, and to prevent their being pro-

taned

fane

Bar

they

thei

is g

I fo

dier

was

pre

mai

it w

Dif

affe

the

the

Pro

cha

posi

mo don

bee

and

Hil

beli

abo

Acc

was

per

Te

the

foll

her

gre

of i

faned by the facrilegious Hands of those they called Barbarians, for that reproachful Name you know they gave to the People of almost all Nations but their own.

GIVE me leave to finish this Digression, which is grown already longer than I forefaw, or intended.

As I returned the fame Way from the Lowlands, I found the Officer, with his Party of working Soldiers, not far from the Stone, and asked him what was become of the Urn?

ve,

X-

a

in

it,

en

ne

ife

ner

e-

er

ıy,

it

rer

lly

nat

ito

he

ut

ıt-

by

of

h;

fa

no

find

n-

ar

es

ıft

or

he

e-

s,

0-

ed

To this he answered, that he had intended to preserve it in the Condition I left it, till the Commander in Chief had feen it as a Curiofity; but that it was not in his Power fo to do, for foon after the Discovery was known to the Highlanders, they affembled from diftant Parts, and having formed themselves into a Body, they carefully gathered up the Relicks, and marched with them in folemn Procession to a new Place of Burial, and there difcharged their Fire-Arms over the Grave, as supposing the Deceased had been a military Officer.

You will believe the Recital of all this Ceremony led me to ask the Reason of such Homage done to the Ashes of a Person, supposed to have been dead almost two thousand Years. It did so; and the Officer, who is himself a Native of the Hills, told me, that they (the Highlanders) firmly believe, that if a dead Body should be known to lie above Ground, or be difinterred by Malice, or the Accidents of Torrents of Water, &c. and Care was not immediately taken to perform to it the proper Rites, then there would arise such Storms and Tempests, as would destroy their Corn, blow away their Huts, and all Sorts of other Misfortunes would follow, till that Duty was performed. You may here recollect what I told you so long ago of the great Regard the Highlanders have for the Remains of their Dead; but this Notion is entirely Roman.

Bur

Bur to return to my main Purpose: In the Summer Seasons, 500 of the Soldiers from the Barracks, and other Quarters about the Highlands, were employed in those Works in different Stations, by Detachments from the Regiments and Highland Companies.

The private Men were allowed Six-pence a Day, over and above their Pay as Soldiers: A Corporal had Eight-pence, and a Serjeant a Shilling; but this Extra-pay was only for working Days, which were often interrupted by violent Storms of Wind and Rain, from the Heights and Hollows of the Mountains.

THESE Parties of Men were under the Command and Direction of proper Officers, who were all Subalterns, and received two Shillings and Sixpence per Diem, to defray their extraordinary Expence in building Huts, making necessary Provision for their Tables from distant Parts; unavoidable, though unwelcome, Vifits, and other Incidents arifing from their wild Situation.

I SHOULD have told you before, that the noncommissioned Officers were constant and immediate Overfeers of the Works.

THE Standard-Breadth of these Roads, as laid down at the first Projection, is fixteen Feet; but in some Parts, where there were no very expensive Difficulties, they are wider.

In those Places (as I have faid before) they are carried on in straight Lines, till some great Necesfity has turned them out of the Way; the rest which run along upon the Declivities of Hills, you pear know, must have their Circuits, Risings, and Descents accordingly.

To stop and take a general View of the Hills Ford before you, from an Eminence, in some Part where gidd the Eye penetrates far within the void Spaces, the Roads would appear to you in a Kind of whimfical High

Diforder;

D

to

H

by

Di

Ro

bre

am

cat

and

Pla

in fho

the

wit

Par

bel

of

of t

WIC

app

Lin

here

tion

 $\dim$ line

to S

fue

Ί

conf

the

the

nds,

ons,

and

Day,

oral

but hich

7 ind

the

om-

were

Six-

Ex-

ision

ble,

ents

non-

diate

laid

and

rder;

Disorder; and as those Parts of them that appear to you, are of a very different Colour from the Heath that chiefly cloaths the Country, they may by that Contrast be traced out to a considerable Distance.

Now let us suppose, that where you are, the Road is visible to you for a short Space, and is then broke off to the Sight, by a Hollow or Winding among the Hills; beyond that Interruption the Eye catches a small Part on the Side of another Hill, and fome again on the Ridge of it; in another Place farther off the Road appears to run Ziczag, in Angles, up a steep Declivity. In one Place, a fhort horizontal Line shews itself below, in another the Marks of the Road feem to be almost even with the Clouds, &c.

IT may here be objected --- How can you fee any Part of the flat Roof of a Building, when you are below? The Question would be just, but the Edges of the Roads on a Precipice, and the broken Parts of the Face of the Mountain behind, that has been wrought into, to make Room for the Road; these appear, and discover to those who are below, the Line of which I have been speaking.

Thus the Eye catches one Part of the Road but here, another there, in different Lengths and Posinsive tions; and, according to their Distance, they are diminished and rendered fainter and fainter, by the are lineal and aerial Perspective, till they are entirely lost ecef. to Sight. And I need not tell you, that as you purrest sue your Progress, the Scene changes to new Apyou pearances.

THE old Ways (for Roads I shall not call them) confisted chiefly of stony Moors, Bogs, rugged rapid Hills Fords, Declivities of Hills; entangling Woods, and giddy Precipices. You will fay this is a dreadful the Catalogue to be read to him that is about to take a Highland Journey.

IHAVE

I HAVE not mentioned the Valleys, for they are few in Number, far divided afunder; and generally the Roads through them were eafily made.

My Purpose now is to give you some Account of the Nature of the particular Parts above-mentioned, and the Manner how this extraordinary Work has been executed, and this I shall do in the Order I have ranged them as above.

And first, the Stony Moors; these are mostly Tracts of Ground of several Miles in Length, and often very high, with frequent lesser Risings and Descents, and having for Surface a Mixture of Stones and Heath. The Stones are fixed in the Earth, being very large and unequal, and generally are as deep in the Ground as they appear above it, and where there are any Spaces between the Stones there is a loose spungy Sward, perhaps not above five or fix Inches deep, and incapable to produce any Thing but Heath, and all beneath it is hard Gravel or Rock.

I NOW begin to be apprehensive of your Memory, lest it should point out some Repetitions of Descriptions contained in my former Letters; but I have been thus particular, because I know the Extent of your Journeys, and that with you a Morass is called a Moor; yet Hills that are something of this Nature are called Moors in the North of England.

HERE the Workmen first made room to fix their Instruments, and then, by Strength, and the Help of those two mechanic Powers, the Screw and the Lever, they raised out of their ancient Beds those massive Bodies, and then filling up the Cavities with Gravel, set them up mostly endways along the Sides of the Road, as Directions in time of deep Snows, being some of them, as they now stand, eight or nine Feet high. They serve likewise as Memorials of the Skill and Labour requisite to the Performance of so difficult a Work.

IN

S

lo

th

th

P

T

th

VE

w

be

be

25 th

W

w ol

01

10 th

th

ar

F

if

de

th

D

ft

in

01 ai

tl

In some particular Spots where there was a proper Space beside the Stones, the Workmen dug Hollows, and, by undermining, dropt them in, where they lie buried so securely, as never more to retard the Traveller's Journey; but it was thought a moot Point, even where it was successful, whether any Time or Labour was saved by this Practice; for those Pits, for the most part, required to be made very deep and wide, and it could not be foreseen, without continual boring, whether there might not be Rock above the necessary Depth, which might be a Disappointment after great Labour.

THE Roads on these Moors are now as smooth as Constitution Hill, and I have galloped on some of them for Miles together in great Tranquillity, which was heightened by Reslection on my former Fatigue, when, for a great Part of the Way, I had been obliged to quit my Horse, it being too dangerous, or impracticable to ride, and even hazardous to pass on Foot.

are

rally

nt of

ned,

has

ler I

offly

and

and

e of

the

ene-

bove

the

not

pro-

it is

ory,

have it of s is

this

nd.

heir

Help

the hose

with

Sides

ows,

rials

ance

IN

The BOGS.

THERE be two Species of them, viz. Bogs, and those the Natives call Peat-Mosses, which yield them their Firing, many of the former are very large, and sometimes fill up the whole Space between the Feet of the Mountains: They are mostly not much, if any thing, above the Level of the Sea, but I don't know that any Part of the Road is carried through them, or think it practicable; yet, as any Description of them may be new to you, I shall stop a while to give you some Account of my trotting one of them, which is reckoned about a Mile over.

My Affairs engaging me to reside for some time among the Hills, I resolved, and was preparing to make a distant Visit, but was told, that a Hill, at the Foot of which I lived, was, in the Descent

from

from it, exceeding steep and stony; I was therefore prevailed with to have my Horses led a round-about

Way, and to meet me on the other Side.

In lieu of that difficult Way I was to be ferried over a Lake, and to traverse the Bog abovementioned, over which a Highlander undertook to conduct me; him I followed close at the Heels, because I soon observed he used a Step unlike to what he did upon firm Ground, and which I could not presently imitate, and also that he chose his Way, here, and there, as if he knew where was the least Danger, although, at the same time, the Surface of the Part we were going over seemed to me to be equally indifferent in respect to Safety and Danger.

Our Weight and the Spring of Motion in many Parts, caused a Shaking all round about us, and the Compression made the Water rise through the Sward, which was in some Parts a Kind of short slaggy Grass, and, in others, a fort of mostly Heath; but wherever any Rushes grew, I knew, by Experience of the Peat-Mosses I had gone over before, that it was not far to the Bottom.

THIS Rising of Water made me conclude (for my Guide was not intelligible to me) that we had nothing but a Liquid under us, or at most, something like a Quick-sand, and that the Sward was only a little toughned by the Intwining of the Roots, and was supported, like Ice, only by Water, or fomething near as fluid.

I SHALL give you no Particulars of my Visit, further than that the Laird treated me in a very handsome and plentiful manner, and, indeed, it was his Interest so to do. But poor Poke-pudding was so fatigued, and so apprehensive of Danger on the Bog, that he could not be persuaded to go back again the same Way.

Acco

ow

xan

hen

Vo

ever

hel

red

re

affa

hey

ndu

anc

ur '

hat

uel

wer

be

ian

boy

bou

m

Ís

us.

A

n

ke i

ug

ew

e l

fu

igh

lof

ho

The MOSSES.

fore

ried

en-

on-

be er.

any

the

ort

offy

ew,

ver

(for had

me-

was the

Va-

fur-

nd-

his

fa-

og,

the

The

out OF these I formerly gave you some superficial Account, but now that I am about to let you know ow the Roads were made through them, I shall xamine them to the Bottom. When I first faw hem, I imagined they were formerly made when be-Voods were common in the Hills, but fince, by hat everal repeated Laws, destroyed to take away that not helter which affifted the Highlanders in their Deay, redations; I fay, I have supposed the Leaves of east frees were driven by Winds, and lodged in their face affage, from time to time, in those Cavities till hey were filled up. One thing among others that duced me to this Belief is, that the muddy Subance of them is much like the rotted Leaves in and ur Woods; but fince that time I have been told, at when one of them has been quite exhausted for uel, it has grown again, and in the Course of venty Years has been as fit to be dug for Firing before. This I can believe, because I have seen any small ones, far from any Inhabitants, swelled ove the Surface of the Ground that lies all round out them, and chiefly in the Middle, so as to beme a Protuberance, and therefore by Strangers the is fuspected, though the deeper and more danger-

ALL beneath the Turf is a fpungy Earth interwon with a flender fibrous Vegetable, fomething ke the smallest Roots of a Shrub, and these a little ughen it, and contribute to the making it good ewel; but when they are quite, or near, dug out, e Pit is generally almost filled with Water. This, suppose, arises from Springs which may, for ght I know, have been the first Occasion of these offes, which are very deceitful, especially to those to are not accustomed to them, being mostly vered with Heath, like the rest of the Country; and in time of Rains become foft, and fometimes impassable on Foot.

Now, that I have no further Occasion for any Distinction, I shall call every fost Place a Bog, except there be Occasion sometimes to vary the Phrase.

WHEN one of these Bogs has crossed the Way on a stony Moor, there the loose Ground has been dug out down to the Gravel or Rock, and the Hollow filled up in manner following, viz.

FIRST with a Layer of large Stones, then fmaller Size to fill up the Gaps and raise the Causey higher, and, lastly, two, three, or more Feet of Gravel to fill up the Interstices of the small Stones, and form a fmooth and binding Surface. This Part of the Road has a Bank on each Side to separate from a Ditch which is made without-fide to receive the Water from the Bog, and, if the Ground will allow it, to convey it by a Trench to a Slope, and thereby in some measure drain it.

In a rocky Way, where no loofe Stones were to be found, if a Bog intervened, and Trees could be had at any portable Distance, the Road has been made folid by Timber and Fascines, crowned with Gravel dug out of the Side of some Hill.

THIS is durable, for the Faggots and Trees lying continually in the Moisture of the Bog will, instead of decaying, become extremely hard, as has been formerly observed of Trees that have been plunged into those Sloughs and lain there, in all Probability, for many Ages. This Causey has likewise a Bank and a Ditch for the Purposes abovementioned.

THERE is one Bog .I passed through (literally fpeaking) which is upon the Declivity of a Hill; there the Mud has been dug away for a proper Space, and thrown upon the Bog on either Side, and a Passage made at the Foot of the Hill for the Water to run down into a large Cavity, infomuch,

th

ve

W

Si

go fo

W

yo

Pe

Inc

rap

Be

Sto

in

by

lar

Riv

to f ord

Ide

nev

Ro

Wa

Peo

hap

whi

and

fron

Sto

of t

lidi

ime

any

ex-

the

Way

been

Hol-

en a

et of

ones,

Part

ite it

ceive

will

and

re to ld be

been

with ying

flead

been

nged

ility,

Bank

rally

Hill

oper

Side,

r the

uch,

that

that by continual draining, I rode, as it were, in a very shallow Rivulet running down the Hill upon a Rock (which was made smooth by the Workmen) with the Sides of the Bog high above me on both Sides, like one of the hollow Ways in England.

I MUST desire you will consider, that the aforegoing Descriptions, as well as those that are to follow are, and will be, only Specimens of the Work, for it would be almost without End to give you all the Particulars of so various and extensive a Performance.

FORDS.

No Remedy but Bridges has been found for the Inconveniencies and Hazards of these rugged and rapid Passages, for when some of them, in the Beginning, were cleared from the large loose Stones, the next Inundation brought down others in their Room, which else would have been stopped by the Way, and some of those were of a much larger Size than the Stones that had been removed.

This was the Case (among others) of a small River, which, however, was exceeding dangerous to ford, and, for that reason, the first Bridge was ordered to be built over it; but it gave me a lively Idea how short is human Foresight, especially in new Projects and untried Undertakings.

THE Spring of the Arch was founded upon Rocks, and it was elevated much above the highest Water that had ever been known by the Country People; yet, some time after it was finished, there happened a sudden Torrent from the Mountains, which brought down Trees and Pieces of Rocks, and by its being placed too near the Issue of Water from between two Hills, though firmly built with Stone, it was cropt off not far beneath the Crown of the Arch, as if it had neither Weight nor Solidity.

DECLIVITIES.

DECLIVITIES.

By these I mean the sloping Sides of the Hills whereon the new Roads are made.

THE former Ways along those Slopes were only Paths worn by the Feet of the Highlanders and their little Garrons. They ran along upwards and downwards, one above another, in such manner as was found most convenient at the first tracing them out; this, I think, I have observed to you formerly.

To these narrow Paths the Passenger was confined (for there is seldom any Choice of the Way you would take in the Highlands) by the Impassibility of the Hollows at the Feet of the Mountains, because those Spaces, in some Parts, are filled up with deep Bogs, or fallen Rocks, of which last I have seen many as big as a middling House, and looking up, have observed others at an exceeding Height, in some Measure parted from the main Rock, and threatening the Crush of some of those below. In other Parts there are Lakes beneath, and sometimes, where there were none, it was only by these Paths you could ascend the Hills, still proceeding round the Sides of them from one to another.

THERE the new Roads have been carried on in more regular Curves than the old Paths, and are dug into the Hills which are floped away above them; and where any Rocks have occurred in the Performance, they have been bored and blown away with Gunpowder.

ABOVE the Road are Trenches made to receive Rains, melting Snows, and Springs, which last are in many Places continually issuing out of the Sides of the Hills, being drained away from large Waters collected in Lakes and other Cavities, above, in the Mountains.

FROM

Ch

Hi

bei

rec

the

fro

Ro

tion

the

that

cut

ran

Par

nies

as to

as I

the

Afce

fage

Diff

·I

conf

Corio

in t

gusti

dicu

Sold

ing

anot

Road

From the abovementioned Trenches are proper Channels made to convey the Water down the Hills; these are secured by firm Pavement from being gulled by the Stream, and in Places that required it, there are Stone Walls built behind the Road to prevent the Fall of Earth or Stones from the broken Part of the Declivity.

ills

ily

ind

ind

as em or-

on-ay

ffi-

ns,

rith

ave

ing

tht,

and

In me-

nese

ling

n in dug

eive

ROM

WOODS.

THESE are not only rare in the Way of the new Roads, but I have formerly given you some Description of the Inconvenience and Danger of one of them, and therefore, I shall only add in this Place, that the Trees, for the necessary Space, have been cut down and grub'd up; their fibrous Roots that ran about upon the Surface destroyed, the boggy Part removed; the Rock smoothed, and the Crannies firmly filled up, and all this in fuch manner as to make of it a very commodious Road.

STEEP ASCENTS.

As the Heights, for the most Part, are attained, as I have been faying, by going round the Sides of the Hills from one to another, the exceeding steep Ascents are not very common in the ordinary Pasfages, but where they are, the Inconvenience and Difficulties of them have been removed.

em; I shall only instance in one, which, indeed is for-confessed to be the worst of them all. This is the with Coriarack Mountain, beforementioned, which rifes in the Way that leads from Dalwhinny to Fort Augustus. It is above a Quarter of a Mile of perpendicular Height, and was passed by sew, besides the Soldiery when the Garrisons were changed, as being the nearest Way from one of the Barracks to another; and had it not been for the Conveniency of that Communication, this Part of the new Roads had never been thought of.

THIS

THIS Mountain is fo near the Perpendicular, in wh fome Parts, that it was doubtful whether the Pal-Ma fenger, after great Labour, should get upwards, or return much quicker than he advanced.

THE Road over it, not to mention much Roughness (which I believe you have had enough of by this time, and are likely to have more) is carried on upon the South Declivity of the Hill by feventeen Traverses (like the Course of a Ship when she is turning to Windward) by Angles still advancing higher and higher; yet little of it is to be feen below, by Reason of Flats, Hollows, and Windings, that intercept the Sight, and nothing could give you a general View of it, unless one could be supposed to be placed high above the Mountain in the Air. This is much unlike your Hills in the South, that in some convenient Situation of the Eye are seen in one continued smooth Slope from the Bottom to the Top.

EACH of the abovementioned Angles is about feventy or eighty Yards in Length, except in a few Places where the Hill would not admit of all that Extent.

THESE Traverses upward, and the Turnings of their Extremities are supported on the Out-side of the Road by Stone Walls from ten to fifteen Feel in Height.

Thus that steep Ascent, which was so difficult to be attained, even by the Foot-passenger, is rendered every where more easy for Wheel-carriage than Highgate Hill.

On the North Side of this Mountain, at a Place named Snugburgh, from its Situation, there is a narrow Pass between two exceeding high and steep Hills. These are joined together by two Arche supported by Walls, to take off the Sharpness of the short Descent, which otherwise could not have been practicable for the lightest Wheel-carriage whatever

the

paf

der

daf

tha

feve

fho

Bog

I th

the

the

upo

nece

fmo

ters,

Pre

to w

the l

man

vera

Yet.

High

of th

Horf

the S

is th

Year

scrib

T

N

I

E

, in whatever, for it was difficult even for Horse or Paf-Man.

PRECIPICES.

ards,

Air.

feen

m to

few

Feet

ficult

ren-

fleep

rches

efs o

have

riage ever

I SHALL fay nothing in this Place of fuch of ughthem as are any thing tolerable to the Mind, in f by passing them over, though a false Step might renrried der them fatal, as there would be no stopping till venthe dashed against the Rocks. I shall only mention two cing that are the most terrible, which I have gone over feveral Times, but always occasionally, not as the beshortest Way, or by Choice, but to avoid extensive ngs, Bogs, or swelling Waters in Time of Rain, which offer I thought more dangerous in the other Way.

ONE of these Precipices is on the North Side of the Murray Frith, where no Roads have been made; that the other is on a Mountain, fouthward of this Town.

BOTH thefe, as I have faid above, were useful upon Occasion; but the latter is now rendered unnecessary, as the old round-about Way is made bout smooth, and Bridges built over the dangerous Waters, and therefore nothing has been done to this that Precipice. Nor indeed was it thought practicable to widen the Path, by Reason of the Steepness of gs of the Side of the Hill that rifes above it.

I THINK the ordinary Proverb was never more manifestly verified, than it now is, in these two several Ways; viz. That the farthest Way about, &c. Yet, I make no Doubt, the Generality of the Highlanders will prefer the Precipice to the Gravel iages of the Road, and a greater Number of Steps.

Not far from this steep Place, I once baited my Horses with Oats, carried with me, and laid upon the Snow in the Month of July. And indeed it is there, instead of Rain, Snow, or Sleet, all the Year round.

Thus far I have, chiefly, in general Terms described the Difficulties that attended the making

of

ob

Εı

tu.

be

te

of

th

be

Sc

M

fta

fr

VU

th

R

by

ve

an

Si

P

in

(b ar

in 0 fe

th

ab

hu

new Roads, and the Methods taken to furmount them, which was all I at first intended; but as fome of the greatest Obstacles, which yet remain undescribed, were met with in the Way between this Town and Fort William. I shall, previous to any Account of them, endeavour to give you fome Idea of this Passage between the Mountains, wherein lies no small Part of the Roads; and this I shall the rather do, because that Hollow, for Length and Figure, is unlike any Thing of the Kind I have feen in other Parts of the Highlands; and I hope to accomplish all that I have to fay of it, before I leave this Town, being very shortly to make a Northern Progress among the Hills, wherein I shall find none of those Conveniencies we now have on this Side the Murray Frith.

This Opening would be a furprizing Profpect to fuch as have never feen a high Country, being a Mixture of Mountains, Waters, Heath, Rocks, Precipices, and fcattered Trees; and that for so long an Extent, in which the Eye is confined within the Space. And therefore, if I should pretend to give you a full Idea of it, I should put myself in the Place of one that has had a strange preposterous Dream, and because it has made a strong Impression on him, he fondly thinks he can convey it to others in the same Likeness, as it remains painted on his Memory; and in the End wonders at the Coldness with which it was received.

This Chasm begins about four Miles West of Inverness, and running across the Island, divides the northern from the southern Highlands. It is chiefly taken up by Lakes bounded on both Sides by high Mountains, which almost every where (being very steep at the Feet) run down exceeding deep into the Water. The first of the Lakes, beginning from the East, is Loch-Ness, which I have formerly mentioned. It lies in a Line, along the Middle of it, as direct as an artificial Canal. This I have observed myself from a rising Ground at the East End, by directing a small Telescope to Fort Augustus, at the other Extreme.

ount

ut as

main

ween

is to fome

nere-

fhall

ngth

have

e to

eave

hern

find

this

ped

ng a

Pre-

long

give

the

rous

oref-

t to

the

It of

s the iefly high

very

into ning ner-

ddle

0

I HAVE said it is straight by the Middle only, because the Sides are irregular, being so made by the jutting of the Feet of the Hills into the Water on either Side, as well as by the Spaces between them; and the various Breadths of different Parts of the Lake.

THE Depth, the Nature of the Water, and the remarkable Cataracts on the South Side, have been occasionally mentioned in former Letters; and I think I have told you, it is one and twenty Scots Miles in Length, and from one to near two Miles in Breadth.

It has hardly any perceptible Current, notwith-flanding it receives a vast Conflux of Waters from the bordering Mountains, by Rivers and Rivulets that discharge themselves into it; yet all the Water that visibly runs from it, in the greatest Rains, is limited in its Course by the River Ness, by which it has its Issue into the Sea, and that River is not in some Places above twenty Yards wide, and therefore I think the greatest Part of the Supersluity must be drained away by subterraneous Passages.

I HAVE told you long ago, that it never freezes in the calmest and severest Frost; and by its Depth (being in some Parts 360 Yards) and by its Breadth, and the violent Winds that pass through the Opening, it often has a Swell not much inferior to the Ocean.

In several Parts on the Sides of the Lake, you see Rocks of a Kind of coarse black Marble, and I think as hard as the best; these rise to a considerable Height, which never till lately were trod by human Foot, for the old Way made a considerable Circuit from this Lake, and did not come to it, but at the West-End. In other Places are Woods upon the steep Declivities, which serve to abate the Deformity of those Parts; I say abate, for the Trees being, as I faid above, confusedly scattered one above another, they do not hide them. All the rest is Heath and Rock.

Q4

able

Some Time ago, there was a Veffel of about five and twenty or thirty Tons Burthen built at the East End of this Lake, and called the Highland Gally.

SHE carries fix or eight Pattereroes, and is employed to transport Men, Provision, and Baggage to Fort Augustus, at the other End of the Lake.

THE Master has an Appointment from the Government, to navigate this Vessel, and to keep her in Repair.

WHEN she made her first Trip, she was mightily adorned with Colours, and fired her Guns feveral Times, which was a strange Sight to the Highlanders, who had never feen the like before; at least, on that in-land Lake.

For my own Part, I was not less amused with the Sight of a good Number of Highland Men and Women upon the highest Part of a Mountain over-against us; I mean the highest that appeared to our View.

THESE People, I suppose, were brought to the Precipice, from some Flat behind, by the Report of the Guns (for even a fingle Voice is understood at an incredible Height.) And as they stood, they appeared to the naked Eye, not to be a Foot high in Stature: But by the Affiftance of a pretty long Glass, I could plainly see their Surprize And I must confess I wondered, and Admiration. not much less, to see so many People on such a monstrous Height, who could not inhabit there in Winter; till I reflected it was the Time of the Year

for

fo

to

ou

th be

for

we

we

the

litt

the

1S M

nir

wh

the

the Ea

Sea

a S rer WI

and if i

Na

div

Mi

the

a ]

Pla

Ric

the

oth thr for them to go up to their Sheelings. And I was told that they, like us, were not far from a spacious Lake, tho' in that elevated Situation.

I NEED not trouble you with a Description of the other two Waters and their Boundaries, there being but little Difference between them and the former; only here the old Ways, such as they were, ran along upon the Sides of the Hills, which were in a great Measure rocky Precipices, and that these Lakes are not quite so wide, and incline a little more to the Southward of the West, than the other.

THE next Lake to Locb-Nefs (which, as I have faid, is 21 Miles in Length) is Locb-Oick; this is four Miles long, and Loch Lochy, the last of the three is nine, in all 34 Miles, Part of the 48, which is the whole Length of the Opening, and at the End thereof is Fort William on the West Coast, to which the Sea slows, as it does likewise to Inverness on the East. Thus the whole Extent of Ground between Sea and Sea, is but sourteen Miles.

HERE I must stop a little to acquaint you with a Spot of Ground, which I take to be something remarkable. This I had passed over several Times, without observing any Thing extraordinary in it, and perhaps should never have taken Notice of it, if it had not been pointed out to me by one of the

Natives.

to

ods

the

ees

ove

is

out

the

and

m-

age

30-

her

ıti-

fe-

the

e;

ith

len

ain

red

the

ort

er-

od,

oot

tty

ed,

n-

in-

ear

ABOUT the Middle of the Neck of Land, that divides the Lakes Oick and Lochy, (which is but one Mile) not far from the Center of the Opening, there descends from the Hills, on the South-Side, a Burne or Rivulet, which, as it falls upon the Plain, divides into two Streams, without any visible Ridge to part them. And one of them runs through the Lakes Oick and Ness into the East-Sea, and the other takes the quite contrary Course, and passes through Loch Lochy, into the Western Ocean.

Q5 This,

This, and the short Space of Land abovementioned, have given Birth to several Projects for making a navigable Communication across the Island; not only to divide, effectually, the Highlands by the Middle, but to save the tedious, costly, and hazardous Voyages through St. George's Channel, or otherwise round by the Isles of Orkney.

This Spot, the Projectors say, is a Level between the two Seas, pointed out as it were by the Hand of Nature; and they pretend the Space of Land to be cut through is practicable.

But it would be an incredible Expence to cut fourteen navigable Miles in so rocky a Country, and there is yet a stronger Objection, which is, that the whole Opening lies in so direct a Line, and the Mountains that bound it, are so high, the Wind is confined in its Passage as it were in the Nozel of a Pair of Bellows; so that, let it blow from what Quarter it will, without the Opening, it never varies much from East or West within.

This would render the Navigation fo precarious, that hardly any Body would venture on it, not to mention the violent Flurries of Wind that rush upon the Lakes by Squalls from the Spaces between the Hills, and also the rocky Shores, want of Harbour, and Anchorage; and perhaps there might appear other unforeseen Inconveniencies and Dangers, if it were possible the Work could be compleated.

THERE are three Garrisons in this Line, which reaches from East to West, viz. Fort George at Inverness, Fort Augustus at Killichumen, and Fort William in Lochaber, and every one of them pretty equally distant from one another; and the Line might be made yet more effectual by Redoubts, at proper Distances between them, to prevent the sudden joining of Numbers, ill affected to the Government.

HAVING

a

ab

F

n

is

h er St

th

do

to br

Fe

w

U ria

fec

the

HAVING given you some Account of this Chasm, I shall, in the next Place, say something of the Road that lies quite through it, together with some Dissiculties that attended the Work, of which all that Part which runs along near the Edges of the Lakes, is on the South Side; but as I have already bestowed so many Words upon Subjects partly like this, I shall confine myself to very sew Particulars, and of the rest, which may come under those former Descriptions, I need say no more, if I have been intelligible.

I SHALL begin with that Road, which goes along above Loch-Ness.

en-

for

the

igh-

ftly,

han-

veen

nd of

be be cut

try,

that

the

nd is of a

what ever

ious,

t to

up-

ween

Har-

right

Dan-

com-

hich

e at

Fort

retty

Line

s, at fud-

ern-

ING

This is entirely new, as I have hinted before, and indeed I might fay the same of every Part, but I mean there was no Way at all along the Edge of this Lake, till this Part of the Road was made.

IT is, good Part of it, made out of Rocks, but among them all I shall mention but one, which is of a great Length; and, as I have said before, as hard as Marble.

THERE the Miners hung by Ropes from the Precipice over the Water (like Shakespear's Gatherers of Samphire from Dover Cliffs) to bore the Stone, in order to blow away a necessary Part from the Face of it, and the rest likewise was chiesly done by Gunpowder; but when any Part was fit to be left as it was, being slat and smooth, it was brought to a Roughness proper for a Stay to the Feet, and in this Part, and all the rest of the Road, where the Precipices were like to give Horror or Uneasiness to such as might pass over them in Carriages, tho' at a good Distance from them, they are secured to the Lake-side by Walls, either left in the Working, or built up with Stone, to a Height proportioned to the Occasion.

Now, for the Space of twelve Miles, it is an even Terrass in every Part, from whence the Lake may be seen from End to End, and from whence the romantick Prospect of the rugged Mountains would, I dare say, for its Novelty, be more entertaining to you, than it is to me; I say it might be agreeable to you, who, not having these hideous Productions of Nature near you, wantonly procure even bad Imitations of them in little artificial Rocks, and diminutive Cataracts of Water. But as some Painters travel to Italy, in order to study or copy the most admirable Performances of the great Masters, for their own Instruction, so I would advise your Artisans, in that Way, to visit this Country for their better Information.

THE next Part of this Road, which I am about to speak of, is that which lies along the Side of the Hills, arifing from the Edge of Loch Oick.

THE Dangers of this Part of the old Way began at the Top of a steep Ascent, of about fifty or fixty Yards from the little Plain that parts this Lake and Locb-Ness; and not far from the Summit is a Part they call the Maiden's-Leap, of which they tell a strange romantick Story, not worth the Remembrance. There the Rocks project over the Lake, and the Path was so rugged and narrow, that the Highlanders were obliged, for their Sasety, to hold by the Rocks and Shrubs as they passed, with the Prospect of Death beneath them.

This was not the only dangerous Part, but for three Miles together, Part of the four (which I have faid is the Length of this Lake) it was no where fafe, and in many Places more difficult, and as dangerous, as at the Entrance; for the Rocks were so steep and uneven, that the Passenger was obliged to creep on his Hands and Knees.

THESE Precipices were so formidable, to some, that they chose rather to cross the Plain abovementioned,

t

H

a

h

O

e

0

a

a

0 d

tl

d fu

V

A

th

01

pa

tioned, and wade a River on the opposite Side of the Opening, which by others was thought more hazardous in its Kind, than the Way which their Fear excited them to avoid; and when they had passed that Water, they had a wide Circuit to make among steep and rugged Hills, before they could get again into the Way they were to go.

THE last Part of the Road along the Lakes (as I have divided it into three) runs along on the Declivities of Loch Lochy, and reaches the whole Length of that Lake, which, as I have said before, is nine Miles.

an

he

m

red

be

efe

n-

tle

a-

ler

ces

fo

ifit

out

he

an

cty

nd

art l a

mke,

he blo

he

for ive

ere

ın-

fo

to ne,

ed,

This was much of the same Nature, as the last, exceeding steep, with Rocks in several Places, hanging over the Water, and required a great Quantity of Gunpowder; but both this, and the other two, are now as commodious as any other of the Roads in the Highlands, which every where (bating Ups and Downs) are equal in Goodness to the best in England.

I SHALL say nothing of the Way from the End of this Lake to Fort William, any more than I have done of the Road from Inverness to Loch Ness, or the Spaces between the Lakes; because they may be comprehended in the ordinary Difficulties already described.

But I might acquaint you with many other Obstacles which were thought, at first, to be infurmountable; such as Slock Moach, between Ruthven and Inverness, the rocky Pass of Killicranky in Athol, between Dunkeld and the Blair, &c.

I SHALL only say, that I have formerly given you some Description of the first, but without a Name, in the Account of an Incursion I made to the Hills from Inverness; but both this and the other, which were very bad, are now made easily passable.

THE Name of Slock Moach is interpreted by the Natives, a Den of Hogs, having been, as they fay it was formerly, a noted Harbour for Thieves; who, in Numbers, lay in wait within that narrow and deep Cavity, to commit their Depredations upon Cattle and Passengers. I suppose this Name was given to it, when Swine were held in Abomination among the Highlanders.

THE first Design of removing a vast fallen Piece of a Rock, was entertained by the Country People with great Derision; of which I saw one Instance myself.

A VERY old wrinkled Highland Woman, upon fuch an Occasion, standing over against me, when the Soldiers were fixing their Engines, seemed to sneer at it, and said something to an Officer of one of the Highland Companies. I imagined she was making a Jest of the Undertaking, and ask'd the Officer what she said? I will tell you her Words, said he:

"What are the Fools doing? That Stone will "lie there for ever for all them." But when she saw that vast Bulk begin to rise, though by slow Degrees, she set up a hideous Irish Yell, took to her Heels, run up the Side of a Hill just by, like a young Girl, and never looked behind her, while she was within our Sight. I make no Doubt she thought it was Magick, and the Workmen Warlocks.

This, indeed, was the Effect of an old Woman's Ignorance and Superstition; but a Gentleman, esteemed for his good Understanding, when he had seen the Experiment of the first Rock above Loch Ness, he said to the Officer that directed the Work, "When first I heard of this Undertaking, I was

" ftrangely scandalized to think how shamefully you would come off; but now I am convinced

" there

" there is nothing can stand before you and Gun-

" powder."

e

; W

18

e

į-

e

e

e

n

n

0

le.

15

ne

S,

11

ne-

e-

er

a

le

ne-

r-

's

n,

ad

cb

k,

as

ly

ed:

re

NOTWITHSTANDING there may be no Remains of my former Letters, I believe your Memory may help you to reflect what wretched Lodging there was in the Highlands, when those Epistles were written. This Evil is now remedied, as far as could be done, and in that Road, where there were none but Huts of Turf for a hundred Miles together, there now, are Houses with Chimneys, built with Stone and Lime, at ten or twelve Miles Diftance one from another; and tho' they are not large, yet are they well enough adapted to the Occasion of Travellers, who are seldom many at a Time in that Country. But I would not be underflood, that there is any better Accommodation than before, befides warm Lodging. Another Thing is, there are Pillars fet up at the End of every five Miles, mostly upon Eminences, which may not only amuse the Passenger, and lessen the Tediousness of the Way, but prevent his being deceived in Point of Time, in Rain, Snow, Drift, or approaching Night.

But the last, and I think the greatest Conveniency, is the Bridges; which prevent the Dangers of the terrible Fords.

Or these I shall say but little, because to you they are no Novelty. They are forty in Number, some of them single Arches of forty or sifty Feet diameter, mostly sounded upon Rocks, others are composed of two; one of three, and one of sive Arches. This last is over the Tay, and is the only Bridge upon that wild River, as has been said before. It is built with Astler-Stone, and is 370 Feet in Length. The middle Arch is 60 Feet Diameter, and it bears the following Inscription, made Latin from the English, as I have been told, by Dr. Friend, Master of Westminster School.

Mirare

Mirare
Viam banc Militarem Ultra Romanos Terminos
M. Passum CCL. bac illac extensam Tesquis & Paludibus insultantem Per Rupes Montesque patesactam Et indignanti Tavo
Ut cernis instratam Opus boc arduum sua solertia Et decennali Militum Opera Anno Ær. Christæ 1733, persecit G. Wade.
Copiarum in Scotia Præsectus.
Ecce quantum valeant Regia Georgii Secundi Auspicia!

The Objections made to these new Roads and Bridges, by some in the several Degrees of Condition among the Highlanders, are, in Part, as follow, viz.

I. THOSE Chiefs and other Gentlemen complain, that thereby an easy Passage is opened into their Country for Strangers, who, in Time, by their Suggestions of Liberty, will destroy or weaken that Attachment of their Vassals, which is so necessary for them to support and preserve.

0

A

b

C

du

do

F

St

of

ric

fug

Il

of

the

En

all

THAT their Fastnesses being laid open, they are deprived of that Security from Invasion, which they formerly enjoyed.

THAT the Bridges, in particular, will render the ordinary People effeminate, and less fit to pass the Waters in other Places, where there are none.

AND there is a pecuniary Reason, concealed, relating to some foreign Courts, which, to you, I need not explain.

II. THE middling Order say, the Roads are to them an Inconvenience, instead of being useful, as they have turned them out of their old Ways; for their Horses, being never shod, the Gravel would soon whet away their Hoofs, so as to render them unserviceable.

unserviceable. Whereas the Rocks and Moor-Stones, though together they make a rough Way, yet, considered separately, they are generally pretty smooth on the Surface where they tread, and the Heath is always easy to their Feet. To this I have been inconsiderately asked, why then do they not shoe their Horses?

THIS Question is easily put, and costs nothing but a few various Sounds. But where is the Iron, the Forge, the Farrier, the People, within a reasonable Distance to maintain him? And lastly, where is the principal Requisite, Money?

III. THE lowest Class, who, many of them, at some Times, cannot compass a Pair of Shoes for themselves, they alledge that the Gravel is intelerable to their naked Feet; and the Complaint has extended to their thin Brogues.

d

72

-

0 n

e

e

e

-

I

0

IS

r đ

n

It is true they do fometimes, for these Reasons, go without the Road, and ride or walk in very incommodious Ways. This has induced some of our Countrymen, especially such as have been at Minorca (where Roads of this Kind have likewise been made) to accuse the Highlanders of Spanish Obstinacy, in refusing to make use of so great a Conveniency; purely, because it is a Novelty introduced by the English. But why do the black Cattle do the same Thing? Certainly for the Ease of their Feet.

Nor can I believe that either Highlanders or Spaniards are such Fools as to deprive themselves of any considerable Benefit, upon a Principle so ridiculous. But I fear it is our own Pride that suggests such contemptuous Thoughts of Strangers; I have seen a great deal of it, and have often thought of Locbart's Accusation in a Book that goes under the Name of his Memoirs; where he says ---- The English despise all Nations but their own, for which all the World hates them; or to that Purpose. But whether

whether his Observation be just or not, it is in the Breast of every one to determine for himself. For my own Part, ever fince I have known the Highlands, I never doubted but the Natives had their Share of natural Understanding, with the rest of Mankind.

NOTWITHSTANDING I have finished my Account of the Roads, which was all I at first intended; and although this Letter is almost grown into a Volume, yet, like other great Talkers, I cannot conclude it with Satisfaction to myself, till I have told my Tale quite out.

Fort Augustus at Killichumen is not only near the Middle of the Opening, of which I have said so much, but is likewise reckoned to be the most centrical Point of the habitable Part of the Highlands.

The old Barrack was built in the Year 1716; I need not tell you upon what Occasion. It stands upon a rifing Ground at about two or three hundred Yards Distance from the Head of Loch Ness, and the new Fort is just upon the Border of that Water. Before there was any great Progress made in building that Fortress, it was proposed to make a covered Way of Communication between both; and that it should be the principal Garrison of the Highlands, and the Residence of a Governor, who was likewife to command the other two in that Line, viz. Fort George at Inverness, and Fort William in Lochaber, which two last were to be under the Command of Lieutenant-Governors; this was the military Scheme. But besides, there was a civil Project on Foot, which was, to build a Town after the English Manner, and procure for it all the Privileges and Immunities of a royal Borough in Scotland.

THESE Advantages, it was faid, would invite Inhabitants to fettle there, not only from the Lowlands, but even from England, and make it the principal principal Mart of the Highlands, by which Means the Natives would be drawn thither as to the Center; and by accustoming themselves to Strangers, grow defirous of a more commodious Way of living than their own, and be enabled by Traffick to maintain it. And thus (it was faid) they would be weaned from their barbarous Customs. But furely this Scheme was as wild as the Highlanders, whom it was proposed to tame by it, yet it was entertained for fome Months with Fondness. But Anger blinds and deceives the Judgment by the promifed Sweets of Revenge, as Avarice does by the pleafing Thoughts of Gain, though unlawful. And I think I may premise to what I am about to say, that successful Revenge is wicked; but an impotent Desire of it is not only wicked, but ridiculous. you will fay I moralize, and you do not yet fee the Application, but you will hardly believe, that this Utopian Town had no other Foundation than a Pique against two or three of the Magistrates of Inverness; for whose Transgression their Town was to be humbled by this Contrivance.

I SHALL wave all Confiderations of the Intent to punish a whole Community upon a Prejudice taken against two or three of them; and only shew you how improbable the Success of such an Undertaking would have been. And if it had been likely, how distant the Prospect of the Pleasure proposed by it.

he

heir

of

C-

dito

ot

ve

he

fo

n-

s.

nds

ın-

nat

e a

h;

ho

nat

il-

der

vas vil

ter

riot-

n-

W-

the

pal

A Town of any Manner of Confideration would take up all, or most Part, of the Country (for so the Highlanders call every little arable Flat that lies between the Mountains) and the Place is not above five and twenty Miles (including the Lake) from Inverness, which is a Sea-port Town, and well situated for Improvement of foreign Trade, and home Manusactures. But the inner Parts of the Highlands will not admit even of Manusactories, for the Inhabitants bitants are few that can be spared from their Farms, which, though they are but small, are absolutely necessary to Life; and they are scattered among the Hills at great Distances, and the habitable Spaces are generally not large enough to contain any considerable Number of People, or the whole Country, within reach all round about, sufficient to surnish them with necessary Provisions. And lastly, Strangers will not be admitted among the Clans.

By the Way I have been told, the Welsh are not much less averse than the Highlanders to any Settlement of Strangers among them, though extremely hospitable to Visitants; and such as have some temporary Business to transact in their Country. But to return to my Purpose:

As to the Corn received by the Lairds from their Tenants, as Rent in Kind, and the Cattle, when marketable; the first has always been sold by Contract to Lowland-Merchants, and the Cattle are driven to such Fairs and Markets of the Low-Country as are nearest, or otherwise commodious or beneficial to the Drovers and their Employers. And therefore there is no Manner of Likelihood, that either the one or the other should be brought to any Highland Market.

I HAVE told you in a former Letter what Kinds and Quantities of Merchandise are usually brought by the Highlanders, to the Fairs at Inverness.

IT was a Supposition very extraordinary to suppose, that any Lowlanders who could subsist in another Place, would shut themselves up in such a Prison, without any reasonable Prospect of Advantage; and I verily believe there is not an Englishman, when he knew the Country, but would think of a Settlement there with more Horror than any Russian would do of Banishment to Siberia.

But lastly, if it were possible to suppose there were none of these Obstacles, how long a Time must

t

tl

g

ir

th

Si

er

fu

must have been required to people this new Colony, and to render it capable to rival an old established Town like Inverness? I need not recite the Proverb of the growing Grass; it is too obvious.

YET if the Inhabitants of the new Settlement proposed, could have lived upon Air, I verily believe they would have been fed with better Diet, than at Montpelier.

Thus am I providing Work for myself, but am not so sure it will be Entertainment to you; for now I have happened to speak of the Healthfulness of the Spot, I must tell you whereupon I found my Opinion.

ŧ

-

ıt

r

n

1-

e

1--5

d

at

O

ds

nt

p-

0-

a

n-

bnk

ny

re

ne

ıft

THE Officers and Soldiers garrifoned in that Barrack, for many Successions have found it to be so; and several of them who were fallen into a valetudinary State in other Parts, have there recover'd their Health in a short Time. Among other Instances, I shall give you only one, which I thought almost a Miracle.

A CERTAIN Officer of the Army, when in London, was advised by his Physicians to go into the Country for better Air, as you know is customary with them, when mere Shame deters them from taking further Fees; and likewise that the Patient may be hid under-ground, out of the Reach of all reflecting Observation, within the Circuit of their But the Corps he belonged to, being then quartered in the Highlands, he refolved by gentle Journeys to endeavour to reach it, but expected (as he told me) nothing but Death by the Way; however he came to that Place, one Evening, unknown to me, though I was then in the Barrack, and the next Morning early, I faw, upon the Parade, a Stranger, which is there an unufual He was in a deep Confumption, fadly emaciated, and, with Despair in his Countenance, furveying the Tops of the Mountains. I went to him, and after a few Words of Welcome, &c. his uppermost Thoughts became audible in a Moment. Lord! fays he, to what a Place am I come? There can nothing but Death be expected here! I own I had conceived a good Opinion of that Part of the Country, and therefore, as well as in common Complaifance, should, in Course, have given him fome Encouragement; but I do not know how it was. I happened at that Instant to be, as it were, inspired with a Confidence not ordinary with me, and told him peremptorily and positively the Country would cure him; and repeated it feveral Times, as if I knew it would be fo. How ready is Hope with her Affistance! Immediately I observed his Features to clear up, like the Day, when the Sun begins to peep over the Edge of a Cloud.

To be short, he mended daily in his Health, grew perfectly well in a little Time, obtained Leave to return to England, and soon after married a Woman with a confiderable Fortune.

I know fo well your Opinion of the Doctor's Skill, that if I should tell you, there was not a Physician in the Country, you would say, it was that very Want which made the Air so healthy, and was the Cause of that wonderful Cure.

This poor, but wholfome Spot, reminds me of a Quack that mounted a Stage in Westminster, but was there very unsuccessful in the Sale of his Packets: At the End of his Harangue he told his Mob-audience (among whom, being but a Boy, myself was one) that he should immediately truss up his Baggage and be gone, because he found they had no Occasion for Physick; for, says he, you live in an Air so healthy, that where one of you dies, there are twenty that run away.

But to proceed to a Conclusion, which I foresee is not far off.

b

a ta

M

th

ne

re

cl

th

C

na

ou

the

Ea

mu

Hi

in 1

a f

vex

fior

Sub

whi

tell

and

The

but a bla

upor

ther

the F

AT Fort William, which is not above three or four and twenty Miles Westward of Fort Augustus, I have heard the People talk as familiarly of a Shower (as they call it) of nine or ten Weeks, as they would do of any thing elfe that was not out of the ordinary Courfe; but the Clouds that are brought over Sea by the Westerly Winds are there attracted and broke by the exceeding high Mountains, and mostly exhausted before they reach the Middle of the Highlands at Fort Augustus; and nothing has been more common with us about Inverness, on the East Coast, than to ride or walk to recreate ourselves in Sun-shine, when we could clearly fee through the Opening, for Weeks together, the West Side of the Island involved in thick Clouds. This was often the Occasion of a goodnatured Triumph with us to observe what a Pickle our opposite Neighbours were in. But I am told the Difference, in that Particular, between the East and Western Part of England near the Coast is much the fame in Proportion to the Height of the Hills.

,

e

is

n

n, ed

ed

r's

ras

ıy,

fa

vas

ts:

idi-

was

ag-

no n an

are efee

AT

I HAVE but one Thing more to take Notice of in relation to the Spot of which I have been so long a speaking; and that is, I have been sometimes vexed with a little Plague (if I may use the Expression) but don't you think I am too grave upon the Subject; there are great Swarms of little Flies which the Natives call Malboulakins; Houlack, they tell me, signifies, in the Country Language a Fly, and Houlakin is the Diminutive of that Name. These are so very small, that separately, they are but just perceptible, and that is all, and being of a blackish Colour, when a Number of them settle upon the Skin, they make it look as if it was dirty; there they soon bore with their little Augers into the Pores, and change the Face from black to red.

THEY are only troublesome (I should say into-lerable) in Summer, when there is a profound Calm, for the least Breath of Wind immediately disperses them, and the only Refuge from them is the House, into which I never knew them to enter. Sometimes when I have been talking to any one, I have (though with the utmost Self-denial) endured their Stings to watch his Face, and see how long they would suffer him to be quiet, but in three or four Seconds he has slapped his Hand upon his Face, and in great Wrath cursed the little Vermin; but I have found the same Torment in some other Parts of the Highlands where Woods were at no great Distance.

HERE I might fay, if it did not fomething favour of a Pun, that I have related to you the most minute Circumstance of this long and streight Opening of the Mountains.

t

F

tl

W

in

ali

It

cal

the hav wit

the

Lat

thei

WOO

As my former Letters relating to this Country were the Effect of your Choice, I could then apologize for them with a tolerable good Grace, but now that I have obtruded myself upon you, without to much as asking your Consent, or giving you the least Notice, I have divested myself of that Advantage, and therefore I shall take the quite contrary Course, and boldly justify myself in what I have done.

You know there is no other Rule to judge of the Quality of many Things but by Comparison; and this being of that Nature, I do affirm with the last Confidence (for I have not been here so long for Nothing) that the following Subjects are inferior to mine either for Information or Entertainment viz.

Ist. The Genealogy of a particular Family, in which but very few others are interested. And, by the by, (for you know I am apt to digress) in must be great Good-nature and Christian Charit to suppose it impossible that any one of the auxiliary Sex should step out of the Way to the Aid of some other in the many Successions of five hundred Years; and if that should happen, I would know what Relation there then is between him that boasts of his Ancestry and the Founder of the Family; certainly none but the Estate, and if that, which is the main Prop, should fail, the high Family would soon tumble from its Eminence, but this is but very little of that just Ridicule that attends this kind of Vanity.

WE are told that none are Gentlemen among the Chinese but such as have rendered themselves worthy of the Title.

on,

[es

he

er.

ne,

red

ng

or ce,

but

arts

reat

out

g of

ntry olo-

now

it fo

1 the

Ad-

trary

have

of the

and ne last

ng for ferior

ment

ily, I

nd, b

ess) 1

adly. Tedious Collections of the Sentiments of great Numbers of Authors upon Subjects that, in all Likelihood, had never any Being—but this is a Parade of Reading.

3dly. TRIFLING Antiquities hunted out of their mouldy Recesses, which serve to no other Purpose but to expose the injudicious Searcher.

4thly. TIRESOME Criticisms upon a single Word, when it is not of the least Consequence whether there is, or ever was, any fuch Sound.

5thly. DISSERTATIONS upon Butterflies, which would take up almost as much Time in the Reading as the whole Life of that Infect; cum multis aliis.

This small Scrap of Latin has escaped me, and I think it is the only Air of Learning (as they call it) that I have given to any of my Letters from the Beginning to this Time, and even now I might have expressed the Sense of it in bomely English with as few Words, and a Sound as agreeable to the Ear. But some are as fond of larding with Latin as a French Cook is with Bacon, and each of them makes of his Performance a kind of Linseywoolsey Composition.

R

362 LETTER XXVI.

As this Letter is grown too bulky for the Post, it will come to your Hands by the Favour of a Gentleman, Major —, who is to set out for London tomorrow Morning, upon an Affair that requires his Expedition.

Î CAN justly recommend him to your Acquaintance, as I have already referred him to yours; and I do assure you, that, by his ingenious and chearful Conversation, he has not a little contributed, for a Twelve-month passed, to render my Exile more tolerable. It is true, I might have sent the Sheets in Parcels, but I have chosen rather to surprise you with them all at once, and I dare say, bating Accidents, you will have the last of them sooner by his Means, than by the ordinary Conveyance.

t - s - i - e e - i - a -